To do business without books is about as senseless as to navigate a ship without a chart. Yet there are men in business to-day who evidently do not think so. One has recently been discovered in an English grocer and provision dealer. And it was at a meeting of creditors that the revelation was made. He started into business two years ago with a capital of about $50 and no books. The only wonder is that under such circumstances, he kept his head above water so long. But the poor fellow was badly buffeted about by persistent creditors and numerous judgment summonses. He seems to have been honest, but he was never destined for business, and the creditors, in refusing to grant him a discharge, acted wisely. Men who do not think books a necessity in business court failure by becoming merchants; and when the inevitable happens it is only fair to the business community that they shall be prevented from repeating the experiment.

What is within a degree of being just as unbusinesslike as keeping no books at all, is not to make duplicate entries of customers' pass-books. Only a few weeks ago an instance was published in this journal of a customer that systematically rubbed out some of the entries in her pass-book, to what extent the grocer never knew, for the simple reason that he had no entries whereby he might make a comparison. Other instances are not wanting where storekeepers have trusted wholly to the honesty of their customers in this particular. It is all very well to account a man honest before he is found to be otherwise, but it is unwise to carry it so far in business as to allow credit customers to be their own bookkeepers.

Paper is being turned to many uses and many things into paper. The latest to be appropriated for the latter purpose is sugar cane. The fibres of the cane are said to give a paper of superior quality, and the mechanical manipulation is of the simplest. The best quality of the paper costs less than two cents a pound, and an authority estimates that as one ton of sugar cane will produce forty pounds of paper that a surplus value of about 80 cents per ton can be drawn from the sugar cane. The study of economical methods, so characteristic of the present day, is ever revealing means for the turning of waste into dollars and cents.

* * *

It is beginning to look as though caraway seed was going to follow in the wake of sugar and other markets that have an upward tendency. At any rate advices received from Amsterdam under date of April 29 indicate as much. The new crop is already in blossom, but it is only half the usual height of the plant, which is considered unfavorable to the further development. Present stocks are 20,000 bags, against 40,000 bags a year ago, while this year's crop is expected to be 35,000 bags, against 50,000 in 1892, or, an estimated decrease all round of 35,000 bags. The market is firm in consequence of these unfavorable conditions, and quotations for August and September are higher.

A pleasant demeanor is capital to a business man, and none realize it more than the live merchant. He may feel cross and disgruntled because of the many little annoyances that fall, more or less, to every business man's lot; he may take satisfaction out of his clerks or—his pipe; but the moment a customer enters his store the clouds vanish and he is all attention, with smiles and sunshine playing about his features, although within him may be the rumblings of a storm. There are many men possessing the qualifications of capital, experience and enterprise, who never make business anything more than an ordinary success at the best, because lacking in this particular. When customers enter a store, be they men, women or children, they expect to be waited upon pleasantly as well as promptly. And there is scarcely anything that jars on their feelings so much as to be disappointed in this respect. If it be a woman she stamps her pretty little foot and vows she will never enter Blank's store again. And when a woman says "she won't, she won't." If it be a man who has been offended he will probably say some strong things to his better half when he gets home and inform her that when she wants any more goods from Blank's she had better go for them herself. If he "rules his own household" he will not only refuse to go to Blank's himself but will, in all likelihood, abjure his wife from going there. A pleasant manner towards customers is a qualification that every merchant should demand of his clerks. Merchants and their clerks have no doubt a good deal to bother them. Here is a customer that will keep you trotting attendance and then not make a purchase. There is another who is always finding fault, and without apparent reason, while another persistently tries to beat down in price, telling you probably that it can be got for so much at your nearest competitor's. Under such and similar circumstances it is difficult to preserve the spirit of an angel or the patience of a Job, but that is what is demanded, nevertheless.

A bill to shorten the limit of time to ten years when action may be taken upon the covenant in a mortgage has been read a second time in the Ontario Legislature. The limit is now twenty years. And the promoters of the bill have no doubt been influenced by the experience of Toronto during the past year or two. To every mortgage there is a clause in which the maker covenants to see that the conditions there entered into are carried out. As everybody knows Toronto has during the last two or three years been reaping the whirlwind of a real estate boom. When the slump in values occurred many men found themselves burdened with property they could not realize upon, or for which, even did they find a purchaser, they could not get enough to retire the mortgage. Hundreds of them could not pay interest let alone principal. Then there was the consequent foreclosures. In many instances the land had passed through more or one hands since the mortgage was made. In such instances the mortgagee often looked to the original mortgagor for indemnity. If he failed to comply the land would be sold, usually at a sacrifice, and then a demand would be made upon the latter for the difference in the price obtained by the property at a forced sale and the amount of the mortgage, plus interest, costs, etc. In the event of non-compliance there was the inevitable writ. By this means numbers of men who thought themselves even wealthy suddenly found themselves penniless. Never dreaming in the boom-time, that there would be any difficulty, some speculators were on covenants for, in the aggregate, enormous sums. One well-known legal man was reputed to have his name to covenants to the extent of over a million dollars. But whatever the amount might have been he found it necessary to take a trip to England to get the necessary assistance to tide him over. In other instances, where the prospects were good, the banks came to the rescue by granting periods of extension spreading over one, two and three years. In the avalanche were swallowed up numbers of business men.

Then it was that the innocent-looking covenant clause, of whose existence some had forgotten and others considered old-fashioned and harmless was found to be a pretty effective weapon when mounted and put into operation. With this discovery came an agitation for an amendment to the law. Some went to the extreme of advocating the expurgation of the covenant clause. But no law could prevent two parties entering into an agreement, one of whom covenanted to pay the other for value received. Even, however, did it come within the province of the law capitalists would demand higher rates of interest to compensate them for the decreased security. Some of those who took the radical view boasted that they did not care even if the rate of interest was increased so long as they got the obnoxious covenant clause wiped out. Others again desired that the clause should remain as at present, but that its life should be limited from five to ten years. The men who took this view were usually of the more responsible class of citizens, and it is their views that have been crystallized into the bill now before the House. Ten years seems to be a reasonable limit to the life of a covenant, especially in view of the fact that a note is outlawed at the expiry of six years, and, as the Hon. Mr. Fraser, who at first strongly opposed the bill, is now in favor of it, there is a probability of its being adopted. It will, of course, not be retroactive, and those whose names are already on covenants will receive no benefit. It is future covenant makers that will reap the results of the present sowing.

All the honest men have not departed yet, and one of them was revealed the other day in the person of a Portsmouth (England) grocer. His name is Dexter. In 1876 he failed and his creditors accepted a compromise at 7s. 6d. on the pound. After this fortune smiled upon him, and the other day he paid up the balance, aggregating about $4,000. The departure was unique, and it was not to be wondered at that his former creditors should present him with a beautifully chased silver cruet as a token of their esteem.

"TREATING" CUSTOMERS.

Customs are ever changing. It is noticeable in the commercial as well as in the social world. In the one the process may be slower than in the other, but it is nevertheless going on with irresistible force. One instance will at the moment suffice. Not many years ago the idea was common that treating customers was part and parcel of a commercial traveller's duties. A glass of grog or a bottle of wine or beer was necessary to wash away obstacles that may have been in the way of securing an order. The greater the obstacle or the more porous the customer the greater was often the quantity of liquor consumed, and this usually had to be topped off with a choice Havana or two. Not unfrequently this would be the introduction to a drunken orgie, and sometimes a night of gambling. The condition of both seller and buyer the next morning to do business is obvious. The custom was even then looked upon as pernicious, but it was thought to be a necessary evil which, like a dose of bad medicine, had to be swallowed. But with the spread of the temperance sentiment came a movement to at least curtail the liberality of the traveller, and the result is a marked change compared with even ten years ago. True, the system still obtains, and, to a more or less extent, always will, but its excesses are by no means as frequent.

Houses to-day would not—in fact, they could not—countenance the excesses of the past. And for more reasons than one. Competition is keener, and, what always follows, profits smaller. To meet this falling off in the profits there must of necessity be a pruning of expenditure, and of the "mouldering branches" none are probably more accessible than that of treating customers. Then the country is overrun with an army of commercial travellers. They are usually the best men the respective houses can put on the road, and are well-trained, wide-awake, and pushing. In the face of this it stands to reason that every house demands sobriety and strict attention to business on the part of their travellers. If the first does not obtain, it is obvious that the second cannot. And it is plain that tarrying long at the wine cup with customers does not tend to cultivate either of these desirable qualities.

When the wholesale house is putting a price on goods a certain percentage has to be allowed for travellers' expenses. Although treating customers is being frowned down, yet the amount still spent in this way is, in the aggregate, large. It is obviously then in the interest of retailers themselves that the practice should become obsolete, for it is they after all who have got to pay the piper. In other words, the merchant who shares a bottle of wine or beer ostensibly at the traveller's expense is in reality paying for it himself. There are probably some merchants who will not agree with this. In fact we have in mind at the moment at least one country dealer whom we fancy will not. "Ain't you going to buy us a bottle of wine?" or, "Ain't you going to buy us a bottle of beer?" is the stereotyped query he keeps hung up for every drummer. And as he is a big buyer he invariably succeeds; but, of course he pays for it himself in the not drink help him and all who do to not drink help him and all who do to reimburse the house that provided the means for tickling his palate. Some may say that the wholesaler would reap all the benefits from a decrease in expenditure. But the keenness of competition may be trusted to prevent him from appropriating at least the whole of it. Aside, however, from this view of the matter, the practice of treating customers is unbusinesslike and pernicious in its results, and the sooner it becomes obsolete the better for all concerned.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

During the last few days I have had chats with drummers whose routes lie east, west, and north. They all tell me that the farmers are busy seeding, and that the country towns and villages are in consequence practically deserted, causing trade to be at the moment decidedly quiet. "But the crops, they are looking fine, and the prospects are good for the summer trade," was in effect what about the whole of them said to me.

"They are likely to have some fun over the compulsory early-closing by-law in North Bay," said a traveller the other day. "There is one firm there that runs a confectionery and ice cream business in connection with the grocery store. For some time it has closed up the grocery department early in the evening and has refused to sell to anyone. The confectionery, fruit and refreshment department was, however, kept open till a later hour. Now, the greater part of the latter business is done at night, and the firm in question consider it an injustice that it should be compelled to close at 7 p.m. So when the by-law came into force it decided to keep open, and keep open it did. A case in the police court was the result, but how it came out I have not yet heard."

"Say, you didn't get the sequel to that piano which you stated J. W. Borsberry, of Eby-Blaine's, had won in a prize-package of hair-crimpers," remarked a friend of his to me. "Well, when he went up to the office of the firm that offered the prize he found that the piano was one of those small pianos for children, and that he would have to pay $6 for a package to ship it in. The whole thing was a skin game, and Mr. Borsberry, of course, refused to take the thing, as it was probably just what was anticipated he would do. That gives one an idea of what these prize fakes are, and I think the sooner they are suppressed the better for the public," indignantly concluded my informant.

"Say, would it not be a good idea if the wholesale and retail trade of the city could be induced to go in for a joint picnic or excursion sometime during the summer," ventured a well-known grocer to me a few days ago. "I think it would. It would bring the two branches of trade into closer contact, would foster a better feeling, and would result in the removal of many of the existing little misunderstandings. Let us all shut up on a certain day and go to the States—No, by Jove, let's spend our money in Canada. We can have just as good a time here as across the line," he enthusiastically concluded, vigorously thumping his desk and jumping to his feet.

"Well, neither business nor money were so bad during the winter," said a prominent east end retailer to me the other day. "But I must say that things are not now so satisfactory in either respect. I have just now in my mind one of my customers, a mechanic. He did not do a stroke of work all winter, but notwithstanding this he paid cash for all his goods. As there is little or no work doing yet his surplus cash is running low, and he is in consequence getting behind in his account. That is I guess about the way with lots more, and may be fairly accredited the cause of the present scarcity of money."

"I shan't forget my first and only experience with soaked peas," said a retailer to me the other day. "I had placed an order for some canned peas, but when they arrived there was nothing on the labels to denote what the cans contained or whose pack they were, but accompanying the consignment was a bundle of labels on which were printed the words: 'Soaked Peas.' I had never heard of such a thing before. I was in a quandry. Just then a friend of mine—a commercial traveller, by the way—came in, and I told him about the matter. 'Why, man, dear,' he said, 'get them out of your store as fast as you can. If you are found with them in your possession you'll be fined.' And you can just bet I did get rid of them. I put them back in the cases and shipped them off to the packers, accompanied by a pretty strong letter, telling them to keep their representatives away from my store in the future. You can safely bet that I'll never get caught that way again."

BYSTANDER.

POISONED BY CANNED PEAS.

Dr. David Armstrong, a physician in the west end, thus writes the Toronto World:

"On March 5 three members of my family, including myself, were poisoned by eating canned peas. The fourth member disliked the taste and did not eat them, and escaped the consequences. The effect was very violent, but in my case was longer delayed, burning the coating of the right side of the stomach and producing spasmodic pains, which felt as if the stomach was distended on the points of a hundred knives, and each knife red hot. For three weeks any kind of solid food would produce the spasmodic pains, compelling me to diet on milk, beef tea and grapes. Enquiring among my patients and others I find that poisoning from canned peas is more common than from other kinds of canned goods.

"A College street grocer tells me that a family, his customers, in the North end, was poisoned by canned tomatoes, put up by the same company whose peas poisoned my family, and since then he does not sell them. A Yonge street grocer told me that the poison is mostly from the acid used in soldering the can, and that some firms put a label on the can, saying, 'This can is not soldered with acid.'

"I went to the plumber's and ascertained that the cans are soldered by a powerful poison—muriatic acid saturated with dissolved zinc, one drop of which they consider deadly in the stomach. The cans could be soldered, as tin has always been done, by use of resin, but the acid is quicker and saves a trifle in making the cans at the risk of poisoning the customers of the goods.

"I have no doubt that in hundreds of cases of stomach and abdominal pains from this source neither doctor nor patient guesses the cause.

It should be stopped. Let something be done to protect the public. Raise the price but give us a pure and safe article. Let some enterprising firm put up their goods in glass bottles, which will command a big price in Toronto, one-third of whose citizens never use the tin-canned goods through fear of getting poisoned. The Legislature should certainly take protective measures."

In case of the appearance of cholera, it is understood that sugars shipped from Europe to the United States are to be inspected and a certificate of their clean condition is to be issued by the medical inspector attached to the consul's office. In case of absence of suspicious sickness on the vessel during the voyage the sugars can be discharged in the usual way, without unusual detention in quarantine.

STRAIGHT MOYUNE'S IDENTITY.

DEAR GROCER,—At last we have the key which unlocks "Straight Moyune's" identity. It is not necessary for him to recant from his original intentions concerning the invitation for me to call upon him: I could not spare one moment out of the twenty-four hours" allotted to me to talk politics, combines, etc. Most of the "boys" know the vicinity, much better than I do, even Montreal is not ignorant nor unacquainted, and occasionally a special trip is made from there here, to be present at a private tea contest. The affinity between the letter "How to purchase tea," and "Straight Moyune's" opinion of it, and subsequent dissertations is so glaringly perceptible one can almost imagine they were twins. We are anxiously waiting further contributions promised from the same pens, particularly so, as it is openly reported on street that both parties are in joint partnership in a new book brought out especially from England, giving much information about tea, its growth, number of acres under cultivation, amount of pounds shipped annually, marks and names used in packing and shipping teas, etc., all of which is to be dished out to us piecemeal in THE GROCER. I hope the author will not be forgotten and given credit for his work, and that "Straight Moyune's" criticism of it will be "modest and unprejudiced." Yours, etc.,

A CITY TRAVELLER.

("A City Traveller" is on the wrong scent. "Straight Moyune" and the writer of the article on "How to Purchase Tea" are separate and distinct individuals.—Ed. GROCER.)

RE BUYING TEA.

DEAR GROCER,—Pardon me for again intruding on your valuable space. How a stray shot will sometimes bring down the game! Your aspiring retail critic I see got hurt; I hope not badly. The majority of us retail grocers haven't need of much education to sell sugar and canned goods at cost; we require a little more though than ordinary education to know how to buy tea if we must believe what some people tell us. In answer to "D. S. Macorquodale's Rejoinder" I may say I understood his letter to refer to the retail trade generally, and not especially to his customers. However, his "rejoinder" explains his difficulty and I forgive him, as he says he did not mean to include me in his category. When I want to purchase tea I am not prejudiced in favor of the highest price quoted; I try to use my judgment, and buy tea on its merits, and not on the price asked for it. The idea is too ridiculous. I have had too much experience in the tea business to allow myself to judge tea on the price asked for it. Go back a few months and see what fabulous prices were paid for Ceylon tea at auction in London, Eng. Is there a sane person living today who can tell us that Ceylon tea as a commodity is worth over one hundred dollars a pound wholesale? Why, the thing is absurd. And are there not many teas being offered at the present time in Toronto not worth the money asked for them in comparison to others of the same grade? I heard of a case only last week at one of the best retail houses in this city, where the retailer was sampling fine Darjeeling teas. He had a number of samples from different wholesale houses ranging from 35 to 63c. per lb. shown to him, and on liquoring them he found only two samples in the draw worth buying; one was at 52c. per lb., the other, the best tea in the crowd, and all that was asked for it was 45c. This sample was acknowledged by some of the competitors to be the best tea in the crowd. How is this for our friend? Something similar to this has often happened in my experience, except sometimes an excuse has cropped up, and I have not got the tea selected. It is quite true that our friend is not personally acquainted with me; at the same time I know him, like most of the city travellers, by reputation, and if he knew me better he would know that I do not do my business by proxy, nor do I sell my name for trash! And I am not an isolated being without friends and business acquaintances with whom I can sometimes meet and discuss matters pertaining to our general welfare, and counsel together on business relations. Whatever other retailers may do, this I do: When I want a 16c. Congou I ask for it, and I would be surprised at a salesman showing me a tea for which he asked 25c. a pound if I ask for one at 16c. I should quite likely take him for a fool, or perhaps think he took me for one.

Yours, etc., W.F.P.

THE TEA DISTRICTS IN INDIA.

DEAR GROCER,—According to promise I give you the first of a series of short letters regarding Indian and Ceylon tea, and, for the assurance of your readers, I may say that I am partly indebted to Edward Money's prize essay on tea, also to Thacker, Spink & Co.'s Indian and Ceylon trade marks in tea, coffee, silk lac, chinchona, etc., to date. The districts in India where tea is grown to any considerable extent are, in the order of their acreage, Assam, Cachar, Sylhet, Darjeeling, Dooars, Madras, Dhera Doon, Chittagong, Chota Nagpur, Kangra, Kumaon.

Assam has much the largest acreage under tea, with Kumaon bringing up the rear. I find the total acreage surprisingly small. No doubt there are many tea gardens devoted to home consumption whose area is not known, but what estates are registered and have agents in Calcutta, Madras, or London, comprise only 330,538 acres, about 513 square miles, or less than the county of York. The smallness of the area is not more surprising than the largeness of the yield. This small area will export about 110,000,000 lbs., or about 55,000 tons of tea, exclusive of what will go to the interior, and through Cashmere to Persia, and Russian-Turkestan. This should furnish a lesson on agricultural economy to our land-poor American farmers, such as could not be expressed in words.

It is probably not news to say that Indian tea (called Assam) began to be introduced in this country about 1865. Tea was not first grown in Assam, but in Dhera Doon, a district lying between the head waters of the Ganges on the east and the Jumna on the west, and south of the native state of Garwal. Tea from Dhera Doon is always inferior. Probably the great desert of Thar to the west with its rainless belt has some effect on the climate of Dhera. Madras is probably the newest district to grow tea. Here, while the elevation is not sufficient for the finest flavors, yet it would be an excellent tea country but for the cost of transportation. This will in a few years be overcome, with the result that land will rise in price and leave the tea planter with little profit save what he can squeeze out of the native worker on a wage of 2 annas (about four cents) per day, showing that the hand of the land grabber and the trail of the serpent is over us all. While the Kangra valley grows tea where the snow lies in the winter, in latitude 32 north, Madras, in latitude 10 north, or about 1,600 miles further south as the crow flies, yields the same plant where snow would be looked on with the same curiosity as a palm tree might be looked on in Greenland. Chittagong, on the west coast of Burma, is as far removed from Madras as is Madras from Kangra.

The tea flavors of the several districts are as widely different as the districts are geographically apart. Yet it is not safe to conclude that because if tea comes from a district noted for fine flavors that therefore that particular sample is good tea.

Assam, Cachar, and part of Sylhet are under such similar conditions in relation to latitude and rain-fall as to render the samples of each difficult to distinguish, while Darjeelings, Kumaon and Dooars are readily distinguished, yet a tea may come from Darjeeling or Chittagong, where fine flavor is to be expected, and yet lack it sadly. I have been asked: "Where can we get a book that will teach us how to sample and distinguish one kind of tea from another, and also tell how to blend?" My reply is that the only teacher is long practice. It would be as reasonable to try to find a book that would tell you when pie or hash tasted right, as to look for an arbitrary rule in the blending of teas. In my next letter I hope to deal further with this aspect of the tea question.

Yours, etc.,

D. S. MACORQUODALE.

SENSIBLE GAME COMMISSIONERS.

This year the game and fish commissioners want $10,000 to enable them to carry on their work. In their report, which was presented to the House Friday, they make the following suggestions for amendments to the law: The clause prohibiting the killing and sale of fawns should be struck out, because when taking long or snap-shots sportsmen cannot distinguish between a fawn doe or young buck; the law should provide that wood-hares may be killed at sight if found damaging fruit trees or other property; trapping of musk rats might be permitted during April; a bounty of $1 per head should be paid for the destruction of full-grown foxes, and fifty cents per head for young ones; the clause of the Game Act providing that no person shall take or kill more than one hundred ducks in a season should be repealed, for the reason that it cannot be enforced; the commissioners should control the issue of permits for the killing of insectivorous birds and collections of eggs for scientific purposes; the game and fishery laws should be consolidated; masked hunters should be prohibited; foreign sportsmen should be required to take out a license, no matter for what they desire to hunt, and wardens should not be allowed to issue permits.

THE SALT TRADE.

The demand for salt usually shows some improvement at this time of the year, and although the present season is a little backward, orders are coming in in fair volume. The trade has undergone some change, however, in recent years. Formerly the demand went by seasons; that is, the farmers would come in and buy a six-months' supply, but now they purchase in small lots, and the sales are distributed throughout the year. The demand thus far is equal to last season's, although it should be remarked that the average last year was not a large one. There is plenty of salt on hand for the demand, and there is likely to be no shortage of any kind. Prices are steady as a general rule, although in dull times some concessions have been granted.

The fishing season has commenced, and with it comes the demand for fishing salt. At this time of the year Gloucester, New Bedford, and the other ports engaged in fish catching fit out fleets of vessels to fish at the Grand Banks, and in curing the fish a certain kind of salt is usually employed called Trapani salt. The first cargo of this salt since last year arrived at this port a few days ago, and will be followed by others.

This season, the prospects are, that as many vessels will go out as last year, when the number was not large. Last year the fish commanded a fair price, but the fishermen did not get the fish; and the year before the catch was not only small but the prices were low. It only needs another good catch to stimulate interest in this industry. When large catches can again be made more vessels will be fitted out, and, of course, more salt will be consumed. At present Trapani salt is selling for about $1.62 1-2.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

SHORT BUSINESS POINTERS.

The best credit is no credit. But when you cannot do a strictly cash business, truthfulness is next to cash. Ability and integrity are corner stones. Laying ever so deftly is no sign of enterprise.

Watch the market and all its changes as the seasons go by, and try to be first in the introduction of new goods that promise well.

Build up your paying and payment trade by selling such goods as reasonable as you can afford. Then your patrons will tell their neighbors and friends.

Do children readily recognize you as one who is interested in them, and will they remember you as one who has treated them kindly? Such are good advertisers. Can't promise profits on the other treatment.

It is nice to have credit at the bank, to be able to get your note discounted any time, but far better is discounting your bills for net cash, even though they be not so large.

Be courteous, there's wealth and comfort in it. Be natural but be courteous, even to parting with an impudent employee as though he were a gentleman.

Steady advertising in reliable channels has the test of the best and the longest experience to back it.

ABOUT PEARS.

It is remarkable, says an agricultural paper, that, although new fruits come to the front every year, there is not a pear yet that has been able to take the place of the Bartlett or the Seckel. The Bartlett is a European sort, originating in England, and named there William's Bon Curetien. It was introduced into this country, and its name getting lost, it was named Bartlett, after the men in whose garden it was when its excellent qualities were discovered.

The Seckel is a native, a chance seedling, found growing near the Schuylkill River, Philadelphia, and the original tree still stands and bears fruit. The Bartlett is in season throughout September, the Seckel from the close of September and through October. These two kinds are no exception to the rule that the quality of all pears increases in value as the trees get older. The fruit from a full-grown Seckel pear tree, for instance, is far superior to that of a tree fruiting for the first time.

THE MOLASSES SUGAR INDUSTRY.

The Boston Commercial Bulletin draws attention to the decay of the molasses sugar industry since the enactment of the Tariff Act of 1890. Since that time it has been a losing business to American refiners, and they are giving it up. The industry was not many years ago in a flourishing condition. Millions of gallons of boiling molasses were imported from the West Indies, especially Cuba, and turned into sugar. At times, when centrifugals and muscovados were high, refiners saw it to their advantage to buy these molasses sugars. For opportunities 1892 was a better one than the previous year, as the cholera in Europe kept out beet sugars for quite a while and prices on all kinds of sugar advanced. The refiners, however, operating as a unit under a Trust have had raw sugar matters so much their own way of late that they did not become at all apprehensive, and their hold-off policy spoiled what opportunities the cholera scare afforded, so that on the whole the refiners of molasses sugar were very little benefited, if any. The year 1893 is apt to see a much different state of affairs from '92 and '91. Now there are six refiners in Cuba to use the molasses at home; then there were but one or two small houses that did not amount to much. That these plants should be transferred from our soil to Cuba was inevitable and refiners realized it; hence they lost little time in making the change. It took almost two years to build these refineries, which was one reason why those here were continued in operation in the past two seasons. The situation to-day is that Cuba has sugar refineries for using boiling molasses, some of which are very large. Two are situated at Havana, two at Matanzas, one at Cardenas, and one at Sagua. Of our refineries there are seven or eight: three at Philadelphia, one in Brooklyn, two or three in New York, and one in Boston.

HAVE YOU A BANK ACCOUNT?

Some excellent advice was given to grocers in an address recently delivered before the Grand Rapids Retail Grocers' Association by a cashier of a bank in that city. He said—we quote from the report in The Michigan Tradesman—"Right here I would urge every grocer who has not a bank account to open one at once, and to pay all bills by check, and not with money from the till, as not only is that no way to build up your credit with the commercial world, for they look upon you as small potatoes, but neither can you expect to have credit with the banks by doing business that way, as they have no means of finding out about you, besides a check, when properly endorsed, is in itself a receipt of the amount paid, which sometimes is very convenient when a bill is presented the second time for payment."

A DROP IN MATCHES.

Competition in the match trade of Canada has been pretty brisk of late, and the E. B. Eddy Co., of Hull, Que., have added new interest to it by announcing a substantial reduction in price and an important change in the matter of deliveries.

In "Telegraph," "Telephone" and "Tiger" a reduction of 20 a case is ordered, usual discounts and terms. But the most important change of all is the announcement that the firm will pay freight on five case lots of their own make, where heretofore the privilege was only accorded purchasers of 25 case lots. Carnivals, Dominions and Stars will be sold to meet any and all competition. Circulars will be in the hands of the trade in a few days. Further particulars can be obtained from Thomas A. Weldon, manager of the Toronto branch, 29 Front street west.

OHIO WHOLESALE GROCERS.

The Ohio Wholesale Grocers' Association held its annual meeting at Columbus on the 9th inst., with about one hundred members in attendance. The report of the secretary showed that twenty-seven jobbers in the state, who are not members of the association, have fallen into line and are selling sugar on the equality plan. A resolution was adopted to have the chair appoint a grievance committee to secure promises from manufacturers not to sell to retailers. Another resolution protesting against manufacturers paying commission to salesmen of wholesale houses for "pushing" their products was adopted. A long conference was held with the tobacco men, but no decision was reached, the association desiring the manufacturers to establish the equality plan so successfully applied to sugar. These officers were elected: President, James Ulrick, of Columbus; vice-presidents, H. H. Eavey, of Xenia, and H. T. Sinclair, of Toledo; treasurer, Samuel Stevens, of Columbus. Executive Committee—H. A. Bishop, of Cleveland; Robert J. Smith, of Cincinnati; Charles C. Higgins, A. S. Hammond and E. E. Shedd, of Columbus.

CALIFORNIA RAISINS.

There is a striking similarity between the present attitude of jobbers regarding California raisins and the position they assumed a year ago. With very few exceptions, the tendency then was to carry as little stock as possible, and the same policy is popular at the present time. Last year there was a quite liberal stock on the Pacific Coast, and more than enough to go round in Western distributive markets, while New York and other Eastern points struggled under quite a heavy load. But the goods eventually passed into consumption, and the season of 1892 opened with comparatively light stock of old raisins on hand. All advices are to the effect that the stock on the Coast is very small at the present time. From Western markets it is reported that the stock there is far below the quantity usually carried at this season of the year. The East has the bulk of supply, yet, according to well informed authorities, a smaller quantity than was distributed in June and July last year. It is figured out to the satisfaction of some firms that not over 150 carloads remain in commission merchants' and jobbers' hands in territory east of the Allegheny Mountains.—N. Y. Bulletin.

SMOKING HER OUT.

A company of Harvard students were starting for Springfield to the football grounds last fall, and meant to have a car to themselves. At the last moment, however, just as the train was starting, in hastened an old woman.

One of the young fellows, thinking to get rid of her easily, remarked:

"My good woman, this is a smoking car, don't you know?"

"Well, well," answered the old woman; "never mind, I'll make it do," and she took a seat.

As the train started, the word was passed around, "Smoke her out." All the windows were closed accordingly, and every student produced a pipe, and soon the car was filled with a dense cloud of tobacco smoke. So foul became the air that at last one of the boys began to feel sick. As he took his pipe from his mouth and settled back into his seat, the old woman leaned toward him.

"If ye are done, sir," she said, in a wheedling tone, "would ye kindly give me a draw? I came away in such haste I forgot mine." —Quipps.

VEGETABLE FOODS.

George W. Johnson, in his Chemistry of the World, says, in describing the "Vegetable Food of the World": "The grateful acid of the rhubarb leaf arises from the malic acid and binoxalate of potash which it contains; the acidity of the lemon, orange, and other species of the genus Citrus is caused by the abundance of citric acid which their juice contains; that of the cherry, plum, apple, and pear from the malic acid in their pulp; that of gooseberries and currants, black, red and white, from a mixture of malic and citric acids; that of the mango from citric acid and a very fugitive essential oil; that of the tamarind from a mixture of citric, malic, and tartaric acids; the flavor of asparagus from aspartic acid, found also in the root of the marshmallow; and that of the cucumber from a peculiar poisonous ingredient called fungin, which is found in all fungi, and is the cause of the cucumber being offensive to some stomachs. It will be observed that rhubarb is the only fruit which contains binoxalate of potash in conjunction with an acid. It is this ingredient which renders this fruit so wholesome at the early commencement of the summer; this is one of the wise provisions of nature for supplying a blood purifier at a time when it is likely to be most needed. Beetroot owes its nutritious quality to about 9 per cent. of sugar which it contains, and its flavor to a peculiar substance containing nitrogen mixed with peptic acid. The carrot owes its fattening powers also to sugar, and its flavor to a peculiar fatty oil; the horse-radish derives its flavor and blistering power from a volatile acrid oil. The Jerusalem artichoke contains fourteen and a half per cent. of sugar and three per cent. of inulin (a variety of starch), besides gum and a peculiar substance to which its flavor is owing; and, lastly, garlic, and the rest of the onion family derive their peculiar odor from a yellowish volatile acrid oil, but they are nutritious from containing nearly half their weight of gummy and glutinous substances not yet clearly defined."

COURTESY PAYS.

A prominent city retailer recently desired some concert programmes printed within twenty-four hours. He was recommended to a well known firm of printers, who were to him strangers. He not only was received courteously, but was aided in the arrangement of his matter and made to feel as if the printers were under obligations to him. The man was so much pleased with the manner of his reception and the readiness to meet his wishes, that he publicly acknowledged his indebtedness before a large audience and gave the printers further large additional orders. Courtesy made a paying customer in that instance.

Mr. D— is a retail grocer in ——. One rainy day a strange woman entered his store and asked to be directed to the residence of Mr. B—. It was raining hard, and the grocer said: "Madam, my wagon is under the shed, and if you will ride in it, I will send one of the clerks to take you where you desire to go." The offer was accepted, and nothing further heard of the affair until a few days later, the wife of Mr. B. entered and said: "You were so kind and courteous the other day to my friend, to you a stranger, that my husband says he would be pleased to give you his patronage," and he did. Another instance where courtesy made a paying customer.

Courtesy costs nothing. Its exercise enriches whoever makes it a part of his daily life. Aside from its power to help a man along in trade, it is always a sign of the true gentleman and everyone can be that, regardless of his station in life. —American Grocer.

No young man can possibly have mistaken his calling who finds in it what the world wants done.

Competition is keen and active and the only way to meet it successfully is to buy from the best houses, and at lowest prices.

DIAMOND CRYSTAL SALT

❖ THE process by which this Salt is made is different from any other one of the kind in existence. That PERFECTION in the manufacture of such a variable article as Salt should be attained at once was not to be expected, and while the remarkable purity of Diamond Crystal Salt was generally conceded very soon after it was placed on the market, still the manufacturers were obliged to admit that at first it was not in every respect a perfect BUTTER Salt. Although much thought was spent and many experiments made, it was not until after FOUR YEARS of such effort that the trouble was discovered and the defects entirely remedied.

In spite of its defects, however, many dealers in butter, especially those who stored their goods for several months, insisted that this Salt should be used, since they had learned by repeated tests that it was the best Salt they could find for preserving butter and holding its flavor. To their first success—Purity—they have added a second by securing all the conditions essential in a Salt to be used for producing the Highest Grade of Butter.

SUMACH.

The best kind of sumach which occur in commerce and are used for tanning and dyeing come from Sicily. It has recently been shown that the amount of tannin contained in the leaves is different at different stages of growth, and is greatest when the leaves have just reached their fullest development. The color imparted to the leather also depends upon the stage at which the sumach is collected. For example, if it is gathered too late it imparts a yellow color, which is due to quercetin present in the wood as well as in the root-bark of the shrub. It is not always possible to judge from the color of the sumach itself what color it will impart to the leather tanned by it. Thus a green color which is exhibited by dry sumach arises from the chlorophyll present in the leaves; this is quite insoluble in water and therefore cannot dye the leather. Young leaves especially show the green color, whereas leaves which are ripe or over-ripe contain yellowish or brownish coloring matters. These latter also occur in the young leaves if they are exposed in a moist state to bright sunshine; or if they are stored in a moist state, in which case fermentation sets in. The color of sumach and the proportion of tannin contained are affected by admixture with foreign substances, which are either added intentionally or are introduced by careless treatment. Of all the kinds of sumach found in commerce, only the Sicilian undergoes a proper and suitable treatment, the natural result being that it is more highly valued than any other.

At a meeting of the Toronto Pedlars' Protective Association Monday night it was decided to go to the Supreme Court against the decision of the Court of Appeal, in which the by-law against the pedlars was upheld.

WHY NOT REGULAR SALES ?

The sales of Mediterranean fruit which have been held at Montreal recently demonstrated plainly that the St. Lawrence route is quite favorable to this trade, and that there is no reason why, if proper steamship and railway facilities are afforded, it should not be carried on regularly throughout the entire season similar to the sales that are held at Boston, New York and Baltimore. That the trade can be made to pay is plain from the fact that the sales this year have realized prices fully equal to those made on the American markets. Those of last year were if anything higher, and the same would no doubt have been the case this spring but for the entirely unusual delay which the steamers experienced owing to the ice at Quebec. There is no possibility of any such delay now, however, and it seems curious that our fruit, railway and steamship men cannot devise some means whereby Montreal will be enabled to reap some of the rich toll which this trade now pays into the coffers of the American ports further south. If the railway and steamship men only have the enterprise to offer sufficiently enticing through rates from points of growth to the western and north-western states our importers can easily compete successfully for some of the enormous business now done in this line via American centres. When the fact is known that the monthly receipts of fruit at Boston and New York aggregate 100,000 to 300,000 boxes per month it is easy to see how valuable if only a portion of this trade could be diverted to our Canadian port. If Montreal is placed on the same terms as regards rates of freight as Boston or New York the advantages of the cooler northern route will be sure to tell in her favor. It remains for the steamship companies to show whether they have sufficient enterprise to reach out for this business.

SHIPPING UNCURED CHEESE.

According to reports some of the factorymen west of Toronto are doing the very worst thing possible for the good of their districts as cheese producing centres. It is alleged that cheese not three days old has been shipped from the Ingersoll district, and sufficient is known to prove that the allegation is a fact. Now, these shipments cannot be anything else than curd, for if in the usual course of events it takes more than a fortnight to cure good gross stock it will surely take more than that a cure a cheese made from flat lean fodder milk. The factorymen, therefore, have no excuse at all. They may claim that the price was bid and that they would be fools not to sell, but this is a cynical way to look at the matter, and bound to react upon themselves. It is more than likely that the generous buyers who paid them figures away up for unmarketable cheese had some ulterior motive for their course, the effect of which, if their schemes work out, will mean that the very factorymen who got the high figures will be made to pay for it later on in the season on cheese that is really worth more money. Besides, when these curd cheese are sold in England as Ingersoll what will the Britishers think of the banner district of Canada as a cheese centre? No, it is a foolish policy whatever way one looks at it, and the factoryman is more to blame than the buyer for the reason that such a course leans to the suicidal in his case.

WHERE THEY GET THEIR POTATOES

The first new potatoes of the season received in the New York market came from Bermuda about the first of April, and as the season advances the market is supplied from Florida, Savannah, Charleston, North Carolina, Norfolk, Eastern shore, Long Island, Jersey, New York State and the West, mainly Michigan and Wisconsin; and when the state and western yield is light, as for instance last year, large quantities are drawn from Europe. The crop of old potatoes was not only light last year, but quality was poor, and the severe winter caused large quantities to be frozen, many only slightly, which were worked into consumption. This was particularly the case with foreign potatoes, and, as the local trade had been supplied largely with them consumers have had to put up with inferior potatoes for some time, and new potatoes were never more welcome than this year. The arrivals so far have been moderate and mainly from Bermuda, but last Monday, with over 2,000 barrels from Florida, Charleston and Savannah, and nearly 2,200 barrels from Bermuda, the season may be said to have fairly opened, and with arrivals increasing every week as stock gradually matures from nearer points, it will only be a short time when the old potatoes will have to give way to the newer and better stock. Advices from nearly all southern points report the acreage about the same as last season or a trifle larger. In North Carolina the yield is usually very large, but last season the market here was glutted, owing in a great measure to growers all sending in their potatoes about the same time, and shippers lost heavily, many receiving nothing for their crop, the result being that most of the small growers were wiped out or ruined, and unable to plant this season, which it was thought would make a light crop this year; but the larger growers have taken advantage of this and have planted increased quantities, bringing the acreage fully up to last year, and some estimate the yield will be larger. Most people, other than those directly interested consider potatoes a comparatively safe article to raise, and in this state and the westerly sections, where they are allowed to thoroughly mature and ripen, and are afterwards properly taken care of, they can be carried for a favorable market, but the way the southern business is carried on makes it different. Just as soon as the potato reaches a size sufficient in the grower's mind to market, they are hastily dug and shipped to market so green that they are even more perishable than many other vegetables which arrive from the south, and not only require immediate sale, but often commence to deteriorate while in transit, as growers know they have only so many days before a nearer point will commence shipping, and consequently the market suffers serious breaks at times early in the season, as a comparatively small quantity above buyers' wants will often cause a serious decline. Last season North Carolina was the unfortunate State to get caught in the glut, when thousands of barrels sold down in the neighborhood of $1 per barrel. As previously stated, new Bermuda commenced to arrive about April 1st, and about May 1st Florida appear, followed in about ten days by Savannah and Charleston, and ten days later, or about May 20th, first North Carolina are in market, followed by Virginia in about three weeks. Long Island and Jersey do not arrive until about the first of July, then southern have to give way, and near-by stock supplies the market until about September 1st, when stock arrives from points up the Hudson river and the interior of the State, and later from the west and Europe. Potatoes planted in this state and west are not growing well at present; advices from nearly all sections report the stock sown showing rot; but it is too early as yet to give any idea of the future outlook of the yield in these sections, although considering the short crop last season, and comparing with previous years, the coming yield will probably be sufficient, which would prevent any important importations from Europe next fall. A few are still being received from there, but the season is practically over, and we give the total quantity since the first of last October to date as follows: Great Britain, 658,600 sacks; continent, 146,360 sacks; in all 804,960 sacks.—N. Y. Bulletin.

A Yorkshire grocer two years ago took over his stepmother's business and her liabilities. He was unable to collect accounts owing her, and now he is in the bankruptcy court.

England is threatened with an invasion of "vegetable butter" made from cocoanuts at Amsterdam. This would be a business-like way of accounting for the milk in the cocoanut.

A bright and pushing young man named Herbert Stuckey is starting a grocery store at Grand Valley. He will make a specialty of fancy groceries, and prospects are that he will do well.

There are 7,783 drinking places in New York. They are for the most part Democratic campaign bureaus, open 365 days in the year, and averaging nearly 24 hours a day of active business.

Halifax Critic says that the building at Aylesford Station, used as a canning factory, is to undergo extensive repairs. The building will be raised three feet. An addition, 36 x 52, will be built, with a frost-proof cellar underneath.

A Chicago retail grocery firm estimates that the fellow who comes in and sociably helps himself to a piece of cheese or a bit of candy and sometimes nibbles away until he has had a substantial lunch, costs them about a thousand dollars a year.

The Bank of Montreal statement for the year ending April 30th was issued Friday. The profits for the year ending April 30, 1893, after deducting charges of management, and making full provision for all bad and doubtful debts, was $1,325,810, or $77 less than the profits of the previous year.

There is a contest in prices between brewers of Toronto and outside brewers. The Toronto men by a combine have kept the price for a dozen of bottled ale up to 90 cents, but have sold cheaper after paying freight in distant parts of the province. The country brewers are retaliating on some of them by underselling Toronto brewers in the city.

Pending the action of the International Commission on the question of destructive methods of fishing, the fishery regulations adopted by order in council of March of last year, relative to the setting of mackerel nets, have been suspended on the whole Atlantic coast from Cape St. Lawrence to the boundary line between New Brunswick and the State of Maine.

W. G. Walton left Hamilton Saturday for England. He intends visiting Denmark to acquire further information on the subject of butter making, and intends to bring back with him 150 head of Jersey cattle for breeding purposes. Twenty-five of these he will keep himself, and the others will be distributed amongst Ontario creamery men. It is probable also that Mr. Walton may purchase a steamboat whilst in the Old Country for summer traffic on the lake.

Advices from Cuba announce great depression and distress in the island owing to the heavy deficit in the sugar crop; Dalziel, telegraphing later, says that the reports regarding the Cuban sugar crop are very conflicting. It is practically conceded that there will be a heavy shortage this year, but the leading authorities are apparently unable to arrive at an agreement on the amount. The receipts are beginning to decrease.

"Notes for Cheesemakers for May," is the title of a bulletin just issued by Prof. Robertson, Dominion dairy commissioner. It contains an excellent treatise on spring dairying, and concludes with the advice to every cheesemaker in the country to brand or stamp the word "Canadian" in large plain letters, surrounded by a stencil border of maple leaves. The bulletin contains also a reprint of the Act passed last session "To prevent the manufacture and sale of filled or imitation cheese and to provide for the branding of dairy products."

Potatoes that were taken from the earth in the autumn of 1891 have just been exhibited to the members of the French Agricultural Society. They are as good as when they were first dug up, having lost none of their freshness and all their nourishing qualities being perfectly preserved. The method of their preservation consists in steeping them in water which contains from 1.5 to 2 per cent. of commercial sulphuric acid. It is the invention of the agricultural chemist, M. Schribaux.

It is common, especially at teas, to serve lemon in slices for those who wish it, and it is well known that the lemon with tea is the usage throughout Europe, and especially in Russia, the great tea-drinking country. Of course milk and lemon are not used together. To those who have been accustomed to taking milk with their tea the change is not often a success. The probable cause is that the slice of lemon is served too thick, whereas the slightest shaving of peel and pulp is sufficient for an ordinary cup. Just enough should be used to correct the flavor and not enough to injure the taste.

English grocers are experiencing a good deal of difficulty with co-operative stores. This movement, which began a great many years ago, has now reached very considerable proportions, and it is, therefore, worthy of careful study on the part, not only of those traders whom it is intended that the stores should displace, but also of the public, remarks a local paper. In considering the question, it is well that a broad distinction should be drawn between this movement generally and a few large stores in the west end of London, which are frequented either by rich people who have a passion for small economies, or by those in society who are not particularly well off, and who desire to make money go as far as they can.

Dairying operations are evidently booming in the Maritime Provinces. To-day Prof. Robertson, dairy commissioner, wired the Department of Agriculture that 23 cheese factories and creameries will be in operation in New Brunswick this season, and 12 in Prince Edward Island. This is an unprecedented increase over last year, as on the Island only one factory was in operation. So keen is the desire of the Maritime Province farmers to receive instructions in the best methods of making cheese and butter that the professor is in need of more assistants, and competent cheese and butter makers in Ontario and Quebec, who would like to spend the summer down by the sea can obtain good situations by applying to Prof. Robertson, at the Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

BATTY'S PICKLES AND SAUCES.

During the past week a number of spring shipments of Batty & Co.'s pickles, sauces, etc., have arrived on this market from London. The pickles are now put up in a square bottle, with a handsomely engraved label and a grand capsule, making a most attractive package. The Nabob Sauce put up by this firm is beginning to make a popular name for itself in this country. Wright & Copp, Toronto, are looking after Batty & Co.'s interest in Canada, and they speak very hopefully of trade prospects, as Canadians are spending more money each year on goods of this kind.

Besides pickles and sauces, Batty & Co. manufacture articles of equally good value, such as olives, olive oil, jams, jellies, marmalade and potted goods; in fact, a complete line of groceries and sundries. They are carried in stock by the following houses:—

CANADIANS ARE GOOD RISKS.

Conservatism such as is consonant with a live and energetic institution is characteristic of the Confederation Life Association. Canadians are among the healthiest people in the world, and, in spite of the competition, the Confederation Life has been satisfied to confine its business to the Dominion. How it has profited by it is well known. Last week it held its twenty-fifth annual meeting, and the reports then presented showed that the new business of the past year was the largest in the history of the association. There were 2388 applicants for $3,815,050. Of these 2258 were approved for $3,596,550. The applicants were one-third larger than ever before. The total insurance at the close of the year was $22,595,752 under 14,674 policies on 12,914 lives. The interest income showed an increase up to the end of April of over $10,000 and the premium income of over $15,000. The total surplus securities for policy holders now aggregates nearly 1½ million dollars. Those who may desire to peruse the report will find it on pages 28 and 30, this issue.

INSPECTION OF CANNED GOODS.

Is it absolutely necessary that a State or Federal official shall visit our houses every morning to make a chemical analysis of the baking powder and a microscopic examination of the beefsteak? This seems to be our fate in the near future unless the public grows weary of the present disposition to make the Government protect the individual from accident, inconvenience and all dishonesty. Must an official of some sort examine our roofs for leaks, certify that cloth is all wool and a yard wide before we can order our clothes, and pass not only on the wholesomeness but even on the freshness of our food?

Here is a bill in the Pennsylvania Legislature which provides that canners of food shall mark on each can the date when it was sealed. We have no great sympathy with the canners who protest against this, for it is probably true that they want occasionally to work off a surplus from a previous year as fresh goods. But there is no question of the public health involved here, and there ought to be some room left for the canner and the dealer to give his name or trade mark value by the care he takes in selling his merchandise for what it really is. The way is open for canners who desire their really fresh goods to have an advantage in the market over the old goods of rivals to date their cans and to satisfy the public that their dates are truthful. Some other dealer, with the weakness about dates so generally complained of, might put an erroneous date on his cans, but the retail dealers are not entirely without means of knowing of whom they buy, and housekeepers surely know something about the quality of the food they put on the table. Most of them have learned to prefer certain brands of canned goods, and the dealers find this out, and the favored canner derives a legitimate advantage therefrom.

There are catsups and pickles on the market that are not so good as others. They are cheaper; it is not certain that they are less wholesome. Must we have these relishes put up under the supervision of the Internal Revenue office and duly stamped, or may we leave the manufacturers and the American public to settle the matter between themselves?

There may be inferior canned goods sold at low prices to people too ignorant or too poor to discriminate. Where the public health is involved a considerable extension of the powers of Government may be tolerated, but the truth is that canned food is about as wholesome as anything people get to eat; certainly more wholesome than much fresh food is, and the healthfulness of canned food does not altogether depend on the fact whether it was put up this year or last.

From time to time there is a case of mysterious poisoning, which, if ice cream proves an alibi, is generally charged to canned food. It is possible that the accused is guilty, but the Commissary Department of the United States Army has been serving large quantities of canned foods to the soldiers for years, and in all climates, from that of Fort Missoula to that of Fort Yuma, and the Army has lost no men from poisoned canned food. It is a safe general principle to empty the contents of the can as soon as it is opened, and to keep in an earthen dish what is not immediately consumed. It is probably true that in some cases fruit acids have acted on the tin after the can was opened, but if canned food were particularly in need of official inspection the records of the Army Medical Department would afford evidence of it.

No other Arctic exploring party was ever so well dieted, or survived two years in such good health as the party at whose head Gen. A. W. Greely distinguished himself. He arranged the dietary himself and selected the foods. He relied to an unusual extent on canned foods, and he found the contents of the cans as good after two years of freezing and thawing at Camp Conger as they were at first. Juices containing sugar had in some cases candied, but the contents of the cans were as wholesome and almost as palatable as at first. Most of the provisions underwent no change at all, and were perfectly fresh, wholesome and palatable after two years. Surgeon Major W. Simpson Pratt, of the English Army, after campaigning in the Soudan, has certified that cooked food properly canned is not affected by heat.

Doubtless it is important that the contents should be properly canned, but it does not yet appear that the consumers need governmental protection in this regard, and they certainly need no official certification of the date at which the cans were sealed. The grocers want to retain their customers, and the canners want to have consumers ask for their goods. We can rely on the intelligent self-interest of these people, supplemented if need be by the existing local health authorities, to continue to supply as good canned food as the public is now getting, without providing for an army of state inspectors, or adding to the functions of the collectors of internal revenue.—N. Y. Bulletin.

DRY GOODS.

(From the Dry Goods Review.)

Another quiet week has passed, but not so quietly as previous weeks. The warm weather has induced a number of city and town dealers to place heavy repeats in many lines. But country stocks have not been broken into to any great extent, and consequently the volume of trade is not extra large.

At this time of year there are always numerous broken lots, clearances, jobs, bargains and drives which the visiting dealer can pick up and use to great advantage. The wholesalers are expecting the arrival of fall stocks and desire to clear out their spring lines as well as possible to make more room. They do not care to have so many different lines to keep in mind, and they simplify by cleaning out lines which they do not expect to carry again. In this way the retailer secures many bargains which he can turn to good account in swelling the year's profits.

On May 4th the number of merchants who took advantage of the cash discounts and paid all bills of April 1st, 4 months, was as large as ever. Remittances in general are very fair.

Letter orders are increasing in number and volume, and require a deal of labor for their execution.

NOTES.

A special purchase of white Victoria lawns at job prices has been made by W. R. Brock & Co., having been picked up by their European buyer before the recent advance in cotton goods. These goods cannot be repeated at the old prices.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing a line of 28-inch satin checked apron muslins in ten different patterns. These are scarce goods. A line of silk pongors in twenty-two different art shades is also shown. These are all new colors and very desirable property for fancy work. A line of Paris and Lyons chenille spot silk veilings in new colorings has just been passed into stock.

W. R. Brock & Co. are having a strong demand for their special line of men's black cashmere half-hose, called "Leader." This is a line of which they bought a large quantity, and which can be retailed at 25 cents per pair.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. are showing a choice line of Tartan check silk, recently secured at a large discount, being balance of manufacturer's stock, and worth in the regular way 75 cents. Thirteen choice patterns; price, 50 cents.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing a line of braces in heavy cushion web and silk web, which they are offering at $1.50. The price in the regular way is $2.00.

Alexander & Anderson have purchased 3,000 pieces striped and checked flannels, being the balance of a manufacturer's stock, which they are offering at mill prices. This is a big drive, and they can be retailed at 8 cents per yard.

Another shipment of art muslins, Madras draperies, coin spot muslins, etc., in white, ecru, gold, terra cotta, sky, lemon, and other fancy colorings, has just been passed into stock by W. R. Brock & Co.

Samson, Kennedy & Co. are offering a line of cotton Austrian umbrellas, at $7.50. This umbrella has a paragon frame, and is especially good value at this price.

W. R. Brock & Co. have several lines of black and colored cashmere hose which they have laid aside to be cleared out at job prices.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence are offering special reductions in certain lines of corsets which they desire to clear. These are genuine bargains, and correspondence will elicit further information.

Alexander & Anderson have passed into stock a full range of their well-known and justly celebrated black henriettas. These are extra value, ranging from 45 to 90 cents. The finish and color of these goods are unexcelled.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are showing a magnificent range of patterns in their wide cloth print, in delaine patterns, in black goods, colored goods, pink goods, cream goods, also in the soft finished drillette and indigo and Turkey red effects, etc., at 10 cents per yard.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing a line of chenille curtains in a range of colors, which are being offered at $3.75 per pair. These goods are this season's manufacture, and are claimed to be as good value as has hitherto been sold for $4.50.

W. R. Brock & Co. have received a few novelties in summer suitings both in wool and worsted in small stripes and other small effects. Serges are growing in favor as the season advances, and further additions to their stock have been received this week.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence are offering a line of three-quarter tweed pattern dress goods at 8 cents. This line is worth in the regular way 10 cents, and should prove a plum for those who can avail themselves of it.

John Macdonald & Co. are running a special line of 32-inch apron checks at 10 cents a yard. One quality, but a range of patterns. The former price was much higher.

Alexander & Anderson have just received a large shipment of new prints in delaine patterns, in black, brown and cream grounds; also indigos, cardinals, etc., in small object effects. These are the goods that are wanted, and which ought to be on every retail counter. The price is 10 cents.

There is now reported a great demand for navy prints of fast dye. Gordon, Mackay & Co. are selling two ranges of a German make, very wide cloth, which they warrant to be of indigo dye and absolutely fast. They embrace a handsome assortment of patterns in spots, stripes and flowers in navy and white, navy and gold and navy and green.

The Best Grocers Make a point of Keeping it always in Stock.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, May 18, 1893.
GROCERIES.

The unsettled weather of the last few days has naturally interfered with business, but otherwise trade is improving. The country roads are getting into better condition, but the full benefit of that is not yet being felt, for now that the farmers can get into the towns and villages, seeding time is demanding their attention. The conditions, however, continue healthy. Stocks in retailers' hands are not large and purchases are almost wholly for immediate wants. Here and there a few of the more "nervy" ones seem to have made money out of the advance in sugars. The dullness which has characterized city trade seems to have reached its limit, some of the wholesalers for the first time for some months reporting an improvement in this respect. There have been a few buyers in town during the week from the Upper Lakes, and now that navigation is fairly open their number may be expected to increase. Locally the coffee market remains much as before, but outside there is a gradual stiffening of values. Dried fruits remain much as before, except it be a rather brisker demand for prunes. Nuts remain in much the same featureless condition as before, but in rice prices are a little lower in some lines. The sugar market has not demanded so much attention this week, but prices seem to be still firmly held in spite of an easier feeling in refined in New York. The demand for tea seems to be scarcely as good as a week ago, and the same would probably apply to canned goods. Payments are rather more satisfactory, being generally reported to be fairly up to the mark.

COFFEES.

Market is a little firmer outside and higher prices are again looked for. Locally the demand is probably not up to the usual standard, people seemingly having been endued with the idea that as options were down prices would go lower. There are a few Rios selling at 20 to 22c. according to quality, but it is seldom that the outside figure obtains. We quote:—Rio, 20 to 22c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Mocha, 26 to 30c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.

DRIED FRUIT.

There is a better demand for prunes. Otherwise the market is unchanged. There is only a moderate quantity of Valencia raisins moving. The low price article could of course be sold but the New York market is practically cleaned out of this line and none can be laid down here from there. The idea for off-stalk is $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. a pound for seconds, $5\frac{1}{2}$ to 6c. for fine; layers, fancy selects, $6\frac{1}{2}$ to 8c. according to quality. There is not much doing in currants, although they, with prunes, are sharing the most attention. New York is easier but it is on fruit that would scarcely be used here. The idea is $5\frac{3}{4}$ to $6\frac{1}{2}$ c. the outside price being of course for fine Filiatra fruit, of which there is however a scarcity. A letter received here this week from a leading Patras shipper says: "The market is quiet, but quality of what remains on this side is generally so poor that we are not pushing business in provincial growths. About six thousand tons remain in Greece unsold. Peronosperos has appeared slightly in one or two localities and we fear we shall suffer again this year. In any case the crop will only be a small one. Prunes are more active and a fair trade is now being done in them at from $7\frac{1}{2}$ to 8c. in cases. There is not much doing in dates and $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. a pound is still the idea.

NUTS.

There is not much doing and prices are unchanged. We quote:—Brazil nuts, 11 to $11\frac{1}{2}$ c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; unshelled, 16 to 17c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to $12\frac{1}{2}$ c. for green; cocoa nuts, \$5 to \$5.50 per sack.

RICE AND SPICES.

In rice business continues generally quiet and prices are somewhat lower, $3\frac{3}{4}$ to $3\frac{1}{2}$ c. being the idea. Demand for spices is small at unchanged prices. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c.; pure white pepper at 20 to 28c., and pure black at 14 to 16c. Caraway seed is firmer and advices report outside markets higher for August and September on account of light stocks and anticipated short crop.

SUGAR.

The New York market is slightly easier on refined sugar, but it does not seem to have occasioned any concern here, as it is generally looked upon as being a move on the part of the Trust to bear raws, it being short of stock. The Canadian market is unchanged. The Montreal refinery has no low grades yet, and its agents have been notified that if they cannot get their prices to not bother about doing business, as it is sure of the market. For futures the refiners are still refusing to entertain orders. The raw market is firm. The local market has been quiet, although a few carlots have changed hands during the last few days at full prices; in fact, comparatively speaking, there seems to have been more demand for carlots than for small lots. The idea is still $5\frac{3}{4}$ c. for granulated and $4\frac{3}{4}$ to $5\frac{1}{4}$ c. for yellows, the outside figure being for a very bright sugar.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is nothing new to report in syrups and the idea is still $2\frac{1}{2}$ to $3\frac{1}{2}$ c. per pound, but there is not much doing. Molasses is also quiet and featureless, with Porto Rico selling at 38 to 46c., New Orleans at 30 to 52c., and Trinidad at 32 to 35c. in puncheons and 36 to 37c. in barrels and 40c. in half barrels.

TEAS.

Demand has only been fair the past week and in volume probably rather less than the previous week. The movement has been principally blacks. In Japans there is very little doing. Cable advices from Japan indicate that the regular market for new teas opened on choice quality at about ten per cent. lower than last season, but has since recovered and shows steadier tone. Crop prospects promise a yield full as large if not in excess of last year. The new Japan teas now on the way are very high grades and few of them are coming to Canada, and any that might be afterwards brought in here by way of the United States would of course have to pay a duty of 10c. It will be probably nearly another month before the new crop will reach Toronto. Pingsuey's, both gun powder and Young Hysons, are firm in New York; in fact they are the chief feature of the market there. Autumnal Assams are beginning to arrive on this market, and the present is opportune for those retailers who blend their own teas to purchase. We quote: Japans, low grade and common, 13 to $13\frac{1}{2}$ c.; medium, $17\frac{1}{2}$ to 19c.; fine to finest, 28 to 35c.; blacks, low grade Congous, $14\frac{1}{2}$ to $16\frac{1}{2}$ c.; medium, 18 to 23c.; fine, 30 to 45c.; fancy, 60 to 70c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The butter market is weak and lower. Receipts during the week have been liberal, while the demand on the other hand has been of a merely hand to mouth character. The quality continues to improve. Receipts consist principally of dairy rolls, which sell at 15 to 16c. There are a few tubs coming in, and they sell at the same price as rolls. Farmers' pound rolls are quoted at 16 to 17c. There is not much doing in creamery owing to the free deliveries and low prices of dairy. Pound prints are quoted at 22 to 23c., and creamery tubs at 20 to 21c.

There has been no new developments in the cheese market. New cheese is quoted at $10\frac{1}{2}$ c., and old at 11 to $11\frac{1}{2}$ c. It is estimated that there are not more than a hundred boxes of old make on this market.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—No improvement. Jobbers are paying $1.30 to $1.50 and selling at $1.40 to $1.55.

DRIED APPLES—The market continues dull. Jobbers are paying 4 to $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. and selling at 5c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Dull and unchanged. Dealers are as a rule paying $8\frac{1}{2}$ to 9c., and quoting 9 to $9\frac{1}{2}$ c.

EGGS—Continue steady at $11\frac{1}{2}$ to 12c., with supply just about enough to supply the demand.

HONEY—Very little doing. Extract is quoted as before at 8c. for clover and 5c. for dark.

POULTRY—There is not much coming in. Geese are hardly saleable, while chickens and turkeys are in good demand. We quote chickens at 75 to 85c., turkeys at 10 to 12c. per pound and geese at 8 to 10c. a pound.

POTATOES—The market is somewhat flurried at the moment; 95c. has been paid

DELHI CANNING CO.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

The volume of business is scarcely up to that of last week, but the unsettled weather of the last few days may have contributed to this. There is still however a fairly good business being done principally in retailers lots of a sorting up character. Firmness still seems to be a feature of the market. Packers have been asking for business in futures, but the trade here would not do business except at prices lower than the former would accept. It is understood that 85 and 90c. was asked for tomatoes. The packers are not anxious to make contracts as the season is so backward, preferring to take chances of making something or nothing. Tomatoes remain much as before, the movement still being fair; 80 to 85c. is the idea and we quote up to $1 for the better and older brands. There is probably less doing in peas than in any other line of canned vegetable. The figures usually obtaining range from 80 to 85c. with an occasional 90c. being paid, while a fancy pea, claimed to be equal to the French article and containing as much more in the can sells at $1.40. A fair business is being done in corn at prices ranging from 80 to 85c., while we quote as high as $1.40 for honey sweet. Beans quiet and unchanged at 90c. to $1. There is nothing special to note in salmon. Demand is of the character usual at this season, but stocks are light and prices firm. The idea is $1.50 for talls and $1.80 for flats. A fair sorting up trade is being done in lobster at $1.90 to $2.10 for talls and at $2.50 to $2.75 for flats. The new pack will be on the market in about a month. Peaches are not much wanted; they sell at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and $3.25 to $3.75 for 3's. Plums have also not met with much demand during the week and the idea is still $1.45 to $1.55. Apples are of small sale at 85c. to $1 for 3's and $2 to $2.25 for gallons. Canned meats are in increasing demand and unchanged in price.

on track for first-class stock and the same price would be repeated. Lots are selling out of store at $1 to $1.05.

ONIONS—Not much doing and prices are unchanged. We quote: Red, $1.10 per bushel, $2 per barrel; yellow, $1.20 per bushel, $2.25 per barrel.

HOPS—Not many moving. Jobbers are getting 18 to 20c. for '92's and 14 to 15c. for yearlings.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

Trade is practically over for the season, but all offerings are taken, particularly weights running from 120 to 160 pounds. Demand continues good for hog products at firm prices, and packers expect that the season will end up well, stocks of long clear, hams and breakfast bacon being light. Long clear seems to be exceptionally good property at the moment. A carload of pickled hams changed hands this week at little better than 11½c.

BACON—Long clear, 10½ to 11c. Smoked backs are 13c., bellies, 13½ to 14c., rolls, 10½ to 10¾c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c. for smoked; pickled, 11¾c.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13¼c. in tubs, 13½c. in pails and 13 to 13½c. in tierces. Compound 10 to 10½c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $20.50, Canadian short cut $21 to $21.50.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef forees are 4½ to 5½c., hindquarters 6 to 8½c., veal 8 to 9½c., lamb 8½ to 9½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

There is an increased movement in oranges and lemons on account of the freer arrivals consequent upon the opening of navigation, and they are offering at reasonable prices. Oranges are quoted lower. Bananas continue to occupy a good deal of attention, dealers filling up for next Wednesday's holiday. Pine apples are in good demand and cheaper. Apples are a shade higher. There are not so many offerings and demand is light. There is nothing much held here outside a few Spies and Russets. The price of apples is unchanged. We quote: Oranges—Valencias $6.50 to $7.00 per case; ditto, Jumbos, $8 to $8.50 per case; Floridas, $3.25 to $4 per box; Messinas, $3.50 to $4.00 per box for 160's and 200's, and $2.00 for 80's and 100's. California seedlings, $3 to $3.25 per box; ditto Navals, $3.75 to $4.25; blood oranges, $4 to $4.50 per box and $2 to $2.25 per half box. lemons, $3 to $4.50; bananas, $1 to $2; pineapples, extras, 15 to 17c., No. 1 11 to 15c., No. 2 8 to 9c., No. 3 7c.; California apricots, 20c. per lb. 25-lb. boxes; apples, $1.50 to $2 for ordinary stock and $2.25 to $3.50 for choice to fancy.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

Demand is about over for syrup and is falling off for sugar. We quote syrup at 65 to 80c. a tin and 85 to 90c. per imperial gallon. Sugar is unchanged at 9 to 10c.

FISH.

Arrivals of fish are still small, but there is quite enough for the demand. Receipts consist principally of salmon trout, blue back herring, pickerel and pike. Finnan haddie is 2½c. cheaper and pike is quoted 1 to 2c. lower. Oysters are out of the market. The quotations are as before: Fresh salmon, 20c.; haddock, 6c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half bbl.; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; pike, 5 to 6c.; ciscoes, $1.35 a hundred; finnan haddie, 5c.; perch, $2 to $3 per hundred, as to size; blue back herring, $2 to $3 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.

MARKETS—Continued.

SEEDS.

The season is about over as far as timothy and clover is concerned, although jobbers are still receiving numerous small orders, which are being filled at from $7.80 to $8 per bushel for red clover, as to quantity and quality and mammoth at $8.10 to $8.55 per bushel. Alsike continues scarce; small orders are being filled at $8 to $9 per bushel according to quality. In timothy, choice to extra sells at $2.50 per bushel. Jobbers are experiencing more demand for Hungarian grass seed, millet, and ensilage corn. Hungarian is quoted at $1 to $1.10 per bushel, millet at 85 to 90c. per bushel, and ensilage at 62 to 72c. per bushel, according to quality and grade.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—There is no change in price. Good hides continue scarce. Good selections are worth 5¼c.

SKINS—Calfskins are easier, in sympathy with the drop of 10 to 15c. a skin in the States. No quotable change has been made here yet, but lower prices are expected soon. Jobbers are paying 7 to 8c. and selling at 8 to 9c. Sheepskins are normal at $1.35 to $1.45.

TALLOW—Seems to be a little steadier since the decline. Dealers are paying 5½c. and selling at 6c. Rough is lower at 2c. There is not much doing.

WOOL—There is still a moderate demand from the factories at unchanged prices. Pulled wool is offering in limited quantities, and there is not much selling. Fleece wool is nominal at 17 to 19c., clothing 25 to 26c., Canada South Down, 27 to 28c.; white Indian, suitable for blankets, 17 to 19c.; grey East Indian, 11 to 13c.; B.A.'s white clothing 32 to 34c.; cross breeds, 26 to 28c.; Canada extra, 25 to 27c. Canada super is scarce and good selection would readily fetch 23c.

PETROLEUM.

There is no special feature to note. Lubricating oils are pretty well picked up and season is over for burning oils. The trade is now awaiting the tariff changes which go into effect July 1. In the meantime dealers are not much concerned about business. We quote:—Canada refined oil, 13 to 13½c.; carbon safety, 17½ to 18c.; Canada water white, 19c.; American water white, 21 to 22c.; photogene, 25c.

MARKET NOTES.

[Importers, wholesale merchants and manufacturers should send any items intended for this department so that they may reach the head office not later than Wednesday morning. The editor will always welcome such information.]

There has been a further advance in the price of the West Indian cocoa bean.

Sloan & Crowther are in receipt of a full line of the Aylmer Canning Co.'s meats.

It is rumored that one of the houses on the street has decided to withdraw from the Guild.

It is estimated that there are not a hundred boxes of old cheese on the Toronto market.

The Toronto apple market is about cleaned out of everything except a few spies and russets.

Arthur P. Tippet & Co., of St. John, N.B., report a wonderful sale of Lazenby's jellies. "Although Lazenby only got to packing six months ago, they write, 'apparently they are just like all the rest of the goods he packs, absolutely the best that can be put up."

Eby, Blain & Co. report the arrival of a consignment of Batty's pickles and Nabob sauce.

Smith & Keighley have received their spring consignment of Cross & Blackwell's fancy goods.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. have a shipment of gallon apples—Ontario Packing Co.'s brand—which they are offering at a reasonable figure.

H. A. Nelson & Sons announce a reduction in Steamship Matches. The price is now $3.10 per case, freight prepaid on five case lots.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. have a shipment of Faulder's marmalade just arriving. This marmalade is said to be rapidly coming to the front.

Tellier, Rothwell & Co. of Montreal are putting a new line stove past polish on the market in two sizes. They recommend it as being particularly good.

McWilliams & Everest have received about 16,000 boxes of lemons since navigation opened on the St. Lawrence, of which 5,000 boxes were for themselves.

The E. B. Eddy Co. announce a reduction of 20c. a case in Telegraph, Telephone and Tiger matches, and that freight will be paid on five case lots instead of 25 as heretofore.

Warren Bros. & Boomer have been appointed sole agents for Koepff's family gelatine. They report the receipt of several repeat orders. The quality is highly spoken of.

F. W. Hudson & Co. have been appointed sole agents for Canada of Buttermilk Toilet Soap, manufactured by the Cosmo Buttermilk Soap Co., Chicago. This soap is highly spoken of.

Perkins, Ince & Co. have on exhibition a "loaded" tea chest. This is a package of tea out of which Chinese thieves have very cleverly drawn the tea and filled it up with rice hulks, sand, roots, etc.

Lucas, Steele & Bristol, of Hamilton, report a fair movement in their low grade and medium Congous, Japans and Young Hysons. Their values at 14 to 16c. are exceptional. They will send samples on application.

James Turner & Co. find it difficult to fill Ram Lal's tea orders, the trade pushing same with great vim, seeing Ram Lal's gives the best satisfaction of all teas on the market, and is not sold to pedlars or gift stores.

The Morse Soap Works have struck out some brands from their list and changes are announced in others. These are the changes: Eclipse, 5½c. per lb.; Mottled, $3.20 to $5.25; Electric, $3.50; Royal Laundry, $3.10; Octagon, $4.50, all per box. Ruby, 42c.; Monster, 30c.; Royal Magnum, 25 to 30c.; Anchor, 45c.; Morse's Assorted, 50c.; Morse's Rose, Windsor and Castile, 50c.; Pure Coconut, 50c.; Cocoa Castile, 50c.; Plain Honey, 75c.; Glycerine, 75c.; Plain Windsor, 75c., all per dozen; New Arcadian, 45c. per gross.

J. M. Fortier, of the Creme de la Creme Cigar Factory, Montreal, offers to furnish Havana tobacco seed free to persons who will either call or write. He has imported the seed specially for the purpose, and his object is to encourage the cultivation of tobacco in Canada.

The St. Croix Soap Manufacturing Co. of St. Stephen, N.B., are nothing if not original. This is at the moment being demonstrated by the method they have adopted of sending out samples of their Surprise Soap to the trade. Enclosed in an attractive little japanned box are two small cakes of this soap wrapped in different colored papers. On the outside of the cover are the words, "Sample of Surprise Soap," while on the inside is a label showing the profit the retailer can make out of this soap.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, May 18, 1893.
GROCERIES.

The week has not shown any material improvement in the dull position shown by most of the staple groceries, and although sugar shows more or less activity, owing to the fear of further advances which has spurred buyers into more or less activity, but even at the advanced prices now ruling sellers are disposed to accept orders only on very conservative lines. Teas and coffees are quiet, while spices, although they are not specially active, meet a fair enquiry at steady prices. Dried fruit is very slow, and other lines do not furnish any notable feature.

SUGAR.

The advance of ¼c. in the price, which transpired last week, has been maintained, but the tone of the market is somewhat easier this week, although business is moving at the same prices. Sales of granulated at the refineries were made during the week at 5¼c., and yellows at 4¼ to 4¾c., as to grade.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The syrup market is quiet, with no extensive business to note. Canadian has sold in a small way at 2 to 2¼c. per lb., and American at 18½ to 21c. per gallon. Molasses remains firm, and it is reported that orders have been placed in Barbadoes on behalf of buyers here at 15c. first cost there. On spot the combine price is firmly maintained at 33 to 34c., but the demand for the article is small and unimportant.

TEAS.

There is very little news in the tea market. First lots of new Japan stock are expected here shortly and many buyers are awaiting their arrival, even although in the opinion of many they will be a little too high priced for the ordinary run of the demand. From stock here Japan goods have been

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

The flour market continues quiet and unchanged. There have been sales during the week of Ontario patents for export at equal to $3.30 to $3.40 in wood. Oatmeal is higher, while millfeed is easy.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.35 to $4.40; strong bakers' $3.80 to $4.10; white wheat patents, $3.50 to $4.00; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.30, low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25; Ontario family $3.35 to $3.75.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.30 to $4.50; Manitoba strong bakers' $3.90 to $4.25; Ontario patents, $3.25 to $3.50; straight roller, $3.00 to $3.20; extra, $2.65 to $2.80; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25.

MEAL.—Oatmeal is $4.00 to $4.30. Cornmeal is $3.25 to $3.50.

FEED.—Bran (ton lots) $12.50 to $13.00, do (on track) $12 to $12.50, shorts (ton lots) $16, ditto (on track) $15; mixed feed $20 to $22, feeding corn 57 to 58c., oats 37 to 38c. on track.

HAY.—Baled timothy, demand is good and supply fair at $9.50 to $10.

STRAW.—Plentiful and demand limited, at $5.50 to $6.

MONTREAL.

X The flour market is very quiet. There is little or no enquiry from outside points, and the local movement is restricted to a few jobbing transactions, for dealers are pretty well supplied at the moment. We quote:—Winter wheat, $4 to $4.25; spring patents, $4.20 to $4.30; straight rollers, $3.40 to $3.55; extra, $3 to $3.15; superfine, $2.60 to $2.90; city strong bakers', $4 to $4.10; strong bakers', $3.75 to $4.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

Flour.—The market took an upward turn last week, from 10 to 20c. per barrel, and a better demand has followed. As price is still very low a further advance would not be unexpected. Present quotations are: Manitoba, $5.10 to $5.20; Ontario high grade, $4.20 to $4.30; medium patents $4 to $4.15.

Oatmeal.—Market steady at late advance, $4.35 to $4.45, and in fair demand.

Cornmeal.—As corn is up 4 or 5c. an advance in meal would seem in order, though prices are unchanged at $2.70 to $2.75.

Middlings.—Bags from $23 to $24.

Oats.—45 to 48c.; split peas, $3.90 to $4; pot barley, $3.90 to $4.

PURE CONFECTIONERY, FINEST BISCUITS.

moved at the following range: Low grades 13 to 14c., good common 15 to 18c., fine 19 to 21½c., and finest to choicest 23 to 31c.

COFFEES AND SPICES.

The local coffee market is quiet and prices are steady. Sales of Maracaibo have transpired at 20 to 21c. for round lots and 22c. for smaller quantities. We quote Jamaica 19 to 20c., Maracaibo 20 to 22c., Rio 19 to 21c., Java 24 to 28c., and Mocha 25 to 28c.

Spices are firm and we quote as follows:—Black pepper 8 to 9c., pimento 6½c., nutmegs 50 to 52½c., and $1 for strict wholesale lots.

FRUIT.

The fruit sale caused a little stir, there being a good attendance of outside buyers. We quote: Oranges, Messina, $3.25 to $3.50; half boxes, $2 to $2.50, and bloods $4 to $4.50.

Lemons met with a good active demand and prices were fairly steady. We quote fair stock $2.50, good $3 to $3.50, and fancy $4 to $4.50.

Bananas have met a good demand, and prices are steady at $1 to $1.50 for ordinary stock and $2.50 for choice large bunches.

There has been a fair enquiry for figs at from 9 to 10c. per lb. on 10-lb. boxes.

BEANS.

Beans have shown little change, prices ruling steady at $1.60 to $1.65 for Western hand picked and $1.25 to $1.50 for good. Some inferior lots have changed hands at as low as $1.

HONEY.

Honey rules quiet and prices are much the same. Extracts sells at 6 to 7c. and comb stock 9 to 13c., the outside figure being for white clover.

HOPS.

The market is dull and unchanged, brewers not being on the market at all. Good to choice stock are worth about 17 to 18½c. and lower grades 14 to 15c.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

A few sales of syrup are made from time to time at 5 to 6c. per lb. in the wood and 55c to 60c. per gallon tin. Sugar is the same 6 to 7½c.

ONIONS

The stock of domestic onions are pretty well cleaned up and yellows are not to had in wholesale quantities. Sales of them were made at $2.50. Reds are quoted at $3.50 to $4.00.

POTATOES.

The market is steady, car lots selling at $1.05 to $1.10 per bag.

EGGS.

There is a good demand for eggs, and while the deliveries from the G. T. R. are still behind, the receipts are very heavy. Prices rule at 11 to 11½c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE

Receipts of new butter are freer, but the price is fairly well maintained for both new creamery and dairy at 22c. There is no export demand for new stock, nor can any be expected until genuine grass butter is on the market. The transactions are not large, therefore, lots of 25 tubs being about the maximum, some sales of this quantity having been put through on account of buyers down below. In old stock there is little to note, some business in Kamouraska transpiring at 18½ to 19c. We quote as follows: New creamery, to 22c.; new Townships dairy, 22c.; Western dairy, 19 to 20c.; Western roll, 17 to 19c.; old dairy, 17 to 19c.

The cheese market rules much the same, but values are gradually working lower with the advance of the season and the freer offerings. As yet the business in the country has been the chief indication of value, for spot transactions have not been many. It is understood, however, that some Ontario goods have been turned over at 10½c., and this is about the best figure obtainable. The enquiry over the cable is of an indefinite kind in most instances, the idea apparently being more to tempt offers than to make bids. Some deals are going through, however, and although no stated figure can be ascertained, it is probable that 50s. nett Montreal, which is about equal to 10¼c., represents the basis. We now quote the market 9½ to 10½c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

C. A. Chouillou reports better returns from the west for his line of Meniers chocolate.

Lightbound, Ralston & Co. are offering some choice brands of molasses, Japan teas, etc., this week.

Regan, White & Co., have a lot of new teas arriving this week, comprising some of the choicest grades.

Frank Magor & Co. say they are having encouraging returns from Robinson's lines of patent infant goods.

Carter, Galbraith & Co. have moved to the large warehouse at the corner of St. Peter and Foundling streets.

The Canada Meat Packing Company, have been purchasing some considerable lots of fat cattle recently.

Stewart, Munn & Co. report business quiet in fish at the moment, but say there is a good demand for their codfish steaks.

Caverhill, Rose, Hughes & Co. offer some special lines of canned goods. They are booking some nice orders for their Indian teas also.

Chaput, Fils & Co. are offering some choice new crop Barbadoes molasses at moderate prices for delivery during the course of the next week or so.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

ST. JOHN, N.B., May 18, 1893.

The advance last week of 10 to 20c. in flour has created a better demand for that article. An increase is also noticed in sales of other lines, with good outlook for healthy spring trade. Butter is scarce, and prices will likely rule high for several weeks. Money is not as plentiful as dealers would wish.

Dried Fruits.—Prunes sell slow at 7 1-2 to 8c.; dates, 4 1-2 to 5c.; off-stalk Valencias, 5 to 5 1-2c.; Valencia layers, 6 to 6 1-2c.; currants, 5 to 6c.

Dried Apples sell at 6 to 6 1-2c., evaporated apples are scarce at 9 to 11c.

Sugar.—Good demand; prices unchanged, though, if reports are correct, a further advance may be expected. We quote as follows: Granulated, 5 1-4 to 5 3-8c.; extra at 4 1-2 to 4 7-8c.; yellows, 4 1-4 to 4 1-2c.

Molasses.—Very light stocks here and market firm. Barbadoes is quoted 33 to 34c.; Antigua, 27 to 29c.; Porto Rico, 32 to 33c.

Butter.—Very little choice offering and in good demand. Prices are 22 to 24c.

Eggs.—A better enquiry at slightly higher prices, 11 to 12c.

Onions.—New Bermudas in crates are selling $1.65 to $1.75, with market well supplied.

Provisions—Beef, $14.50 to 15.50; pork P.E.I. mess, $22.50 to $23.50; American clear mess, $25 to $26; lard is up 1-2 to 3-4c. per lb., being quoted at 11 1-2 to 13 1-2c.

Fish.—Dry cod, large, per 100 lbs., $4.35 to $4.50; med. cod per 100 lbs., $3.50 to $3.75; pollock, per 100 lbs., $2.15 to $2.25. Pickled herring, bay, half bbls., $1.60 to $1.70; Shelburne, half bbls., $2.25 to $2.50; bbls., $3.90 to $4; smoked herring, 8 to 10c.

OLIVE OIL PRODUCTION IN ITALY.

According to a statistical return recently issued by the Italian Minister of Agriculture, the extent of land under olive cultivation in Italy in 1891 amounted to 2,578,675 acres, and the product of oil to 60,270,188 gallons. Of this quantity 14 million gallons were exported. The cultivation of the olive is carried on, says the French consul at Florence, in 50 out of the 69 provinces of Italy, and in 3,214 out of the 8,253 communes. The Province of Port Maurice is the one which in proportion to its extent possesses the largest quantity of olive trees, and the Provinces of Lecce, Bari, Pouilles, Reggio de Calabria and Chieti follow in the order named. As the average yield per acre depends upon the conditions of locality and soil, and upon the description of olive trees and methods of cultivation, the variations in the different districts are very considerable.

LONDON RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

The regular meeting of the above named association was held on the 9th inst., with a fair attendance. President W. H. Ferguson in the chair.

Notice of motion given at last meeting by R. A. Jones to change time of meeting from evening to afternoon, was laid over as the mover was unavoidably absent.

The secretary read a number of letters from sister associations, all stating that they heartily endorsed the action of this association respecting the proposed Pharmacy Act and the act exempting civil service employees' salaries from garnishee.

The president reported that good progress was being made in the movement, and that no doubt pressure would be brought to bear that would bring about the desired amendments to those acts. He received a letter and copy of the amended proposed Pharmacy Act from W. R. Meredith, Q.C., M.P.P., and a request that any objections to the act as amended be forwarded to him, and the same would receive careful attention.

The copy of amendments were carefully read over and there was only one clause that was not quite clear, and the president said he had written Mr. Meredith, M.P.P., asking a full explanation of the meaning of that clause, but had not as yet received a reply.

It was left with the president and secretary to look after the interests of the association in the matter.

The American silver question was taken up for discussion. The president stated that American silver and silver certificates were becoming so plentiful of late that it was to a considerable extent taking the place of our own money. This was caused by the American government sending large amounts of their gold to foreign countries and issuing silver and silver certificates for circulation and not redeemable in gold. Our banks refuse to take American silver except at 20 per cent. discount, and while there has been no serious inconvenience up to the present, there is likely to be in the near future if American silver continues to increase as it has been doing during the past few months and our banks still refuse to take it at par.

After some further discussion on the question, during which it was shown that it only required united action for a very short time to get rid of a great portion of the American silver, it was considered that as there was not a sufficient number of the members present to properly establish any plan, it would be better to lay the question over for further discussion at next meeting.

A general sociable chat of half an hour followed, reference being made to the state of trade, advance in price of sugar, prices of canned goods, lard vs. cotton-lene, etc, and at 10 o'clock the members bade each other good night and another interesting meeting closed.

The next regular meeting will be held on June 13th.

HOW LONDON IS FED.

The enormous number of transactions composing a year's trading in a large retail establishment may be gauged from the following particulars of goods sold by the provision department alone of Messrs. Spears and Pond's stores during the year 1892. The number of American and Cheddar cheeses sold was 5,422, weighing 1,605 cwt., or, to be exact, 179,830 lbs., and in addition, 1,974 stiltons, 15,380 camemberts, together with 24,170 cream cheeses of various kinds. Of fresh butter there were sold 4,227 boxes, and of salt butter 2,437 packages, the combined weight of which was 189,843 lbs. The number of sides of bacon reached 4,809, weighing 3,026 cwt., or upwards of 150 tons. The hams numbered 14,357, weighing 1,660 cwt., or 185,984 lbs., and the eggs contained in 1,620 cases were 1,220,540.

THE CONFEDERATION LIFE ASSOCIATION.

TWENTY-FIRST ANNUAL REPORT

Another Year of Solid Progress.

THE NEW INSURANCE WRITTEN EXCEEDS THAT OF ANY OTHER YEAR IN THE HISTORY OF THE COMPANY-- INCREASES MADE IN ALL DEPARTMENTS OF THE COMPANY'S BUSINESS.

The Twenty-first annual meeting of the Confederation Life Association was held on Tuesday, May 9, at 3 o'clock in the board room of the company's new building in Toronto.

The Hon. Sir W. P. Howland, C.B., K.C., M.G., occupied the chair, and the Managing Director, Mr. J. K. Macdonald, was appointed Secretary. There was a large attendance of policyholders and shareholders of the association, among those present being: Edward Hooper, vice-president; W. H. Beatty, Walter S. Lee, W. H. Gibbs, George Mitchell, of Halifax, N.S.; S. Nordheimer, A. McLean Howard, J. D. Edgar, M.P.; Alfred Gooderham, Jas. Beatty, Q.C.; H. H. Ogden, J.S. Huston, I. Diamond, C. M. Gripton, R. R. Gamey, R. S. Baird, Alfred Myers, C. E. Hooper, W. A. Lamb, Dr. Wm. Oldright, W. McGibbon, J. M. Richardson, J. P. Donald, Henry Harper, F. W. Green, Provincial Manager C.L.A., Halifax; W. R. Harris, D. McDonald, Inspector Manitoba, Northwest Territories and British Columbia; J. Tower Boyd, Inspector Eastern Ontario; Thomas Sanderson, Inspector Western Ontario; F. H. Heath, H. S. Snow, F. H. Johnston, Rev. Mr. Ball, John Colridge, D. George Chestnut, A. W. R. Markley, Calgary; G. W. Parker, of St. John, N.B.; James Mussen, P. D. McKinnon, Winnipeg; R. H. Gamble, A. J. Russell Snow, R. J. Hunter, W. Macdonald, J. L. Kerr, etc., etc.,

The President opened the meeting by calling upon the Secretary to read a copy of the advertisement and of the notices to the shareholders calling the meeting.

The minutes of the last meeting were taken as read and formally adopted.

THE FOLLOWING REPORT AND FINANCIAL STATEMENTS WERE THEN SUBMITTED TO THE MEETING:

ANNUAL REPORT.

Your directors beg to lay before the shareholders and policyholders their report for the past year. In doing so they take the opportunity to express their gratification at the striking evidences of the growing popularity of the Association, shown by the large increase in new business. It should be borne in mind that the business obtained by the Association is drawn entirely from the healthy lives of our own Dominion, and has been secured without resorting to the far too common practice, on the part of some companies of granting policies for nothing, or for a small portion of the premium for the first year. Nor has it been obtained by insuring lives in climates and countries where the mortality experience must prove unfavorable, and consequently injurious to the Canadian policyholders.

The question of extending the operations of the association to points outside of Canada is one which may require more than a mere incidental consideration from your Board, and if at any time it should be decided to go outside, the operations will be restricted to countries where the mortality will not injuriously react upon our home policyholders. There is, however, very much to be said in favor of confining the business to Canada, and growing with its growth.

The new business is much the largest of any year in the history of the Association. There were 2,388 applicants for $3,815,050. Of these 2,258 for $3,596,550 were approved, and the balance declined or withdrawn. Adding to the new issue the revived policies of previous years and bonus additions, the total new business was 2,291 policies for $3,672,591 of insurance.

The total insurance in force at the close of the year was $22,565,752, under 14,674 policies on 12,914 lives.

The death claims which arose during the year aggregated the sum of $173,751, under 105 policies on 86 lives. The mortality continues favorable, and the amount of the death claims confirms very closely to that of the previous year.

The financial statement herewith submitted exhibits fully the Company's position at the present time.

The audit has been made in a thorough prompt and satisfactory manner. The report of the auditors will be found following the financial statements.

The handsome Head Office building is now almost finished. The Association took possession of that part occupied by the company on October 11th, and the first meeting of the Board was held in the new Board Room on the following day. The Association's offices are handsome, commodious, and well lighted, and are in every way suitable for its present and future business. A considerable portion has been rented, and very much more would have been but for the great and unlooked-for delay in completing it. The western block will soon be ready, when it is anticipated satisfactory arrangements for renting will be made. Your Directors believe that already the Association has derived great benefit from the erection of our Head Office building, as there is no doubt it has had the effect of giving a feeling of increased security, and its future as a paying investment is assured. The future of the City of Toronto is the best guarantee of the future of our building. Situated in the very centre of the city, the day is not far distant when the demand for the spacious, airy and well-lighted renting spaces will yield a better return than the best investment of the Association.

Under the Act of Incorporation all the Directors retire, but are eligible for re-election.

W. P. HOWLAND,

President.

AUDITORS' REPORT.

We beg to report that we have completed the audit of the books of the Association for the year ending December 31st, 1892, and have examined the vouchers connected therewith, and certify that the financial statements agree with the books and are correct.

The securities represented in the Assets (with the exception of those lodged with the Dominion Government, amounting to $84,500), have been examined and compared with the books of the Association and are correct, and correspond with the Schedules and Ledgers.

The Bank Balances and Cash are certified as correct.

(Signed),

W. R. HARRIS,

WM. E. WATSON, Auditors.

Toronto, February 10th, 1893.

The President, Sir W. P. Howland, in moving the adoption of the annual report and financial statements submitted therewith, pointed out that, notwithstanding the increased competition encountered, the new business of the past year showed a gain over the previous year of $755,363, and there was in force at the end of the year the very large amount of $22,565,752, an increase in the amount at risk over that of December, 1891, of close upon $2,000,000, this being the largest business ever done in any year of the Company's history. The operations of the Company have extended and increased in every part of the Dominion, and, as the report shows, it is rapidly gaining in public confidence wherever represented.

Mr. Edward Hooper, Vice-President, said that the magnificent business of the Company had placed it in the very first rank of Canadian Companies. He referred to the organization of the Company and that he was one of the original stockholders. His confidence in its future was established when it became known to him that Mr. Macdonald, its present Managing Director, was to be at the helm. He expressed great joy at the unexpected pleasure of being present today. He had been present at the first meeting in connection with the formation of the Company and had much pleasure in seconding the adoption of the report.

Mr. Macdonald, the Managing Director, voluntarily offered an explanation in regard to one or two of the items contained in the report, and stated in conclusion that the business of the Association for the present year was so far eminently satisfactory. The applications for new insurance are over one-third greater than for the corresponding period of 1892 or any former year. The interest income shows an increase up to the end of last month of over $10,000, and the premium income, speaking from memory, of over $15,000. (Applause.)

The motion in regard to the adoption of the report was then unanimously carried.

Mr. George Mitchell, of Halifax, N.S., in reply to a motion of thanks, which was duly passed to the General and Local Directors of the Association, expressed his great satisfaction with the Company's new building after a thorough inspection of it. He also expressed his surprise at the growth and solidity of Toronto, his last visit to the city having been made 25 years ago. Speaking for the Maritime Provinces, he said: "The Confederation life has been steadily growing in public favor. The Manager for the Maritime Provinces, Mr. F. W. Green, has proved himself to be thoroughly competent and everywhere popular, and his early training at the head office, and the knowledge gained while there concerning the affairs of the Company gives him a measure of confidence which proves invaluable to him and those under him in his field-work. I am proud to feel that the Maritime Provinces are contributing largely to the success and prosperity of this great Company." He thought that all Canadians, east and west, should unite in sustaining our home companies instead of giving business to foreign ones.

Mr. W. H. Gibbs moved, seconded by Mr. Walter S. Lee, That the thanks of the meeting be tendered to the officers, agents, etc., of the Association for their efforts during the past year.

Mr. F. W. Green, Manager for the Maritime Provinces, replying on behalf of the field-workers of the Association, expressed his great pleasure at being present at the first annual meeting of the Association in its new head office building. Agents of some rival companies endeavored to depreciate the Association in connection with its building. His answer to these was, that the building was the outcome of the matured judgment of the same Board of Directors who had made the Company such a phenomenal success from its formation, and which was in itself an evidence of the wisdom and enterprise of the management. Referring to the statements made in the report in regard to the too common and pernicious habit of rebating, he said: "That although in the last four years several million dollars worth of new business had been sent in from the Maritime Provinces, not a single policy had been obtained by a rebate or concession of even so much as one cent. The Company had firmly fought the common practice of rebating, and he hoped it would continue to set its face against it."

Mr. A. W. R. Markley, of Calgary, and others spoke, expressing their pleasure at being present at the meeting, and referred in complimentary terms to the high appreciation in which the Association is held by the insuring public.

After some further routine business a poll was duly opened for the election of directors. All the members of the former board were re-elected.

Mr. W. H. Beatty, then, at the request of the President, unveiled a portrait of the Managing Director, painted by Mr. G. A. Reid, of Toronto, and in a few graceful words presented it on behalf of the directors to the Association. Mr. Beatty referred to the fact that he had attended the first meeting of the Insurance Committee, and that the first application offered was that of Mr. Macdonald's, and it was a coincidence that the first board meeting in the new building was on the fifty-fifth anniversary of his birthday. (Applause.)

Mr. Macdonald, in acknowledging the compliment paid him in painting the portrait, referred to the many acts of kindness of the directors and to the agreeable manner in which all suggestions and recommendations made by him to the board had been received, and he might say, generally accepted. He stated that he would have been disinclined to accede to the request to have his portrait painted had it not been at the suggestion of the President, and pressed upon him. He trusted that the remaining years of his life would be spent, as so many had already been given, to the building up of the Confederation Life Association, which had now become a part of his very existence. (Applause.)

The meeting then adjourned, immediately after which a meeting of the new Board of Directors was held, and Sir W. P. Howland was re-elected President, and Messrs. William Elliot and Edward Hooper, Vice-Presidents, the remaining directors of the Board being: W. H. Beatty, Esq.; Hon. James Young, S. Nordheimer, Esq.; Ex-Ald. W. H. Gibbs, A. McLean Howard, Esq.; J. D. Edgar, Esq., M.P.; Walter S. Lee, Esq.; A. L. Gooderham, Esq.; W. D. Matthews, Esq.; George Mitchell, Esq., Halifax, and J. K. Macdonald, Managing Director.

BUSINESS CHANGES.

PARTNERSHIPS FORMED AND DISSOLVED.

L. Marchand & Co., grocers, Montreal, have dissolved.

W. Benton, grocer, Carberry, Man., has sold out to John Farley.

L. C. Rogers, boots and shoes, Regina, is reported to be selling out.

Parker & Bray, general store, Preston, have dissolved and have been succeeded by Bray Bros.

J. W. Guerin and J. M. De Repentigny have been registered partners to do business as grocers, Montreal.

Dame Agnes Vayer, wife of P. J. Gearney, has been registered to do business as general trader, Montreal.

Hormidas Laporte, Jean Baptiste, A. Martin and Joseph O. Bancher have registered a continuation of the partnership of Laporte, Martin & Co., wholesale grocers, Montreal.

DIFFICULTIES, ASSIGNMENTS, COMPROMISES.

James Dickson, general store, Austin, Man., has assigned.

F. Carriere & Fields, grocers and liquors, Quebec, have suspended.

Thomas Laing, baker, Montreal, has compromised at 25c. on the dollar.

C. & A. Inkman, general merchants, Agassiz, B.C., are asking an extension.

J. H. McMillan, grocer, Nanaimo, B.C., has assigned in trust to Mayor & Eldridge.

Assignee W. A. Campbell is in possession of the grocery store of Christopher Dempsey, 826 Yonge street, Toronto. Mr. Dempsey is reported to be away and Mrs. Dempsey consented to this action in the interest of the creditors.

The sheriff has seized the stock of M. A. Benjamin, grocer, 382 Yonge street, Toronto, under an execution held by G. W. Ostrom, of Trenton. Mrs. Benjamin claims the stock, and Mr. Winchester, on motion of R. J. MacLennan, directed an interpleader issue. This trouble arises out of the famous suit of Ostrom vs. Benjamin, which went to the Court of Appeal. The costs and sum sued for now amount to $789, all of which Ostrom claims, he having won in the Court of Appeal.

W. Farley, dealer in wines and liquors, 666 Queen street west, has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors to Henry Barber & Co. The statement shows liabilities of $2,500 and assets of $1,000.

The American Oil Company, 29 Adelaide street west, Toronto, has assigned to E. R. C. Clarkson. Both the liabilities and assets are light. This does not affect the big company proper in the United States, from which the present branch sprung.

A Trenton grocer named J. Wannamaker has assigned to W. Hope, of that town. Several wholesale houses in the city are interested. Wannamaker after starting in business paid cash for all his stock procured, and previous to his assignment had secured several large orders on time.

CHANGES.

Isaac Wise, grocer, Pickering, is giving up business.

J. B. Browne, grocer, Hamilton, is giving up business.

T. Milbee, boots and shoes, Barrie, is giving up business.

J. W. Bannister, grocer, Vanessa, has sold out to George Homry.

C. S. Ash, general merchant, Hastings, has sold out to W. C. Hazlewood.

Shier & Marshall, general merchants, Brookdale, have removed to Kinkton.

Stephen Chase, grocer and provisions, Brighton, has sold out to James Ross.

C. E. Caulton, general store, Lyndoch, is out of business and is now in Tilsonburg.

W. L. Bottomley, liquors and cigars, Tilsonburg, has sold out to J. G. Bottomley.

D. Muir & Co., produce, Montreal, have been succeeded by A. L. Calderhead & Co.

N. Lee & Co., general merchants, Wroxtor, have been succeeded by W. C. Hazlewood.

A partnership has been registered between A. Lapointe and Delle Georgina Lapointe, to do business as provision dealers in Quebec.

J. W. Phillips, grocer, and flour and feed dealer, Hepworth, has been succeeded by A. C. Willett.

SALES MADE OR PENDING.

The stock of Wm. Kenney, grocer, etc., Sarnia, is advertised to be sold by auction, May 23.

At Suckling's auction rooms Tuesday the stock of Jennings & Co., Simcoe, amounting to $23,400, was sold to Oscar Henry, of Simcoe, for 60c. on the dollar. The stock of R. & T. Gray & Co., Duntroon, amounting to $2,260, was sold to Henry Marshall for 53c. on the dollar.

DEATHS.

John Roper, grocer etc., Calidonia, is dead.

John O'Reilly, general merchant, St. Eugene, Ont., is dead.

J. C. Steen, of the wholesale liquor firm of G. A. Bigelow & Co., Nelson, B.C., is dead.

FIRES.

J. Milne & Son, grocers, etc., Stirling, have been partially burned out.

W. M. Boyd, druggist, and A. W. Dalton, general merchant, Carberry, Man., were victims of the recent fire that visited that place.

The appraisers have got through their work at the scene of the recent big fire at the Grant-Lottridge brewery, Hamilton. At first it was expected that the loss would be $50,000 to $60,000, but many thousands of bushels of barley that were supposed to have been totally ruined were found to be fit for use, having only to be dried again. The loss has been fixed at $39,606, made up as follows:—On buildings, $11,325; on plant and machinery, $1,281; on stock, $27,000; total, $39,606.

The big handlers of eggs are not in the best of humor these days; and the condition of prices is the cause. When the McKinley Act went into force in 1891 Canada was deprived of her chief egg customer, and handlers, both big and little, began to turn their attention to the English market, to which shipments were made as fast as possible. The result that season was disastrous; to the small dealers it was extermination. Last fall the small men did not attempt the experiment, at least to any extent, but the large exporters again ventured in the English market. And they went at it in a manner that meant "make or break." As fast as they could do so they shipped out their cold storage and pickled eggs, in order to get as many as possible out before the closing of navigation. And on the whole they seem to have come out fairly well. They had profited by the previous year's experience, and secured better results largely because they adopted better methods. When shipping they calculated that there were just as many pickled eggs in the hands of small dealers as on previous years. But they made a miscalculation, as was proven by the scarcity and higher prices which ruled this spring.

There are a good many who fancy that not only will the high prices which ruled this spring again obtain next, but they have more or less hope that the United States tariff on eggs will be either removed or modified. Pinning their faith to these hopes they are sowing for the harvest they expect to reap. As the number of small dealers thus engaged is larger than before there is of course a keener demand for eggs and a consequent appreciation of prices. The price these small picklers seem to be paying is around ten cents. And just here is where the shoe is pinching the big exporters. They hold that nine cents a dozen is all that eggs are worth for pickling purposes, but owing to the competition they seem to be getting but very few at that price. Anything higher than that they hold to be above an export basis. In other words, that the course now being pursued is not legitimate, seeing that Canada is not able to absorb all her supplies. In order to further sustain their contention that ten cents is above an export basis they point to the fact that eggs for pickling purposes are being picked up in Ireland at equal to 13c. They hold that prices next fall will not be any higher this fall than last fall, and, in support of this opinion, say that they are willing to make contracts for autumn delivery of pickled eggs at 14½ to 15c., the figures then obtaining.

The wide-awake wholesaler is necessarily a busy man. Like a captain at sea, during critical periods he needs to be on deck during business hours. Of course there are times when he must have relaxation, but when—to again pick up the simile—he is supposed to be on deck, he should not be no one knows where when he is wanted, either by his subordinates or by some one on business matters. In other words, he should have as near as possible a definite time when he can be found in his office. In Great Britain and on the continent of Europe mercantile men are very particular in this respect and in the keeping of appointments. In Montreal they are not so particular, although it is said there is not much cause for complaint. But with Toronto merchants the representatives of European and foreign houses find cause for considerable complaint. Most of these men have been trained to have a time for everything, and when an appointment is made to keep it even if the heavens should fall. Consequently when they set their feet in Toronto and find carelessness in this particular they are likely to form a bad opinion of our business men. The merchants of the Queen City are probably the equal of those in any other city in ability, astuteness and energy, and it is to be deplored that a bad impression should go abroad regarding them because of a lapsus in one particular.

It's a long lane that has no turn. Canadians have been waiting patiently and long for the establishment of a direct line of steamships between the Dominion and the sister colonies in Australia. Now the want is supplied, and the first boat of the new service is at the moment ploughing her way through the blue waters of the Pacific towards British Columbia. She is the Miowera, and with the Warrimoo compose the line that is to keep up a monthly service between the two countries, touching at New Zealand, Honolulu and the Sandwich Islands. These boats are first-class, elegant in all appointments and 5,000 tons burthen. The Canadian Pacific Railway is at the back of the enterprise. For practically all our communication with Australia we have heretofore been dependent upon American lines running out of San Francisco, and how the new departure is viewed by our cousins across the line may be gathered from this comment made by a leading commercial paper over there during a reference to the sailing of the Miowera: "This, with the well-organized Japan and China service of the Canadian Pacific, will constitute an unrivaled organization in the world of Occidental and Oriental steamship transportation from America, the company's agents claim. The Canadian Pacific's Japan route has long given the Northern Pacific Railroad much trouble." And thus is being opened up another avenue for extending our trade relations with the outside world. That it will be successful is the wish of every loyal Canadian.

BUYING AND CARE OF BUTTER.

The season is about at hand when country merchants begin packing their receipts of butter in tubs. A word or two on the subject is therefore opportune; and it might be dealt with in these particulars: Buying, assorting colors and care before packing, packing, and care after packing.

Regarding buying. Every country merchant who handles butter realizes the annoyance and ill-feeling that is often created in this particular. And it arises largely when an attempt is made to exercise discrimination between the products of the good and the bad makers. There is nothing about which a woman is more sensitive than her butter, and therefore to question the quality of her make is a dangerous thing. Some merchants in effect argue something like this: "Here comes Mrs. Jones with some butter. We know it is not worth near as much as we are paying for good butter; but she is a good customer, trading with us to the extent of several hundred dollars a year, and anyhow only gives us a few pounds of butter during the season. Now, which is the better plan for us to pursue? To say frankly to Mrs. Jones that her butter is of poor quality, and that we cannot afford to allow her within several cents of what we are paying her neighbor, Mrs. Smith, whose butter is always good, or to say nothing and take the butter and the accompanying loss ourselves." As a rule the latter course is followed. For merchant A knows that if he calls her attention to the poor quality of her make and explains that he cannot in consequence allow her a first-class price, she at once assumes the greatest indignation, gathers up her butter and her skirts, flounces out of the store and marches over to merchant B, who takes in the situation, and intimates that merchant A is not a competent judge of butter. The upshot of it is that B. takes her butter, sells her probably a large bill of goods and secures, the chances are, a permanent customer. Of course, if he is to live he recoups himself for his loss on the butter by sticking an extra cent here and there on the price of the goods he sells her. Taking it all the way round, however, he who frankly tells his customers, in a polite manner, that their butter is not first-class when it is not, and pays them accordingly, will succeed best in the long run, for he earns a reputation for straight dealing and his butter will command a better price on the central markets. On the other hand, the deceitful course followed by merchant B will eventually meet its own reward. If he pays for poor butter the price ruling for the first-class article he must recoup himself by enhanced prices or short weight or short measure on the goods he sells; and his trick will ultimately be discovered. With what result is obvious. The aim of every merchant should be to raise the standard of Canadian butter to the highest point attainable in order that it may be able successfully to compete on the English market with the make of any country in the world. The course pursued by B has however the opposite tendency; for Mrs. Jones, as long as she can find some one foolish enough to pay her the value of first-class butter for her poor article has no incentive to improve the quality of her make. On the other hand, if she learns that Mrs. Smith gets a better price she will naturally adopt some improved method for bringing the quality of her butter at least up to the standard of that of her neighbor. Most likely she will try to surpass it. Give people an incentive for making better butter and the desideratum will soon be secured.

As to assorting colors and care before packing. Butter should be stored in a refrigerator or cool cellar immediately after being purchased, the different shades of rolls being kept separate. This latter precaution will save a great deal of work trying to get the desirable even color when packing. It will also tend to preserve the grain of the butter, which is often destroyed by too much mixing and handling. It is necessary that all trays and tables on which the butter is placed should be clean. Daylight is the best time for packing, especially in the morning, when the merchant is usually less busy and can consequently devote more time to the selection of the various shades and qualities.

Packing in tubs. The tub generally recommended is a fifty-pound one. Different dealers favor different kinds of wood. White ash, however, seems to be the most desirable, particularly should the butter be intended for export. Its strong recommendation is that it gives a stronger package than the white wood or spruce more commonly used. Before putting the butter in the tub the latter should be soaked in water at least twenty-four hours, and immediately before being used should be washed out with a strong solution of pickle. The butter should be packed firmly and to within about three-quarters of an inch from the top. This is to allow for salting and to prevent the butter running over during hot weather.

The butter once packed, the next duty is the care of it. Over the top of it should be laid a clean white cotton cloth. This is preferable to the oiled paper often used. The cloth should be tucked closely around the edge, leaving a small end exposed for convenience when trying the butter. The cloth should be covered with a layer of fine salt which should be moistened every two or three weeks while the butter is held. Early sales are however recommended, butter not keeping well in the ordinary cellars. The only satisfactory way in which to hold butter during the hot summer weather is in cold storage.

Owing to the heavy losses which exporters of creamery butter have experienced last season dealers look for a much lower range of values this season. The tendency of prices in England is still downward and the markets there are demoralized. Shippers who have had their butter returned from the Old Country this spring find that their losses are not so heavy as they would have been had they allowed their stuff to be slaughtered on the other side of the Atlantic. THE GROCER heard of one instance where returned butter sold on this market at 23c. which would not have realized more than 16c. had it remained in England. In the face of the present condition of the English market it is obvious that extra care should be taken to preserve the quality of Canadian butter, and this can be best begun when buying and packing.

TRAVELLERS MAKE MERRY.

The City Travellers' Association of Toronto has become one of the most live and prosperous fraternal organizations in the city.

In most associations an attendance of 25 per cent. of total membership is looked upon as gratifying. But in the C. T. A. the average runs up to 50 per cent. or more. As a result of this healthy condition the headquarters of the association in Richmond hall became too circumscribed and incommensurate. In looking around for new quarters the choice fell upon St. George's hall, in Elm street. The suite there engaged consisted of as prettily furnished and inviting a lodge room on the first floor as man ever rode a goat in, and as comfortable and spacious a reception room on the same floor as any association could desire to entertain its friends in.

Friday night last the new quarters were formally opened and a number of the friends of the members were there by invitation to share their hospitality. All told there was probably about one hundred and fifty present. And for their delectation ample entertainment was provided. Scattered promiscuously about the floor of the reception room were numbers of small tables at which some of the guests sat and played cards, checkers, etc., while others lounged about enjoying the excellent program of instrumental and vocal music and the choice cigars provided for the occasion, or strolled into one of the anti-rooms, where light refreshments were always to be had.

R. M. Corrie was master of ceremonies, and the program consisted of solos by Chas. Dinnick, W. Walmsley (comic), James

CHICAGO NOTES.

Owen, G. S. Crean, George Barron, R. A. Donald, Thomas Macdonald, G. F. Beard, E. B. Piggott (comic), E. Davis, W. T. Harrison, J. B. Morrison; saxophone solo by J. W. King; duet by W. H. Paget and J. Owen; piano solo by A. E. Harding. All the artists acquitted themselves well and every number demanded an enchoire. The entertainment was characteristic of the drummer—free and easy and full of life. From start to finish everything was on the swing. When the set program was exhausted an impromptu one of topical and popular songs was launched; and "Jimmy" Owen, as he is popularly known by his confreres of the gripsack, was the moving spirit.

During a brief intermission in the program President Gallow called on some of the guests for impromptu speeches.

President Clark of the Retail Grocers' Association warmly congratulated the C. T. A. upon its prosperity and the success of the entertainment. He reminded them that his association was to have an open meeting second Monday in June when the question: "Are commercial travellers' a benefit to the trade?" was to be debated. "And," he jocularly added, "I suppose you have brought us here to-night to soften our hearts and thereby induce us not to wipe you out of existence altogether." Amid the laughter that greeted this sally Mr. Clark modestly took his seat and had resumed his interrupted game of cards before it had subsided.

J. G. Gibson, vice-president Retail Grocers' Association, spoke briefly in his usual happy vein. He dwelt particularly on the advisability of associations such as that of the travellers and the grocers devoting more time meeting nights to entertainment and less to business. "I would like to see such meetings as this every month," he added amid a chorus of "hear, hear's."

R. A. Donald followed in much the same strain, during which he held up to criticism the idea obtaining among some merchants of keeping to themselves any methods that they may have found helpful to them in business. "If we have a good thing, let us tell it to our fellows, and by this means enlarge our minds and our usefulness," said he; and the applause which greeted the remark proved that he had struck a responsive chord.

George Little, a Parkdale druggist, then paid his tribute. Next W. Meldrum, representing the Peterboro' millinery firm of that name, spoke well and briefly, during which he said that although his firm had no occasion for doing business with commercial travellers, yet it recognised that they were an important factor in the conduct of the trade and commerce of the country.

And then the thread of the musical programme was picked up again and was not dropped till "Auld Lang Syne" brought the unique and interesting proceedings to a close.

It seems to be a settled fact that the Fair will be opened every Sunday. It will be remembered that the United States Government voted a large sum to the Columbian Exhibition on the express understanding that the Fair would be closed on Sunday. Of course, in a cosmopolitan city like Chicago the preponderance of opinion is that the show should be open every day in the week, to enable the working classes to attend and to take in more money. The World's Fair management have voted almost unanimously to return this sum, over two million dollars, to the Federal authorities. That is to say, they will return it—when they can. "After all the debts are paid," as one tersely puts it.

Be very chary of bogus "clubs," where for a membership fee of all the way from $5 to $50 you are to have the entrée to club circles, and meet, and be met by all the best people in the universe to discuss the social problems of the day. Your own hotel is sufficient club for all ordinary sightseers, where you can mingle with all sorts and conditions of men, and debate topics from baseball to the origin of man and the higher education of women.

The better class of down town hotels have not raised their rates, nor will they, all the season. At the same time, they expect chums and travelling companions to "double up" wherever practicable. No discounts need be given to societies or others, so you will not exhibit a button or a badge. By the way, the Americans dearly love a badge. I see them passing along all be-buttoned and be-badged like a perambulating wax-work show. "We don't propose to cut rates to travellers, press-men, or to an advance agent of a circus," remarked one of the hotel proprietors yesterday.

If desirous of seeing Chicago as well as the Fair, stop at one of the down town hotels and then you can spend the day at Jackson Park and in the evenings promenading the crowded streets or at the theatre. Should you care little for the City and a great deal for the Fair better patronize one of the numerous hotels close to the grounds. Take a room only and obtain all your meals on the grounds. To see everything bring lots of cash. It cost just twelve dollars and seventy-five cents to see all the villages and side shows on the midway plaisance without making a single purchase. Add twenty-five cents for a headache cure and you get off cheaply at thirteen dollars of Uncle Sam's money.

Coming to money. Bring American money. They eye the good honest Canadian money with as much suspicion as it came from Seringapatam or Chillingawobadoree. The big blonde cashier at the Auditorium

Barber Show bewitchingly informed me that she "guessed we don't take Canady money."

The news-boy preferred a "good square nickle" to our symetrical five cent piece.

In and about the beautiful exhibits the temptation to purchase some of the novelties on sale is very great. The handsome display, like the wind-up to an auctioneers advertisement, is too numerous to mention. Next to the big cheese, however, there is one exhibit which claims more than a passing glance, that is the display made by the Canada Paint Company of Montreal, Toronto and Victoria. An exhibit of "concentrated excellence" as a tourist remarked.

As I write the ladies are having a number of conventions in Columbus Hall. Several Canadian ladies have addressed the large assembly, and I notice amongst others that the Miss Johnson's, of Brantford, Ontario, come in for honorable mention for their great success in the literary world.

CONSUMPTION OF SUGAR IN JAPAN

There has been a remarkable increase in the importation and consumption of sugar in Japan during the past twenty years, which can scarcely have failed to have some effect on the course of the world's markets. In 1868 the declared value of the sugar imported by Japan was $918,700, and last year it was $10,000,000. A Japan native gives the total value of the sugar imported during the last twenty-four years as $98,840,000, or an average of about $4,300,000 per annum. In 1880 the declared value was $3,630,000, and in 1891 $8,490,000. Meanwhile the value of the sugar produced in Japan itself has increased from $1,700,000 in 1884 to upwards of $6,000,000 in recent years.

CURIOUS FIND IN A TEA CHEST.

J. H. Jones, who is in charge of the store department of the Longford Lumber Company, Longford Mills, made a curious find the other day. He was opening a package of tea purchased from a Toronto wholesale house when he discovered, embedded in its contents, an embossed leather opium case about 4½ inches long. There were two departments in the case. One contained an iron pipe, with mouth-piece and bowl of brass, and the other a supply of opium. The case and its contents were handed over to William Thompson, president of the company, who holds it as a curio.

It is surmised that it either fell into the chest from the pocket of a careless Japanese workman or that it was hid in the tea by the latter on the approach of an overseer and had not an opportunity of removing it.

Several of Mr. Jones' friends are jocularly charging him with having obtained the curio from the Indian reserve near Lambton Mills and palming it off as a Japanese curio, but of course "there is nothing in it."

THE TEA DISTRICTS OF INDIA.

FLAVORS AND FLUSHINGS.

DEAR GROCER,—In closing my last letter I promised to deal further with the separate flavors and how to distinguish them.

While in a general way the districts that are widely removed geographically are readily distinguished one from the other in taste and smell, yet to say that so many pounds of several kinds of tea will make a good blend, is to say what is practically nonsense. While I know in some cases that a tea is pleasing to my taste, whether of one kind or mixed sorts, yet to say that the same quantities of teas bearing the same name will suit the grocer and his customer universally, is to mislead him if he acts on the suggestion. The grocer will only be successful when he draws his tea irrespective of where the goods came from, or when. Because a tea came from a certain garden and turns out exceptionally fine, is no guarantee that another lot from the same place will prove equally good. Tea from the same garden has the same chance of turning out uniformly good as has hay cut from the same farm during different seasons, or even days! A tea picked from young plants of a good variety, in the best part of the season (i. e., when the flushes come up quickly), may be ruined by damp weather, over fermentation, bad firing, or any other part of the operations necessary to prepare the tea for the market. A flush is the growth of tea after the last picking, the number of flushes varying with the latitude and elevation above sea level; also affected by the rain fall.

Yours, etc.,

D. S. MACROQUODALE.

NOTE—The actual returns for the year make the export of tea about five million pounds over my estimate.

SUGAR AND SOAP.

Another striking illustration of the proof of our contention that it is possible for the retailers to advance their prices in sympathy with a hardening market and that customers will pay the increase without demur when justified by circumstances has been furnished by the rise which took place recently in tallow. Immediately it was known that the market had advanced, soap-makers raised their quotations £2 per ton, and, when it declined, reduced them by half that amount. Retailers who happened to be in short supply, and had to satisfy their requirements in a dearer market, as well as those who had stock on hand, followed the example set by the manufacturers and distributors. What was the result? That the public refused to buy except at the old price? Not a bit of it. The simple statement that the price of soap had advanced sufficed to assure the public that the extra charge made was fair and reasonable, so they paid it. And even had the advance made by the retailers been somewhat out of proportion to the rise in the wholesale market, the public would still have paid it, for soap they want and soap they must have. But such a probability as that tradesmen would demand more than a fair increase need not be discussed, for competition would put an effectual check on anything like unjustifiable over-charging.

The point for the trade to seize and ponder over is this: If the public are prepared to pay more for soap than they were accustomed to a few weeks ago, why should there be any difficulty in getting them to disburse a farthing extra per pound for sugar? Sugar is quite as indispensable as soap, and its consumption would not be materially affected, if at all, by the imposition of a legitimate profit. Take another illustration. When the present tariff came into operation, the prices of many household commodities were immediately raised to an extent which, roughly speaking, correspond to the customs duty. The public knew that the duty had increased the cost, and they paid it, not, however, without murmuring, though their complaints were directed, not against the storekeeper so much as against the treasurer.

Here, then, we contend, are two incontrovertible arguments in favor of advancing the price of sugar to a point which will yield to the retailer a fair margin of profit. There is no need to repeat the antiquated truism that selling a commodity for what it costs means a loss to the vendor; but we would urge the trade to put their shoulder to the wheel, and try to bring about the reform of an insane system which countenances such a transaction. Even at the risk of being charged with frequent repetition, we repeat that it only requires some one to take the lead. Uncomplimentary though it may be to say so, men are very much like sheep; they follow the bell. This proposal, we point out, involves no question of concession; it is not a matter which means a gain to one storekeeper at the expense of his competitor. It will confer a benefit in which all will share to the detriment of none. In these times when profits are cut so low, and competition is so keen, a man must be as mad as a March hare who does not endeavor to secure a fair margin between the buying and the selling price of every article he has in his store. You say this cannot be accomplished by a man single-handed? Very well; the solution of the difficulty can be summed up in one word—combine.—The Storekeeper, Sydney, N.S.W.

DECAY IN THE APPLE BARREL.

The ordinary method of treating the apple if its decay is to be prevented, is to pick it carefully, without bruises, and to place the barrels in a dry, cool room where the natural tendencies to decay may be resisted as long as possible. This subject has been studied scientifically by a professor in Rutgers College, Dr. Byron D. Halsted, and in his paper in the May Popular Science Monthly light is thrown upon the treatment of apples. Ordinarily no attention is paid to them until they are grown, but this writer takes us back to the time of the apple blossoms, and shows that if good fruit is to be secured in a healthy condition it must be protected from the beginning. The small specks that dot the surface of an apple that is just springing from a blossom are one of the low forms of plant life belonging to the molds called spores. These spores are produced in great abundance, and, being carried by the air, alight upon the fruit, and there germinate into specks which feed upon the substance obtained from the skin of the apple. Whenever these specks are observed it is certain that the apple will decay.

Another defect in apples is known to fruit-dealers as the "scab." This is due to a mould which is as different in its real structure from the specks as the two are unlike in general appearance. It is as much a distinct kind of plant as the apple tree upon which it thrives. The apples are first attacked by the scab fungus while the tree is in blossom or shortly after, and this fact is what makes it necessary that the fruit should be treated as soon as the apple tree is in blossom. The germs which gather in the form of a scab are the germs of bacteria, and as soon as the skin of the apple becomes broken in any place, the coarser decay germs enter and quickly overrun it with a motely vegetation of various molds. All these products rot, and the question of saving the apples is transferred to the matter of doing something for the fruit while it is yet untouched by the bacteria that are floating in the air. What Dr. Halsted suggests is that this decay of the fruit shall be anticipated. Nature tries to protect the apple in all the processes of its growth, but the bacteria are sure to appear whenever they can find their way through the tough skin. The only way in which the apples can be saved is by protecting their skins by the use of fungicides in the orchard while the fruit is growing, then by picking the fruit carefully and by placing it in a cold, dry room, where it is free from fungus germs, and where it will keep indefinitely until chemical change ruins it as an article of food.

There is no absolute protection for the ripened fruit, or for the keeping off the specks and blotches where the bacteria lodge, ready to prey upon the fruit at the first opportunity. Each of these spores feed upon the ruptured pimples in the skin of the apple, and the only way to keep the harvested fruit effectively is to spray it with a fungicide, and even this will not do it, excepting under the most favorable circumstances. The only sure way to keep fruit is to cook it until the germs within it have been killed, and then to can it to prevent the entrance of those without. If the fungicides are used freely in the orchard while the fruit is growing, the result will be a fairer fruit and the prevention of it from decay to a large extent. Use this prevention, pick the apples so as to avoid bruises, place them in a dry storage room, and you will have fruit that will last as long as the chemical substance will allow. This is in substance the only treatment that will prevent the apple from decay.

JOHORE TEA.

Just across the famous old Straits of Malacca is the Sultanate of Johore, the only independent Malay Kingdom on the peninsula, writes U. S. Consul Wildman. Under the wise and humane rule of its enlightened prince, Johore has kept along abreast of the more stirring English civilization of Singapore, and its 15,000 square miles are under as good cultivation as any part of the English colony, and its 20,000 inhabitants as loyal and patriotic as the neighbouring Europeans. The Sultan, in his work of building up his country, has gone outside the natural products of the soil and has experimented with staple productions that are native to other sections. In coffee, pepper, and tea his experiments have proved so far successful that to-day they comprise the chief output of his little kingdom, outstripping in value the native products of the soil—sago, tapioca, cocoa, pineapple, gambier, spices, and gums. Especially in regard to tea has the soil proved efficacious, giving it a delicious odour and flavour that to the taste of many connoisseurs places it ahead of the original Assam or the now famous Ceylon. As the Sultan will, through my solicitation, send an exhibit of Johore tea to the Chicago exposition, I have thought that a description of its growth and quality might be of interest to the lovers of good tea.

The Michaelstowe tea gardens, in the Sultan of Johore's territory, have an area of 800 acres, of which 165 are under cultivation. It is most conveniently situated on the river Scudie, 25 miles from Singapore by water, and eight miles by road from Johore. It is planted with Assam hybrid, which, in this steamy climate, "flushes" all the year round. The leaves plucked are the young shoots, the bud and the two small leaves next to it only being pinched. As these are picked off, fresh shoots are thrown out, and in about eight days are ready for plucking. These young shoots are called "flushes," and on the average each bush flushes three times a month. The tea tree has been known to bear for forty years.

In Johore no crop was picked until five years old, but this was due to difficulties in starting a new industry in a foreign country. Planting was commenced in 1882, when labor was difficult to find and expensive to keep; now, in 1892, thanks to the wise government of the State by its enlightened ruler, labor is cheap and plentiful. Coolies in these gardens receive 18 cents in Mexican silver per diem for every day they work (or, at present exchange, say 12 cents in American money). The whole garden has to be dug over three times a year, and, with manure once in three years, is capable of producing an all-round average of 500 pounds per acre. The bushes are planted five feet apart in rows also five feet apart. They grow and flush well on these low-country lands, and produce teas remarkable for their strength, which are greatly in favor both in Australia and London, fetching equal prices in the market with Ceylon teas grown at the same elevation.

The teas are, owing to their strength, used by the trade for blending with China teas; they are also excellent drinking teas, but must be freshly made as an infusion, not a decoction. Boiling water poured on the leaf should be allowed to stand for four minutes, then the liquor poured off into another vessel, and the leaf thrown away; if nice tea be wanted fresh leaf must be used. Every morning with the exception of Friday (the Mohammedan Sunday) men, women and children are called out at day break by a horn to pluck the young leaves. At 11 a.m. the horn is again the signal for their return to the factory to have their morning's pluckings weighed by the manager.

Pluckers are paid at a fixed rate per pound of green leaf. Each basket of leaf, as it is handed in, is weighed by the mandore, the weight of the basket deducted, and a ticket for the balance handed over. At 1 p.m. the horn calls them out again, and a similar weighing operation takes place at 5 p.m., excepting only that the morning tickets are called in and the total pluckings for the day put against the name of each plucker in the check roll. With a good flush of leaf on the bushes a smart plucker can pick sixty pounds of leaf in a day. The green leaf thus received into the factory is then handed over to a set of Chinese coolies (also on contract), who have to turn it into "made tea." First, all the leaves are sprinkled over bamboo trays and placed on stands in the upper floor of the factory under cover in order to "wither." The leaf must be handled as little as possible. Second, when the leaves are sufficiently withered, which is known by touch and color and the time it takes, depending very much upon the state of the weather (wet or dry), they are put into a "rolling" machine (in this case a hand roller, in large factories, steam or water power is used), the box of which holds a charge of fifty pounds. The box is so constructed that when in motion, sliding over a wooden platform it thoroughly presses, twists and rolls the leaf without losing the juice. A charge takes about an hour to properly roll, when it is ready for the third stage, which is fermentation. The "roll" or mass of leaf is withdrawn from the roller, is pressed into a heap, upon a low table, and turned over repeatedly by hand until the whole mass changes from its previous yellowish-green to a bright coppery color, which takes place in about an hour. Fourthly, the fermented roll is spread over wire-gauze trays and placed in the "sirocco," which is a large iron chest over a furnace. The temperature of the air in this chest is raised to 260 deg. F. There are four trays, which slide into the chest at different levels; the topmost tray filled with the roll is put in first and after five minutes is withdrawn, turned over by hand, and placed on the second shelf, a newly-filled tray taking its place on the top shelf, and so on until the first tray has passed through the four slides, when it has become "made tea." About 100 pounds can be manipulated in an hour.

Sorting into grades is the fifth stage. The unassorted teas are fed into a machine consisting of two long cylinders composed of wire mesh of different degrees of fineness. As the cylinders are made to revolve by turning the handle the tea works down the top horizontal cylinder, dropping out through the meshes according to size, and finally falls into the bottom horizontal cylinder and out at its further end. The finest mesh, of course, gives the best tea, the lower cylinder being the coarsest. The grades are—(1) broken orange pekoe, (2) orange pekoe, (3) broken pekoe, (4) pekoe, (5) pekoe souchong, (6) souchong. About 40 per cent. of the tea made turns out pekoes, the balance souchongs.

The sixth and last stage comprises—(1) weighing the different grades, upon which weight the factory coolies are paid at a fixed rate per pound (about four and a quarter pounds of green leaf make one pound of manufactured tea); (2) tasting (to detect burnt, badly rolled, under or over fermented teas); (3) filling into wooden chests lined with lead and soldering down, each holding about 50 pounds on the average, before which the tea has to be passed through the sirocco quickly once again, in order to expel all moisture before packing, an operation which is known as "final firing"; (4) marking the chests with the description of tea, weight, and garden mark—"Stowe" standing for "Michaelstowe," the name of the garden, in a diamond mark; "P.S." stands for Pekoe souchong; "1," the number of the chest, is the "break" of tea to be shipped; "50," the number of pounds in the chest. The chests are bound with rattan split in two, and nailed in two bands round the chests. They are then entered in the despatch book with their proper gross and net weights, taken to the river, and despatched to Singapore by Chinese junks, thence transhipped to steamers for Australia and London.

Both Hamburg and Middlebrough are securing a good deal of the export salt trade, which a few years back was almost exclusively confined to Liverpool. Since the union was formed and prices were put up, buyers in some instances went to either Hamburg or Middlebrough, and since then these ports have made fair shipments to Calcutta and Rangoon. The Hamburg and Middlebrough berths are scarcely ever without vessels, and at the present moment several thousands of tons of salt are being loaded at both places for Calcutta and Rangoon. West Hartlepool is now entering as a competitor with Liverpool in the salt trade.—London Grocer.

THE TEA TRADE.

The publication of the dock companies' returns to the end of April completes eleven months of the season, and enables us to review the situation with some approximation as to what the total for the year will be when completed. It can scarcely be said that the figures are pleasant reading to the trade, as all the increased consumption which was apparent to the end of last December has now been lost; and instead the deliveries show a falling off for the 11 months of 6,200,000 lbs., against last year. To this deficiency Indian tea contributes 700,000 lbs., and China tea nearly 10 millions, but as Ceylon shows an increase of between 3 and 4 millions the adverse balance is reduced by so much. On the side of imports there is also a considerable falling off; a decrease of 6,000,000 lbs. in China tea, 3,000,000 lbs. in Indian tea, and about half-a-million in Ceylon tea, while Java has come to the front again by reverting to the figures of two years ago, and showing an increase of upwards of a million pounds in 1892. The net result is that the total imports for the last eleven months stand at 223,267,854 lbs., against 231,553,731 lbs. last year. The stock of April 30 of all kinds was reduced to 77,251,539 lbs., against 82,040,048 lbs. last year, and 82,339,256 lbs. in 1891, so that although the imports and deliveries are both lower than they were a year ago, it is satisfactory to note that stocks are not accumulating on the eve of the new season. A variety of reasons have no doubt contributed to the result above indicated. First, no doubt, is the very natural conclusion that as the quantity of tea has not arrived it could not be offered to the trade, and therefore could not pass into consumption. Secondly, the state of the labor market in most of the great manufacturing centres has been very unsettled for many months. Strikes and lock-outs are not at all conducive to an increased consumption of tea. If the wages fund is reduced the purchasing power diminishes, and the pound of tea which the good wife lays in on Saturday night has frequently to last out ten or twelve days instead of a week, or in some cases has to be done away with altogether. Thirdly, no doubt the deliveries during the last few months have been curtailed as much as possible owing to a belief in the minds of many that, under a Democratic Cabinet, supported by a majority pledged to economical reform, a reduction of the duty on tea would certainly be attempted. The deliveries since it became known that such hopes were almost further off than ever, have shown a very considerable increase, and it is quite possible that by the end of May, when the full totals of the year are published, the natural everyday demand will have to a great extent reduced the adverse balance. It must not be overlooked, however, that the price of common tea is 20 per cent. higher to-day than it was a year ago, and consequently dealers are not eager to hold heavy stocks. At the same time they cannot keep out of the market, for their customers do not hold a stock of tea, and they want it, and whilst the market has been in such a strong position since December, the supplies of old bought stuff have been steadily going off, leaving every dealer in the same exhausted condition. Consequently the immediate effect of any reduction in market value would be to bring into the sales a multitude of eager buyers who are in extremities for what is called "tea for price." It is therefore the opinion of "The Lane" that until July the price of common leaf tea will maintain its value. Present quotations on the speculative market are: May, 8 11-16d.; June, 8 10-16d.; July, 8 6-16d.; by which it will be seen that in the judgment of those who forecast the future to make profit thereby, leaf tea will be 1-4d. per lb. cheaper in July than it is now. This is not our function to predict. We place the information before our readers, and leave them to form their own opinions. --Grocers' Chronicle, London.

THE COUNTRY STORE.

It may seem to be a very simple thing to go into a small country place and open a store and succeed. But it is like all other undertakings, there are more than one way to run the country store. The man who thinks there is nothing in it that requires thought and brains will certainly not succeed.

The man who looks upon it as a simple business will open his store with just the most meagre line of the commonest necessities, heap the goods up anywhere out of sight, or in sight, and sit down to wait for a customer to come in and ask for just this or that specific article, get it and go away. That is not the way to run a country store. There is a knack in it.

The man who realizes that there is scope even in a small country store for the exercise of thought will see that his customers shall not enter his store and leave without at least seeing something that might be sold to the mutual advantage of each. He will not put his goods under the counter nor in the back room. He knows it would be as detrimental to his business as it was to the moralists' influence who put his light under a bushel. His goods are carefully displayed. A nice show window is a pretty cheap way to advertise and to attract the customer who comes to buy and also the one who passes by to go somewhere else perhaps.

The successful country merchant studies the best interests of his customers and to this end he is always looking for something that he thinks might sell and make housekeeping a little easier. Articles not called for he will not order in quantity, but he will send for a small trial order, and he will display this in the most attractive way so as to attract the eye. If it is not noticed he may with perfect propriety call attention to it as a convenient or economical food, or for whatever purpose it is intended. In these days of canned goods, of nice little devices to make housekeeping easy, especially to people who do their own work, of cheap artistic notions that make a home pretty, there is a multitude of ways to increase trade, and to the benefit of the customer as well as to that of the merchant. Canned salmon is a most delicious luxury sold at the price of the cheapest necessity in its line. It is cheaper than butcher's meat, makes a very agreeable change, and is so easily prepared. The same is true of other canned goods.

These are simply suggestions. They may be multiplied at will, and it would take columns to exhaust the topic. The successful merchant will simply keep his eyes and ears open and all the time reach out in new ways to increase his trade. He reads advertisements and studies lists of goods to see what he can find to place before his customers to the advantage of them as well as of himself. And he will not neglect to let his neighbors hear from him from time to time as to what he has. We believe the columns of the little town paper is a better medium than all the circulars and handbills he can send out. We are a reading people, and people of taste. We like pretty things, and will have them if not too dear. The same is true of our eating. We like a nice dish. Let us know where to get what we want at a reasonable price and we will go for it. Put it before our eyes and we will be tempted to try it. A very good plan is to put some such article in the window, and if it is not high cost to mark the price on it. Many people would buy a thing if they had any idea how inexpensive it is. They are afraid to ask the price lest it be too dear, and they think the merchant or some bystander will be apprised why they do not take it. For we are a proud people, too.—Grocer and Country Merchant.

Cuban planters in several localities have agreed to grant next year a larger percentage to their tenants for the cane furnished them, say 5 and 6 arrobes of sugar per 2,500 pounds of cane, instead of 4 and 5 as heretofore. On the other hand, a certain number of planters, amongst whom the proprietors of the colossal Central factory "Constancia," are preparing themselves to increase the cultivation of cane for their own account, a scheme which they consider more profitable than to acquiesce to the petition of their tenants, who, pretending that the prices heretofore granted them are ruinous to their interests, have determined to proceed to no new planting this year and to bestow their attention upon the fields already sown. —Havanna Weekly Report.

DIAMOND CRYSTAL SALT

✧ THE process by which this Salt is made is different from any other one of the kind in existence. That PERFECTION in the manufacture of such a variable article as Salt should be attained at once was not to be expected, and while the remarkable purity of Diamond Crystal Salt was generally conceded very soon after it was placed on the market, still the manufacturers were obliged to admit that at first it was not in every respect a perfect BUTTER Salt. Although much thought was spent and many experiments made, it was not until after FOUR YEARS of such effort that the trouble was discovered and the defects entirely remedied.

In spite of its defects, however, many dealers in butter, especially those who stored their goods for several months, insisted that this Salt should be used, since they had learned by repeated tests that it was the best Salt they could find for preserving butter and holding its flavor. To their first success—Purity—they have added a second by securing all the conditions essential in a Salt to be used for producing the Highest Grade of Butter.

THE INDIANS MAPLE SUGAR.

A Vermont paper, in drawing a comparison between primitive and modern methods of producing maple sugar, says that ever since the Indians in the section now known as Fletcher discovered "honey" in the maple trees, that district has been known far and wide as the heart of the Vermont maple sugar country. The way the red man extracted the delicious compound was somewhat slow as compared with the present process. He used to cut a slanting gash in the bark and insert in the lower end a gauge shaped piece of wood, from which the sap ran and dropped into a poplar or bass-wood trough. At the end of the season these troughs would be set up against the trees and left until the following season, by which time the troughs would be thoroughly mildewed. This material added to the flavor of the aboriginal sugar, but can hardly be said to have improved it. The evaporator of those times consisted of an iron kettle swung from a sapling bent over a stump. By a slow and tedious process the sap was first heated, and then boiled in this kettle often taking two or three days' boiling before it could be sugared off.

In the best Fletcher groves of to-day a long pipe or trough line runs from some central spot in the grove down to the big storage tanks in the sugar house. Hence the perfected evaporator, when under full headway, will convert the first sap into syrup in half an hour, consuming about one cord of wood to produce a hundred pounds of sugar.

An English journal just to hand has the following: Late frosts in the China tea districts are reported from Foochow to have had the effect of stripping all the tea shrubs of their leaves. The coming tea crop is expected to be a good one in quantity and quality, though it will probably be later than usual.

Before the travelling man has left his hotel the newspaper advertisement has had an interview with the purchaser. The buyer may have been out of town that day, but somebody's newspaper advertisement was in his pocket. The canvasser may ring in vain, but the housekeeper is always at home to her favorite newspaper.

According to the N.Y. World, Attorney-General Olney proposes to push the cases against the American sugar Refinery now pending. The Attorney-General has decided that the data is not necessary, and will proceed with the trial on the main issue.

Deseronto Tribune: The hop growers of Prince Edward and other counties find themselves left in the lurch, and are now forced to sell their last season's crop at very low prices. They entered into a combine with certain dealers not to sell under a certain figure. The dealers sold out all their old stock at the figures agreed upon, and then conveniently forgot the agreement, and growers have to sacrifice last year's crop at a loss.

The pineapple, besides its fine qualities as a delicious fruit, is rapidly coming to the front as an effectual remedy and preventative of indigestion—dyspepsia. Like many of its predecessors in the fruit and vegetable line, its added-quality of medicinal power had to be discovered by experiment and experience. Care must be taken, however, to get it in right preparation, of which there are several kinds in the market.

The hatching of fish by hens is one of the Industries of China. The spawn of the fish is placed inside of an egg shell from which the contents have been blown. After the spawn has been forced into the empty shell—a very delicate operation—the eggs are placed under the hen. At the proper time the shells are broken in warm water, in which the fish hatch at once; they are kept in water perfectly pure until large enough to put in the ponds with larger fish. The selling of the spawn is one of the commercial enterprises of the Chinese.—Ex.

Liberal, Portage la Prairie: "The early closing system has been in force in Portage la Prairie since last fall, and gives the very best of satisfaction to both merchants and employees. Prior to the first of January last a petition was circulated by the early closing association of the town, and the signatures secured of two-thirds of the local merchants. Acting upon the request of this petition the town council passed a by-law requiring all stores, except places which must remain open, such as drug stores, etc., to close at 6.30 every evening excepting Saturday and days before holidays, for which the hour was fixed at ten o'clock. The by-law came into force upon the first of January last. Previous to that time for some months the stores had closed at 7.30. There is a fine of $50 for violation of the by-law. The scheme is found to work admirably, and gives general satisfaction, and we hope to see it adopted throughout the province."

SAGO OR PALM STARCH.

Sago, or palm starch, is obtained from the sagus farinifera, a species of palm growing in Molucca and Philippine Islands, and in New Guinea. A considerable quantity is now imported into France and Italy, mainly because the potato starch has reached so high a price. It yields a transparent paste and has quite superseded the potato starch as a glaze in England. In France it has long been used for the same purpose for the so-called Normandy fabrics. Granulated sago starch comes into commerce as tapioca-sago, which is reddish, and contains soluble starch; granulated sago which does not yield a paste, and Malacca sago, which yields a stiff paste. It may be purchased in powder, both in an impure state and as washed starch. A single sago palm yields about 1,300 pounds of starch containing 12 per cent of water. Sago starch is the raw material from which the granulated product is manufactured.

This industry is carried on in India and at Singapore, where 20,000,000 kilos (44,000,000 pounds) are annually produced by Chinese manufacturers. Purified sago starch is made chiefly in Malacca. The annual import into England is 16,000,000 kilos: London is the chief market. The product, which was almost exclusively confined to the island of Portland, has died out years ago.

BAD SEASON FOR CURRANTS.

The past season has been a very disastrous one for importers of currants. Ever since last fall the price here has ruled extremely low in comparison with the cost of the stock in the primary market, importers having been unable for months past to obtain a profit upon the goods purchased through the channel of resident representatives of Greek houses. The importations of this class of stock, taking the season through, have been about equal to selections of previous years, but the quantity held to-day is regarded as much larger than is usually retained at this period. Some in the trade do not hesitate to express the belief that the consumption of this class of stock is decreasing, claiming that the small raisin of the Pacific Coast is being substituted in some sections, though more particularly in the Northwest, where currants in the past have always met with a ready and liberal sale. The price of the fruit was probably never lower than it is to-day, but this fact does not appear to be given serious consideration by either consumers or the trade, as business is not stimulated in the least by the cheapness of the fruit. Speculative operations were freely ventured upon last fall in the expectation that big returns would be harvested later in the season, but the fall season progressed, and the winter passed without beneficial results, but on the contrary those who banked for a rise in price were confronted by a steady shrinkage in the value.

The spring opened up, and yet no improvement in the distribution followed, hence to-day the situation can truthfully be written as worse than at any time since the new crop was first offered for the consideration of buyers. Notwithstanding the depression upon this side of the water, the price in the primary market has been maintained with a good exhibition of steadiness, and holders in the Greek market have succeeded in finding a fairly satisfactory sale to European markets, though more particularly to French buyers for distilling purposes. Latest advices from primary sources report the available supply as reduced to about 10,000 tons, of which quantity fully 8,000 tons are fit only for distilling, thus showing that the bulk of the crop suitable for food had been worked off without any special pressure upon the part of holders. As regards the quantity now left there, it is reasonable to believe that the greater portion will be disposed of previous to the first receipts of the new crop, which is some four months distant. Regarding our own supply some doubt as to the disposition during the next four months is entertained. In the recent past strong efforts have been put forth to lessen the outside holdings by swinging the demand on to such, and also by depressing the market in the hope that holders would become discouraged, and entertain low bids from those who favored closer concentration; but the former scheme failed in consequence of the indifference of buyers, and the latter has not been carried out to this time.

Though a very considerable portion of the barrel stock in this market cost importers originally $3\frac{1}{4}$ to $3\frac{3}{8}$ c., we find them to-day endeavoring to place their goods among the trade at $2\frac{7}{8}$ c., and in recent instances bids of $2\frac{3}{4}$ c. have been favorably entertained. As regards the goods at the latter price some say the quality was not of a really desirable character, while others state that the fruit packed in barrels this season is somewhat above the average. To lift the market to an improved basis a more general demand is necessary, but experience in the past has shown that the consumption during the summer months is usually light, the active period not setting in until the approach of fall. Case goods and cleaned fruit appears to be growing in favor among the trade of the country, and it would not be a surprise did the annual importations of barrel fruit decrease from this time on, a similar revolution being observed to-day in the case of box prunes in the place of the old style of cask. Box fruit makes a desirable shelf package, and does not necessitate the carrying by the small dealers of a burdensome supply. The change is being rapidly made, and in a few years it is reasonable to believe that barrel and cask fruit will be connected entirely with the past. —N. Y. Bulletin.

BROOM CORN CULTURE.

The very excellent suggestion is made that farmers plant some of their land with broom corn. This is a product for which there is a good demand, and one that is steadily increasing. It can be grown in many sections of the country. While some of the Western States now lead the rest of the country in the production of broom corn, there is no reason why it cannot be produced profitably in other States, especially in the South. Several enterprising broom manufacturers in the Southern States have endeavored to interest farmers in their respective localities to grow enough broom corn to supply their own wants. These efforts have been more or less successful, from the manufacturers' point of view; and we have not heard of any complaint from the farmer to the effect that the culture was not profitable. Now that there is an almost unanimous opinion that the acreage of cotton should be diminished, every cotton grower should plant, at least, a few acres of broom corn as a commencement. We think that it will be found very profitable and satisfactory. In the Northwestern States, too, broom corn culture is being pushed, and it is hoped to supply several factories in Washington and Montana with raw material grown in those States. It begins to seem that the day is not very far distant when broom manufacturers will not have to go very far away from home to secure their supply of broom corn.—Willow-Trade Review."

A FAMOUS CONFECTIONERY.

The business of Ebenezer Roberts, the well-known wholesale confectioner, of London, England, was established in 1852 by the present head of the firm, Mr. Ebenezer Roberts. Since he first entered the trade many changes have taken place, but one principle of his business has remained unalterable; this was, and is, to produce confectionery of the purest possible quality and most delicate manufacture. The Camberwell works, of which we give a sketch upon this page, consist of two ranges of buildings, each 400 feet in length, divided by a private road. Upon the basement of the large factory is the furnace-room, on the right of which are fourteen furnaces constantly at work; also drying rooms with withstanding the rapid and constant manufacture that goes forward. Steam is conducted from the engine room to all parts of the building for boiling sugar and heating the six drying-rooms, some of which are lined throughout with zinc, and rise to a temperature of about 150 degrees Fahrenheit. Next are the mill-rooms, where a large disintegrator revolves at the rate of 2,000 per minute, crushing the sugar into the smallest particles, which is raised by means of an elevator into the dresser, which is lined with silk and minute brass wire, through which the sugar is passed, appearing afterwards as fine as the most delicate flour. Here, too, are machines for breaking sugar to the size of a pea, or for granulating sugar; others for the production of castor sugar; there are also ready to be impressed by boards, upon which many various designs are raised. The starch, of course, reproduces these different shapes and devices, and thus moulds are formed from which the sweetmeats eventually take their many shapes. These goods are then taken to one of the drying rooms, where they remain from one to ten days, thence to the sifting room, where every atom of starch is blown from them; then they are placed in tins and syrup poured over them; After a few hours the syrup is drained off, and when dry the crystals appear sparkling like brilliants. In the drying room, upon iron benches, the glistening goods are displayed upon a number of trays ready for boxing. Leaving here through an iron door we reach the lozenge room, where upon marble tables some fifteen long slabs of iron and stone; these are fitted up on the most modern principles, with either steam or cold water, according to their respective uses. Here are machines for the manufacture of endless varieties of boiled confectionery; for desiccating cocoanut, for the splitting, blanching, and for the roasting and grinding of almonds; also many sorts of frames and cutters of various shapes. In one portion of this building nearly a ton of "Butter Scotch" is produced in a day, some of which is supplied for the use of the automatic machines which are now to be seen in every part of the kingdom. Next is the engine room—the mainspring of these works; this department is, as indeed are all the others, the very pink of cleanliness, not-chocolate refining mills. From these machine rooms we pass to the jam factory, where only the finest sort of preserves is made; it is fitted with the most useful machinery, and there is also a row of "stirrers" in large coolers, from which the jam is run into jars. In these rooms fans are fixed to the shafting to purify and cool the heavy air. Beyond this is the filling-out room, the shelves of which are stacked with jam; here also are some thousands of 7-lb. and 14-lb. jars ready for delivery. Beyond this is the large jam store, where large jars are stacked from floor to ceiling. Upon the first floor is the starch room, containing a row of steam pans, each holding about 40 gallons, also some large furnaces, and a drying room filled with starch trays the lozenges of all shapes, sizes and qualities are being prepared and cut. None but the finest goods are made in this department. Amongst the medicated kinds here produced are "Maud's Compound Castor Oil Lozenges," for which Mr. Roberts is sole wholesale agent; these are so carefully prepared and delicately flavoured with otto of roses, that the medicine becomes delicious, while still retaining its medical properties. Eminent physicians have spoken of this effective lozenge in words of highest praise, and its constant and increasing sale speaks well for the estimation in which it is held by the general public. In this firm's glass warehouse every article necessary for a confectioner's shop is kept ready to hand; show cases, window tablets, chairs, tables, decanters, glasses, &c.; in short, a shop can be completely furnished from this store in a few hours. At Mr. Roberts' factory the printing department is an important one; it is fitted with all kinds of type, printing machines, and every requirement of this trade. It is constantly employed in producing the many sorts of printed labels, wrappers, etc., used in the establishment. On the opposite side of the road is the bottling department, where dexterous hands are placing goods in bottles varying from 2 ounces to 7 pounds. These are afterwards carefully arranged on shelves, and are ready for the execution of orders. Near here is the long chocolate-covering room, fitted with tables with tops of marble, granite, etc., all containing little wells in which the chocolate is placed and made hot by a specially arranged apparatus; from these wells the chocolate is taken, and the already prepared balls of cream are deftly coated therewith, then placed on silver plaques to cool. On other benches are moulds for chocolate cigars, for beans, almonds, etc., also for chocolate macaroons, a delicate composition of almonds, and chocolate mice and other cleverly formed animals are here coated and dipped, coming in as white sugar or as cream, and going out a rich brown chocolate. At benches set apart for packing these goods, nimble hands place the sweetmeats in artistically labelled boxes varying in size from a half to four pounds. In the packing room proper, upon the second and third floors, rows and rows of neatly dressed girls are arranging every description of confectionery. Here are large quantities of "Butter Scotch" packed in waxed paper; also thousands of various packets of confectionery from 1-2d. to 6d. each, including "Nougat Moultemart," and parcels of gum and gelatine goods, fondants, lozenges, chocolates of every kind, Baton de Dame, Rahat, Lakum, Marzipan, Carrots, Potatoes, Strawberries, looking as if fresh gathered. On this floor is a room devoted to the storing of fancy boxes varying in value from 1d. to £1; these will contain the finest chocolate or sugar, Easter eggs and Christmas goods. Next is the department where labels and wrappers fresh from the printing office are stored. On the floor above are weighing rooms, to which the goods from the factory are taken before being passed on to the warehouse, which is stored from floor to ceiling with endless varieties of goods. There is also a depot where barrels of different goods are kept, and where the soldering up of cased goods for export is carried out. On the ground floor of the building opposite the factory are the sale rooms, counting house, and Mr. Roberts' own private office and sanctum.

GET AND KEEP.

In the first place, what is a customer? According to Webster, a customer is "one who frequents a place of sale for the sake of purchasing goods," remarks an exchange. Frequent, that is, resorts to or visits often. By custom, then, we do not mean transitory or chance trade by people who happen to be passing by and drop in, and never come again, but those who have the habit, when they want anything in your line, of coming to your store; people who have come before to make purchases, and being satisfied with your method of doing business come again, and who, by their example and the good name they give you, bring others to your door.

There is a great difference of opinion among business men as to the best manner of attracting custom and of keeping it after it has come. Some believe in making what they can out of each one and trusting to some means to keep up the trade. This is the "rock" which has been the cause of so many financial wrecks.

Barnum, the great show-man, once said that the "American people like to be humbugged." This may be true of the circus and menagerie, but will not work in the grocery trade.

U. S. RICE CROP.

Messrs. Dan Talmage's sons, in bulletin No. 1, Rice Crop 1893, issued May 17th, state: "The crop of the present year is fairly under way. Preparatory conditions in the main favorable, but later reports indicate progress barely up to average. The outcome last year in a monetary way was disappointing, and some claim inability to grow rice at prices current during the past season, but practically all are entering the field anew. This is true of the Atlantic coast and river parishes in Louisiana, but it may be added of Southwest Louisiana, where there has been any reduction or discontinuance, more than an equal number have either enlarged or entered upon the culture in an experimental way. There can be no question but that rice offers a fair margin of profit, and in Louisiana it can be raised as cheaply as any other cereal, and the average yield per acre an item larger than wheat. This statement is practically attested by the renewal and extension of the culture, notwithstanding prevailing prices, and the probability of equal low values in the future. Louisiana, as heretofore, is the banner State, and will show increase over last year. Next in order of production follows South Carolina, Georgia, Texas, North Carolina, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi. The total acreage prepared and promised is in excess of last year, hence under favorable growing conditions it is not unreasonable to expect a product of over 10,000 bushels."

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, May 25, 1893.
GROCERIES.

Trade does not exhibit any improvement, being still on the quiet side. The feeling, however, is still one of confidence, and country merchants report prospects good. There have been a few of them in during the week, and their general opinion regarding the fruit crop, particularly the smaller kinds, is that it will be large. There has been no material change in prices during the week. An ordinary trade is being done in coffee. Dried fruits are not in much demand and there is less enquiry for sugar, but the firmness in the latter commodity seems to be well maintained. For molasses there seems to be a little better demand. Much the same might be said of tea. The movement in canned goods continues light, and the confidence in tomatoes is scarcely so pronounced as it was. Payments are only fair.

COFFEES.

No large lots are moving, trade being of the usual distributing character. Java coffee is very scarce. The outside markets have been creeping up gradually, a few points at a time. We quote:—Rio, 19½ to 21½c., East Indian, 27 to 30c., South American, 21 to 23c., Mocha, 26 to 30c., Santos, 21 to 22c., Java, 30 to 32c.

DRIED FRUIT.

Market much as before. Demand for Valencia raisins is light. The demand noted in a former issue for cheap Valencias has dropped off since the price was raised. There are not now many low price ones on the market. In New York supplies are light and Valencias are about the strongest fruit on the market. The idea for off-stalk is 4 to 4½c. a pound for seconds, 5¼ to 6c. for fine; layers, ordinary selects, 6¼c.; fancy selects, 7½ to 8c. according to quality. There is just an ordinary demand for currants. There is very little fine fruit to be had here, and although there is some very low priced fruit offering from New York the quality is such that they could not be handled on this market, Canada always taking a better standard of fruit than the United States. It is generally conceded that prices for good fruit will go lower. On the contrary the indications point to the contrary. The idea is 6 to 6½c. for good fruit and 5½ to 6c. for ordinary. Anything below these prices is scarcely suitable for the Canadian trade. The currant report of Barff & Co. (Ltd.), dated Patras, May 6, is interesting. After referring to the dullness of trade the previous month and to the fact that only some 2500 tons of currants had gone forward during April, it says: "Holders have been willing to give way in price, but the poor quality of most of the remaining stocks on the one hand, and the absence of demand from consuming markets on the other, have stood in the way of business. About 8,000 to 9,000 tons of currants still remain in Greece and the Islands, and of these some 2,000 tons are preparing for shipment to France and the Continent, so that by end of this month not over 6,000 tons will remain on this side, which owing to their defective quality will be shipped off before the new crop comes in, and we shall be very thankful to commence the new season with a clean board. The coming crop is not progressing as favorably as usual at this season of the year; the cold and frost experienced during February and the early part of April caused much damage to the buds and plants generally and the vegetation is stunted and uneven, in many districts the show of blossom is small, so that only a small crop is expected. "Peronosporos" has appeared amongst the rose plants and in a few isolated cases has been observed on the leaves of the currant vines, but it is yet too early to expect any general visitation of the malady, we very much fear it is lurking in the plants and that it will show up before long, but the extent of damage it may cause will very much depend upon the state of the atmosphere during the next month." The report shows that the shipments of currants to Canada to date are 1,328 tons, against 1,133 tons in 1892. The total shipments to all countries to date were 107,532 tons, against 146,786 tons in 1892. Prunes are in little better demand, although only for small lots. Dates dull, at 5 to 5½c. Stocks of figs are about exhausted, the low prices prevailing during the season having stimulated the demand beyond expectations.

NUTS.

Quiet and unchanged. We quote Brazil nuts 11 to 11½c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; unshelled, 16 to 17c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to 12½c. for green; cocoa nuts, $5 to $5.50 per sack.

RICE AND SPICES.

There is not much doing in rice yet, and 3¾c. is about the idea for what is going out. New ordinary rice is expected on this market in about ten days. New Patna and Japan rices are already being offered by the mill. Prices for the former will be 5½ to 6c., and for the latter 5 to 5½c.

There has been no new development in spices. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c.; pure white pepper at 20 to 28c., and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

A carload has been moving here and there, but demand has eased off a little. The market continues strong; 5¾ to 5½c. is the idea for granulated, the outside figure being for the Montreal article, while 4½c. is about the lowest for yellows. The refiners are still refusing to shade prices. The American Sugar Trust is a buyer of further lots of raws at prices paid ten days or two weeks ago, but sellers have advanced their ideas ¼c. above what they were previous to the decline. The Trust is not, however, buying at these figures, and holders are storing raws rather than accept the prices offered there.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The demand for syrups is as is usual at this season—light. The idea seems to be 2½ to 3½c. a pound. Low grade syrups are scarce. Molasses is in little better demand than syrups; 30 to 35c. is the range of prices mostly obtaining.

TEAS.

Business is rather more brisk in this line, principally in blacks. It is principally of a sorting up character, and the general conditions are healthy. Indian and Ceylons are firmer and the very lowest grade of these teas would cost 21 to 22c. laid down here. Some good value is being shown in medium Pekoe congous from London. Low grade Ceylons are about done and no more is expected till about Sept. or Oct. Stocks of low grade will scarcely be more than enough to last till the new crop arrives in August.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Receipts of butter are larger, stocks accumulating and prices are lower. A good deal of roll butter has been sold at 14c., and we quote range from 14 to 15c. A few tubs are arriving, and they sell from 15½ to 17c., the outside figure being for first-class dairy stock. There are some store-packed tubs on this market that could be obtained as low as 13c. a pound. Farmers' pound prints are plentiful at 17 to 18c. Pound prints is the only thing on this market in the way of creamery butter, and they sell at 21 to 22c., but there is not much doing.

Cheese market continues quiet, being between the season for the old and the new. Buyers are confined to an odd grocer now and then. There is hardly any new cheese on the market yet, and old is about exhausted. We quote ½c. lower than last week, at 11c. for old and at 10c. for new.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Dull and easier; choice hand-picked are being jobbed out at $1.40; $1.20 seems to be the idea with jobbers, and they are not anxious buyers at that.

DRIED APPLES—Not many going out. Jobbers are paying 4 to 4½c. and selling at 4½ to 5c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Dull. They can be obtained at 8½c., and they are being jobbed out at 9 to 9½c.

EGGS—The market remains much about as before, prices being steady at 11½ to 12c.

HONEY—Dull and unchanged at 8c. for extracted and 5c. for dark.

POULTRY—As before. We quote:—Chickens 75 to 85c., turkeys 10 to 12c. a pound, geese 8 to 10c. a pound.

POTATOES—The feeling is somewhat easier, and 90c. is the idea for carloads on the track; store lots are quoted at $1.05 to $1.10 per bag.

ONIONS—Not much doing and prices are unchanged. We quote: Red, $1.10 per bushel, $2 per barrel; yellow, $1.20 per bushel, $2.25 per barrel.

HOPS—There seems to be a wide difference of opinion regarding this article. Dealers are getting 18 to 20c. for ten to twenty pound packages of fine, but ordinary is quoted at 17 to 18c. Yearlings are purely nominal.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

Deliveries of dressed hogs have been fair for the season at $7.75 to $8.25 and they all seem to have been taken care of, although some of the packers have shut down. Hogs products continue firm and in demand at unchanged prices.

DELHI CANNING CO.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

The market is quiet. In tomatoes there is a disposition to shade, stocks having been discovered to be heavier than anticipated. The New York market, however, is firm at $1.20, and another 5c. to that price would allow profitable exportation to that market. The ultimate direction this market will take will, however, largely, if not altogether, depend upon the outcome of the consignments now en route to the English market. Locally the demand continues fair at 80 to 85c., while we quote range all the way from 80 to $1, the outside figure being for the older and better brands. Peas quiet and unchanged at 80 to 85c., while the fine sifted article is quoted up to $1.40. Corn is in fair demand and unchanged at 80 to 85c. for ordinary and $1.40 for honey sweet. Beans dull, at 90 to 95c. There is a good demand for salmon of the better qualities, stocks of which are light. The idea for well known brands is $1.50 to $1.55 for talls and $1.70 to $1.80 for flats, while flats of brands not so well known are obtainable at $1.50 to $1.60. There is a good demand for lobsters of the better grades, but the common grades are neglected; $1.90 to $2.10 is the idea for talls and $2.50 to $2.70 for flats. Peaches are fairly active, stocks light and prices unchanged at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and $3.25 to $3.75 for 3's. Apples are in rather better demand and unchanged at 85c. to $1 for 3's and $2 to $2.25 for gallons. Plumbs are in fair demand at $1.45 to $1.55.

MONTREAL.

The canned goods market is very dull. Lobsters are now quoted at $6.50 to $7.90, and mackerel at $1 to $1.50. Canned corn is anticipated to be short, but the idea is purely nominal on it as yet. Tomatoes have been moved at 80 to 95c.

backs are 13c., bellies, 13½ to 14c., rolls, 10½ to 10¾c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c. for smoked; pickled, 11¾c.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13¼c. in tubs, 13½c. in pails and 13 to 13½c. in tierces. Compound 10 to 10½c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $20.50, Canadian short cut $21 to $21.50.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 4½ to 5½c., hindquarters 6 to 8½c., veal 8 to 9½c., lamb 8½ to 9½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade continues fairly active. Oranges have been selling freely without material change. Stocks of California, Florida and Valencia oranges are about exhausted. Messinas are plentiful. Lemons are not so much enquired after as oranges, but the movement is nevertheless fair; $3.85 to $4 is the idea for good keeping stock. Demand is brisk for bananas, and prices are rather firm in consequence of a momentary scarcity. Pine apples are scarcely to be had, and those who have them are getting pretty good prices. There is not much demand for apples, except for eating, rhubarb taking the place for cooking purposes. Prices are unchanged. We quote : Oranges—Valencias $6.50 to $7 per case; ditto, Jumbos, $8 to $8.50 per case; Floridas, $3.25 to $4 per box; Messinas, $3.50 to $3.75 per box for 160's and 200's, and $1.85 to $2 for 80's and 100's. California seedlings, $3 to $3.25 per box; ditto Navals, $3.75 to $4.25; blood oranges, $4 to $4.50 per box and $2 to $2.25 per half box. lemons, $3 to $4.50; bananas, $1.35 to $2; pineapples, extras, 15 to 17c., No. 1 12 to 15c., No. 2 9 to 11c., No. 3 9c.; Callifornia apricots, 20c. per lb. 25-lb. boxes; apples, $1.50 to $2 for ordinary stock and $2.25 to $3.50 for choice to fancy.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

There is still a liberal supply of syrup on the market, but the demand is limited. Prices are unchanged, at 65 to 80c. a tin and 85 to 90c. per imperial gallon. Sugar is unchanged at 8 to 10c.

FISH.

Trade shows some improvement and may now be designated as fairly good. The demand for fresh water fish exceeds the supply, while for salt water fish the contrary conditions obtain. Steak haddock is out of the market. The quotations are as before: Fresh salmon, 20c.; skinned and boned cod-fish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half bbl.; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; pike, 5 to 6c.; ciscoes, $1.35 a hundred; finnan haddie, 5c.; perch, $2 to $3 per hundred, as to size; blue back herring, $2 to $3 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c.

a lb.; shad, $3 a dozen; halibut, 15c. a lb.; lobsters, 15c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7 to 7½c.; eels, 8 to 10c. a lb.

SEEDS.

The supply of alsike is entirely exhausted, and demand is about satisfied for red clover and timothy. Hungarian seed is in fair demand, and it sells higher at $1.20 to $1.25. The chief enquiry is for ensilage corn, which sells at 65 to 70c. per bushel, according to quality and grade. Millett seed is in fair demand and steady at 85 to 90c.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—Supply and demand light, with prices unchanged at 5¼c. for good selections.

SKINS—Calfskins are quiet and prices weak. Jobbers are still paying 7 to 8c., and they quote selling price at 8 to 9c., but there is little or no business being done at these prices. Sheepskins are normal at $1.35 to $1.45.

TALLOW—Market weak and prices unchanged. Dealers are paying 5½c. and selling at 6 to 6¼c.

WOOL—There is a fair demand from the factories. Prices remain unchanged. There is nothing being done in fleece wool. The new clip is expected here shortly, and the price is expected to be something around last year's figures.

they are offering at low prices. The trade is requested to write for quotations and samples.

Davidson & Hay report a nice new line of Vostizza currants at 8c.

Sloan & Crowther have just received a full line of Cross & Blackwell's goods.

Eby, Blain & Co. have just received a consignment of Morton's kippered herrings and bloaters.

Clemes Bros. have bought heavily of oranges and lemons at the sales in Montreal and are in a position to give the trade good value.

Warren Bros. & Boomer have received a fine sample of brown old government Java coffee. The market has been almost bare of this line lately.

A. M. Smith & Co., London, have recently landed a full assortment of Lazenby & Sons' pickles and sauces and table jellies, for which they find the trade continually increasing.

First samples of new crop Japan tea arrived on the Toronto market Tuesday. They were received by two houses, Perkins, Ince & Co. and Musson & Co. The samples are of good quality.

Lazenby's table jellies are one of the new additions to their already select list of high classed delicacies, and are fully up to the standard of their other preparations. George Childs & Co., Montreal, have just received a large supply of these, as well as other articles, from this well known firm.

P. C. Larkin & Co. announce that owing to the rapid advance in Ceylon teas they have been compelled to raise the price of their package tea, Salada, five cents a pound, which now makes it 40c. a pound. They have had an actual loss for some time on the blue label, and as the tea market shows no signs of weakening they were either forced to take the course they have or lower the quality. Salada tea is handled by 214 grocers in Toronto.

The E. B. Eddy Company have ready for market a new patent indurated fibre ware butter tub. This butter package is far superior to the ordinary spruce or ash tub in that it does not impart flavor, taste or smell to its contents, does not require to be scalded, never becomes soggy, is moulded in one piece, has no hoops to fall off, has no seams or cracks in which extraneous matter can accumulate, is easily and readily cleaned, costs but little more than the wooden tub, is infinitely more desirable and durable, is strong, light and handsome, and can be used over and over again. The merits of the Eddy indurated fibre ware are well known. The application of this thoroughly clean ware to the purposes of a butter package is looked upon by Prof. Robertson, Dairy Commissioner of the Dominion Government, as one of the greatest modern aids in creamery butter selling. Where once used it thereafter will be always used. The price of this indurated fibre butter tub with cover is $4 per dozen.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, May 25, 1893.
GROCERIES.

The weather interfered with business in groceries to a material extent, but the last few warm days we have had caused some improvement. Reports from travellers are somewhat inconsistent, some saying that they expect a good overturn shortly, while others hold that the rain has seriously interfered with business. Values generally are firm, notably so in all the staple lines such as teas, etc., and as stocks throughout the country are generally admitted to be small an increased volume of business is confidently anticipated shortly, as buyers realize that it is of no use to hold off any longer. During the week dried fruit have furnished some good sized sales, round lots of raisins changing hands. Tea has been more enquired for also, notably Japans, and prices are firm in sympathy with the steadiness in Japan. Coffee is dull, but spices show more enquiry at firmer prices. Sugar, syrup and molasses are quiet. In sugar the loss of the steamship Craigsid with a cargo of 5,000 tons of sugar from Matanzas may have a stiffening effect on the market, for the lot cannot be replaced at the same figure. Payments are reported favorable on the whole.

SUGAR.

There has been a fair trade doing on spot in refined sugars and refiners are looking for an increased trade during the next thirty days, as stocks in dealers hands are small owing to the conservative course that sellers have pursued throughout this spring. Yellows are quoted at $4\frac{3}{4}$ to 5c. and granulated at $5\frac{1}{4}$ c. Elsewhere the slight decline in raws did not materially affect the position of the refined article. The news of the loss of the Craigsid which was bound for Montreal with a cargo of 3000 tons may have some effect on the market for it, the supply cannot be placed at the same figure.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is no change in syrups, the demand ruling slow, refiners asking $1\frac{1}{2}$ to 2c. The molasses market does not give much change, 33 to 34c. still being the idea, but it is claimed that round lots could be moved for less money. The supply offering here promises to be fully as large as in former seasons and this will possibly soften prices a trifle. The Iona has arrived with 500 packages and the Peacemaker with 900 packages, and there are ten more cargoes on passage for this port. It is possible therefore that the combine will have a lively time trying to keep prices up.

TEAS.

The tea market is quiet, the only business reported being in Japans—a sale of some 400 to 500 packages of low grades occurring at 12 to 14c., while one agency for a Japan house has, it is said, cleared out all their mediums at 17 to 18c. Advices from Japan state that a steamer has sailed with some new crop, part of her lot, some 250 packages, being for Canada. The total exportation to date from Japan is placed at two million pounds. We quote spot prices as follows: Low grades, 13 to 14c.; good to common, 15 to 18c.; fine, 19 to $21\frac{1}{2}$ c.; and finest, 23 to 31c.

COFFEES AND SPICES.

The coffee market here is dull, and is also in much the same position in New York. A sale of Maracaibo transpired at $20\frac{1}{2}$ c., which is about the only transaction of importance that we have to note. We quote Jamaica 19 to 20c., Maracaibo 20 to 22c., Rio 19 to 21c., Java 24 to 28c., and Mocha 25 to 28c.

There has been a good demand for spices, a considerable enquiry being noted for ginger, common Jamaica selling at 16 to 18c., and finer grades 20 to 24c. We quote the following: Black pepper 8 to 9c., pimento $6\frac{1}{2}$ c., nutmegs 50 to $52\frac{1}{2}$ c. and \$1.

DRIED FRUIT.

There has been more call for dried fruit during the week, some round lots of Valencia raisins having been moved on Friday last at 4 to $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. for fair off stalk. Layers are firm at 6 to $6\frac{1}{2}$ c., and currants dull and easy at 5 to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c.

RICE.

There is a fair demand for rice at unchanged prices. The first new crop is now on the river. We quote ordinary $3.85 to $4, Japans $4 to $4.50, Patna and Carolina $4.50 to $5.50.

FRUIT.

There is very little change to note in oranges, prices remaining about the same. We quote: Messina, $3 to $3.50, half boxes $2 to $2.25; bloods, $3.50 to $4.25.

Lemons are steady under a fair demand, prices ranging from $1.50 to $3.50 and $4.25.

Figs are selling fairly well, at $9\frac{1}{2}$ to 10c. per lb.

The market is overstocked with pineapples and prices are easy at 4 to 12c. a piece.

Bananas are in fair demand at 75c. to $1.50 per bunch, as to size.

BEANS.

The market is quiet and prices are unchanged at $1.60 to $1.65 for Western hand-picked, with $1.25 to $1.50 for ordinary to good, and superior $1 to $1.10.

HONEY.

The honey market is dull but steady. We quote: 6 to 7c. for extracted, and comb stock 9 to 14c. as to quality.

HOPS.

Hops rule quiet and featureless. We quote: Good to choice 17 to 18c., poor qualities 14 to 15c., and old 6 to 9c.

ONIONS.

Stock of domestic onions are entirely closed out here, and there is no price to quote.

POTATOES.

The market is firm and demand good, supplies showing some restriction. We quote: Early Rose $1.30 for choice, at which sales have been made, while they have been held at $1.10 to $1.15 on the track here per bag of 90 lbs.

PROVISIONS.

Only a small business is reported in provisions, but the tone of the market is firm. Canadian short cut, per brl. \$21 to \$22; mess pork, western, new, per brl., \$22 to \$23; Hams, city cured, per lb., $12\frac{1}{2}$ to $13\frac{1}{4}$ c.; Lard, Canadian in pails, 12 to $12\frac{1}{2}$ c.; Bacon, per lb., $11\frac{1}{2}$ to $12\frac{1}{2}$ c.; Lard, com. refined, per lb., 10 to $10\frac{1}{2}$ c.

EGGS.

Eggs are in fair demand at 11 to $11\frac{1}{2}$ c. The receipts continue to be very heavy.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

There is no change in the position of the cheese market. As the offerings at the different boards indicate the make, although showing some gradual increase, is decidedly backward; in fact, the season at present may be sent down a week or ten days. No large output of fodder stock is anticipated, and none of the trade here expect any offerings of really first class grass cheese until the end or beginning of the second week in June. Of course, some may be offered before that, but the quality of the make when the factories are turning from fodder to grass milk is not very enticing. In view of these facts the market is steady, and it is felt that the stock of old cheese on the other side will be given plenty of time to work lower. But although holders are confident there is no desire apparent to squeeze matters to hard, and this is a good healthy sign. In finest Ontario stock white still has the preference, but as the factories are running more on it than on colored, the position may be reversed shortly. Business to-day was done on the basis of 10c. and it is evident that anything really good that is offering can find a purchaser at this figure, but the supply continues comparatively light and this tends to firmness. In Quebec goods the offerings are not of an appreciable quantity as yet, so that it is hard to name a reliable basis for them as very few lots are on the market. About 9½ to 9¾c. is a fair representative range for this class of stock, however. Nothing very new came over the cable and the public is unchanged.

The butter market rules quiet. A moderate jobbing business is doing on local account, but aside from this little else. Offers from the country are freer, however, and it is possible that some business on Newfoundland and lower ports account will ensue the beginning of next week. Our quotations give a wide enough range to cover all ideas both inside and outside. We quote: New creamery, 21 to 22c.; new Townships, 20 to 21c.; Western dairy, 18 to 19c.; Western roll, 17 to 18c.; old dairy, 17 to 18c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

The first vessel with new crop rice is now in the river.

L. Chaput, Fils, & Co. are offering some nice lines of one gallon cans tomatoes, corn and apples.

N. Quintal & Fils have a nice line of tomatoes in 3 lb. tins which they are offering at the inside figure, 80c.

Mr. C. A. Chouillon is getting out some artistic three sheet posters detailing the peculiar good properties of Menier's chocolate.

The decline in raw sugar in England and New York had no effect whatever on the position of the refined article on this market.

The Mount Royal Milling Company have put out their samples this week for new rice. Their figures on Patnas are $4.75 to $5.50.

There are 12 cargoes of molasses now on the way to this port and the prediction is that the combine will have a hard time holding up the price.

Latest f.o.b. tea quotations at Yokohama are as follows: Choicest, 25c.; choice, 23 1-2c.; finest, 21 1-2c.; fine, 20c.; good medium, 17 1-2c.; medium, 16 1-2c.

Despatches from Halifax state that the S.S. Craigsid from Matanza, which had a cargo of 3,000 tons of raw sugar for Montreal had collided with a derelict and sunk.

Kimick, Lindsay & Co. report that the outlook on canned goods is not quite so bad as some people would make it out to be. There are no quotations for new stock yet.

Cables from the Islands to-day stated that the molasses market there was working easier, and that it is probable that a bid of 12c. first cost would not be refused.

Caverhill, Rose, Hughes & Co.'s advices from Japan this week state that the total exportation to date is two million pounds. A vessel is now out a week with 9,000 packages, which is to be distributed as follows: New York, 4,500 packages; Chicago, 2,500 packages; Pacific ports, 1,750 packages, and Canada, 250 packages.

PERSONAL MENTION.

James Stafford, grocer and butcher, Midland, was in town last week. His special object was to dispose of a lot of cattle.

A. B. Sidney De Wolf, Halifax representative of the Toronto Biscuit Co., was in the city last week en route to the World's Fair.

James E. Gass, of the firm of J. E. Gass & Son, wholesale grocers, Halifax, N.S., was in Toronto a few days ago. The firm is a wide awake one.

Robert Barron, who has been spending the last couple of months in Scotland, has returned.

Wm. Ramsay, who formerly ran a wholesale grocery establishment where Sloan & Crowther now do business, is in the city. He at present resides in Scotland, a few miles out of Edinburgh.

D. Morrison, who represents Eby, Blain & Co. in London and the west, was in the city this week replenishing his samples. He says prospects in the west are good.

SUGAR POSSIBILITIES.

The easier feeling noted in the case of raw sugar at New York and in Great Britain has had no effect on the position of the refined sugar market in Montreal, and an occurrence that transpired this week is calculated in the minds of most of the shrewd operators on that market to prevent any decline. This occurrence is the sinking of the steamship Craigsid when near Halifax after she had collided with a derelict. The Craigsid is a complete loss and so is her cargo of 3,000 tons centrifugal, which she had taken on board at Matanzas on account of the Canada Sugar Company. The feeling in Montreal is that the loss of this large cargo will have a material effect on values, more especially on granulated, as both the refineries in Montreal are known to have only small stocks now. No decline in price, therefore, is anticipated, and as stocks in dealers' hands are small, also the demand is expected to pick up within the next thirty days or so. On the whole the natural position of the sugar market is precisely the same, and it has not been affected at all by the speculative reaction which was noted in Great Britain and in New York lately, which was simply the natural reaction after the bulge that the bulls on the product had worked. A factor that is making itself felt more and more every year in the sugar market since prices have been reduced owing to the improved methods of manufacture is the increased consumption of the article by India and other eastern countries. This demand is calling more and more every year on the supplies of the raw product in Java, the Philippine Islands and China, and of course this restricts the supplies available for Europe, the United States and Canada. This fact is more apparent the present season than ever before, and in view of it it is decidedly interesting to know that the supply is short in Cuba, while the stock of beet root in Europe has been seriously curtailed by the drought. In the face of these conditions it does not seem natural to look for any material change in the way of easier prices on sugar, and the occurrence above referred to is apt to make a decline still more unlikely.

GOING TO HOLD ON TILL DEATH.

DEAR GROCER,—I see that I must be more explicit in locating your correspondent, "Straight Moyune," (who, by-the-by, is missed this week). Your much esteemed and very affable Editor says I am on the wrong "scent." I cannot agree with him there. I think I am on the right scent, and it is too strong for me to lose, although he would put me astray. I am not what is called a "downy bird," but a "sleek hound," with a good scent, having been well trained by experience to hold on till death when sure of the game. I did not presume that "Straight Moyune" and the writer of the article, "How to Purchase Tea," were one person. I said: "The affinity between the letter 'How to Purchase Tea' and 'Straight Moyune's' opinion of it, and subsequent dissertations, is so glaringly perceptible one can almost imagine they were twins." I did not even hint they were Siamese twins, nor do I mean, like as somewhere we are told, that two may become one; but I mean in the sense that two nations may become one in purpose when they ally together against another nation or nations in war.

DRY GOODS.

(From the Dry Goods Rev'ew.)

The past week has not been an extra brisk one in this trade, although as the present week advances prospects improve. Sorting orders are more numerous than they were, but are for small parcels only. A considerable number of buyers have been on the market and picked up a large number of drives and bargains.

Linens are reported much higher in price in Great Britain. The advance is fully ten per cent. In the manufactured article, hence linen stocks are being conserved by importers both in this city and in Montreal, and prices are exceedingly firm.

The latest advices from Germany confirm the 1st of May advance of 10 per cent. in fancy braids, especially in ladies' military braids. The manufacturers are offering candid advice about placing orders for the next six months' requirements before June 1st, as another advance is expected then. The advance is caused by the requirements of fashion combined with the advance in wool.

Cardinal, cream, and tan hosiery is in strong demand, and stocks are almost depleted.

Angola shirtings promise well. These are taking the place of low all-wool fancy flannel shirtings, being cheaper, and standing well both washing and wearing. The wholesalers give them fancy names, such as Inverness, Loch Lamond, Ceylon, etc.

Many buyers have returned from the foreign markets. Among the latest arrivals are: Mr. D. O. Anderson, of Alexander & Anderson; Mr. Fisher, buyer for Wyld, Grasett & Darling's furnishing department; Mr. Blackey and Mr. Sanderson, buyers for John Macdonald & Co.'s haberdashery and staple departments respectively. Mr. Johnson, buyer for Wyld, Grasett & Darling's woollen department, has left on a buying trip. All the buyers report a rising market to buy in, and had to pay advances in many cases.

NOTES.

John Macdonald & Co. have just opened up a shipment of new designs and shapes in ladies' blouses in prints, delaines, ginghams, and silks. These are the latest novelties, and are shown in light and dark colors and in assorted sizes.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have just received a shipment of haircloth. They have a full range of all prices. This cloth is in big demand in New York, London and Paris, and a greater demand is anticipated in the fall. They have also received a shipment of shot surahs. These include one quality only, but all the latest tintings.

W. R. Brock & Co. report a strong demand for their special line of black cashmere half-hose, called "Leader," which was mentioned in last week's issue.

Alexander & Anderson have had a very successful dress goods season, and are now offering clearances at special prices. Their stock includes plain and fancy dress goods, delaines, challies, etc.

John Macdonald & Co. are offering an overmake of topshirts from a leading manufacturer, including 15 numbers. These will be sold at 25 per cent. less than regular prices. They also show a line of 3,000 dozen of manufacturers' staple handkerchiefs, which are selling at fully 50 per cent. less than regular value. In carriage dusters they show an extensive range of embroidered monie, striped and checked linen, and melton rugs in navy, myrtle, drab and brown.

W. R. Brock & Co.'s well-known line of white dress shirts called the "Monarch" have been greatly in demand this season, and their output has been double that of any previous season, particularly in their Nos. 20, with cuffs, and B. 20, with bands, which can be retailed at one dollar each.

Athletic jerseys in cotton and worsted, both long and half sleeves, are shown in great range in black, navy and royal and various combinations of 1-inch stripes, by Wyld, Grasett & Darling; also bathing trunks and snits in great variety.

W. R. Brock & Co. have a nice line of trouserings just passed into stock. This includes light and medium colors in small line stripes.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. are showing a grand range of fine linens, noticeable amongst which is a choice line of five o'clock tea cloths and Damask sets, also several prices in 72 inch bleached damask and napkins to match.

Fancy cashmere drill vests of the latest London styles are shown in large assortment and in sizes 34 to 44, by John Macdonald & Co. Previous to stock-taking they are clearing out a few odds and ends of braces at greatly reduced prices. In creams, whites, spots, and fawns their stock of Windsor ties is unexcelled. Their first shipment of Japanese handkerchiefs direct from Yokohama is to hand, and orders will at once be filled.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have just passed into stock a repeat of black and cream chantilly and Polnte d'Irelande laces.

W. R. Brock & Co., in their woollen department, are showing a very handsome range of cream ground worsteds with colored silk stripes and checks, suitable for ladies' and men's vests, outing coats, blouses, etc. These are the leading fashion for the season.

A repeat of cardinal, tan and cream cotton hose is just to hand with Wyld, Grasett & Darling. They have also a repeat of lisle hosiery, and are showing a long range in silk hosiery for evening wear. In gloves they are showing creams and other shades in long evening gloves in 24 and 30 inch.

Five cases men's flannelette shirts and 60 dozens fancy knitted top shirts in choice designs have been received in Gordon, Mackay & Co.'s furnishing department, and are being offered at prices which will ensure a rapid clearance.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are showing their well known brands of English collars, Grandee and Glendowe, in various heights, from 1 5-8 inches to 3-inch, and in sizes 14 to 18 1-2. They have been selling these goods for the past four years and have never had a complaint from buyers. Each season shows an increase in the volume of sales and they are now staple stock. Their neckwear samples for the autumn season are now in the hands of their respective travellers, and will be found quite equal to their usual standard of excellence. A fine range of summer neckwear is now in stock, including colored cambrics in puffs and derbys; white dress bows, all sizes and shapes.

The manager of Gordon, Mackay & Co.'s curtain department reports a lively demand for lace curtains this week, white being asked for in the better grades and cream in the lower lines. This firm has just received a second repeat of several numbers which have proven exceptionally good sellers, and are now busy filling back orders.

DEATH OF GEO. K. SCOTT.

Sad was the news and sudden its bringing that on Saturday last announced to the business men of the country and Toronto and Montreal in particular the death of Geo. K. Scott, until recently a member of the firm of Taylor, Scott & Co. His death occurred the previous day in Montreal, where he had undergone an operation for peritonitis. So far as the operation was concerned it was successful, the direct cause of his death being heart failure. He was only sick a few days.

Deceased was one of the most popular of business men. Those who were brought into casual contact with him recognized in him a shrewd business man, but, above all, those qualities that make friends many and enemies few, while his close and intimate acquaintances and employees looked upon him as their ideal and paid homage to him as such. And when the sad and unexpected news of his death reached them they felt a void had been created in their existence. To his old employees at Taylor, Scott & Co.'s the news came with especial sadness. To the floral pillow they sent to grace the coffin of their former and beloved employer, the youngest and least important to the oldest and most important contributed. And when the remains were borne from his late residence in Tranby avenue to their last resting place they were there to pay their last tribute of respect.

The late Mr. Scott was born in Donegal, Ireland, in 1856. He came to Montreal when quite young, and there entered the employ of the soap manufacturing firm of Alfred Savage & Co., remaining with it for 17 years. A little over five years ago he severed his connection to enter as a partner the firm of Taylor, Scott & Co., which, it will be remembered, was dissolved some weeks ago.

Merchant (to applicant)—Do you think you know enough to assist me in the office? Boy—Know enough! Why, I left my last place because the boss said I knew more than he did.

It is understood that the British Post office has given notice that hereafter the following articles, even if samples only, if sent by mail to Great Britain, will not be delivered on arrival, but will be turned over to the customs authorities to be disposed of as may be deemed proper: Cocoa, coffee, chicory, currants, figs, fig-cakes, dried plums, prunes, raisins and apricots, peas, tobacco—manufactured or not, including cigars, cigarettes and snuff—hydrate of chloral, playing cards and transparent soap, in the manufacture of which alcohol is used. Interested parties should act and govern themselves accordingly, as the interdicted articles will not be forwarded from United States to Great Britain.

EGGS IN NEW YORK.

Commencing to-day eggs will be sold on this market "Inspector's average off" instead of "at the mark," as previously this season. Eggs are separated into two classifications, new laid and fresh gathered. Between March 1st and October 1st, stock is sold as new laid, and must comprise at least 90 per cent. of fresh, full and sweet eggs, the balance may be held or salted eggs, although when salted they are settled for at half price. From October 1st to March 1st eggs are sold as fresh gathered, and need only be 75 per cent. of new laid, the balance being fine sweet, held or salted eggs, but when salted, as with the classification of new laid, they have to be settled for at half price. New laid eggs are always sold at the mark, unless otherwise specified. In the spring the old and held stock is usually pretty well cleaned up before fresh stock arrives, and most of the eggs can be sold safely as new laid, there being little chance of the stock not passing inspection, which would incur a penalty upon the seller. But as the spring advances, and the weather becomes warmer and less favorable for holding, the eggs commence to show heavier losses, and the egg committee of the Mercantile Exchange, change the rule from at the mark to Inspector's average off, when they consider it necessary. As nearly all the receivers of eggs, certainly all the prominent ones, are members of the Exchange, almost the entire business is conducted under the supervision of the exchange, buyers and sellers being governed by the rules of the egg committee, even though the goods are not sold under the call. The number of eggs sold last month under the call amounted to 11,164 cases, and during the month of March 26,380 cases were sold. The quantity would be more than doubled were the entire sales made on the floor reported, but large quantities change hands, often after the call, which are not posted. For some time the trade have endeavored to have the egg committee change the rule governing sales to Inspector's average off, and it was thought they would appoint last Monday as the day to change, as they held a meeting last week; but they decided that on and after the 17th sales would be Inspector's average off, unless otherwise specified, instead of the mark.

The arrivals this spring have been large, and the quality unusually fine, as there were no eggs carried over from last fall, owing to the extreme prices current during the winter, and there have been no held or poor eggs to be worked off with the fresher goods, while the cool spring has kept stock well. The receipts have been, by months: January, 1,352 bbls., 57,057 cases; February, 2,120 bbls., 94,742 cases; March, 9,151 bbls., 306,727 cases; April, 8,042 bbls., 237,469 cases. Years ago most of the eggs were received in barrels, but they are gradually giving way to cases, which are more handy, cheaper, and much more in favor with the trade. The receipts in barrels the first four months this year were 20,665 barrels, while last year 44,254 bbls. arrived during the same period, and the previous year 66,550 bbls. arrived. From this it will be readily seen that in a comparatively short time barrels will be entirely obsolete.—N.Y. Bulletin.

VINEGAR.

There are essentially two classes of vinegar upon the market to-day, writes A. H. S. in National Grocer, viz., that made by fermentation and oxidation alone, and that made by the intervention of distillation between the oxidation and fermentation processes, and commonly known as alcohol vinegar. The former being produced from fruit juices and fermented malt liquors, carry with them a certain per cent. of solids, fruit acids, and mineral matter absolutely necessary to a complete food product. These elements are wanting in the second class (alcohol vinegar), and are practically impossible with any vinegar made from distilled liquor. These facts have created an almost universal demand for cider and malt vinegar. Investigation proves two conditions to exist between the dealers and consumers. First, the public generally want, and think they are getting cider or malt vinegar; second, that nine-tenths of the vinegar actually furnished to consumers is wholly or in part made from distilled liquor. The incentive for this deception is found in the difference in cost of production.

Alcohol distilled from corn, rye and like grains, when relieved from revenue tax, can be produced very cheaply, all low wines for the production of vinegar being exempt from United States revenue tax. Hence a merchantable distilled vinegar can be produced as low as three cents per gallon, or less than half the cost of the material from which a gallon of cider vinegar is made, besides requiring much less time to make it. In order to continue this fraud two things are necessary. First, the reputation, demand and price of fermented vinegar must be kept up. Secondly, to most successfully and economically produce an imitation to be substituted for it. To this end the intelligence and ingenuity of unscrupulous men have been taxed to the uttermost, and large trusts or combinations have been formed between many producers of and dealers in distilled vinegar throughout the country.

To protect the people from this injustice the legislatures of some States (notably Massachusetts) have enacted laws prohibiting artificial coloring matter in any vinegar. Consequently the line is squarely drawn between fermented and distilled vinegar, because the former cannot be made without color, except it be bleached, while it is impossible to get color into the latter without the addition of coloring matter. There can be no injustice done to either class by such a law, as each would then stand or fall on its own merits and neither could be mistaken for the other.

Some dealers are of the opinion that in buying vinegar from the farmers they are securing an article not only pure, but which meets all the requirements of the law. Now, this is not always the case, for while the vinegar may have been made from cider many farmers who make by the old process (and nearly all do) complain that they cannot get their vinegar up to the mark and reach the standard set by law without fortifying.

A HINT TO YOUNGE CLERKS.

Said an old man of eighty, whose career had been one of marked success: "It is a great thing for a boy to have a nail to hang his hat on." He had possessed such a nail in his mother's old kitchen, and all the family were taught to respect it. If the broom was hung on Henry's nail it was quickly removed and nothing was allowed to interfere with the little orderly habit he had been so early taught, of hanging up his hat instead of throwing it down when he came in. It seemed a small matter, yet he felt it had done much for him in helping to make him an orderly, careful, systematic man.

Once get the seed of a good habit well planted, and then stir the soil properly, and it will grow and multiply. It is surprising to see how one grain of good wheat will, under favorable circumstances, increase. A farmer at the West, who had plenty of rich prairie soil, tried the experiment, and at the end of the third year reported seventeen bushels as the proceeds of the one grain. Akin to this is the growth of good or evil habits in our characters. Each is likely to bring with it a harvest.

Looking through a boy's personal possessions would tell more about his characteristics than any letter of recommendation. As this is a way of determining your character, always open to yourself, it is well sometimes to take a survey with a view to becoming better acquainted with one's self. Throwing things around, and stirring up things in a trunk or drawer to find missing articles do not point toward a successful business career. Thrift and advancement seldom seek such quarters.

When one is really satisfied that here is his weak point, it is good to make a beginning towards a reformation. A nail to hang his hat on is something. A shelf of books set in orderly array is encouraging every time one looks that way, and once get the business fairly started it will be far easier to keep things in order than not. Very disorderly people have turned squarely around and become just reverse. It is a quality more cultivated than is generally supposed. Indeed, reformed people, I have noticed, are apt to carry the matter to an extreme, but it was much more to their advantage than the opposite. Still, the earlier it is commenced the better, and the more thoroughly it is extended to all the affairs of life, the greater will be the chance in one's favor. No one can make the most of himself and his abilities without such habits of order and precision.—Ex.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"Well, there is one thing that I think the law should put a stop to, and that is the adulteration of baking powder," I heard a Yonge street grocer say the other day. "Why it is getting terrible."

"I should say it was," chimed in a city traveller, "why half of it is nothing but a lot of phosphate."

"Phosphate!" interjected the Yonge street man. "It's worse than that. Why man, dear, they use sulphuric acid; one in the business acknowledged as much to me the other day. Well, I'll tell you what he did say: 'When I am testing the pure powder I eat the piece of cake in which it is placed, but when I am testing the adulterated article I merely bite off a piece of the cake in which it has been placed, and spit it out again.' Yes, sir, that is what that man said to me, and he didn't seem a bit ashamed, either," concluded the grocer as he turned to wait on a customer.

"There is one thing that the clerks in the wholesale houses along the street should do," said one of them to me the other day, "and that is organize an association, secure rooms near by, put in a billiard table, and keep on file the trade and daily papers. We would be able to go there during lunch hour and have a quiet smoke, read the papers, or have a game of billiards. I think it would be a fine thing, don't you?" I do think it would be a fine thing, and its usefulness might be extended by the addition of a sort of information bureau regarding vacancies or clerks wanting situations. The next thing to be done is for someone to move in the matter.

* * *

During one of my tours in quest of news this week I strolled into J. W. Lang & Co.'s sample room. Mr. Lang had not any important information. "But, by-the-bye," he added, "I received a sample bag of firecrackers this morning. No letter accompanied them, but the parcel was marked 'Quebec,' so I suppose somebody down there is going into the manufacture of firecrackers. You see they appear to be well made," he remarked, as he dipped down into the bag and pulled out a handful for my inspection.

"Indeed they do," put in Mr. Sam McQua, who travels the city for the firm, "but they will have to get up pretty early if they are going to outstrip the Chinese, who now have a monopoly of the business."

"Well, let's try one of them. I guess it won't do any harm here," remarked Mr. Lang, as he struck a match where a man always does, and applied the light to the fuse. He held the match to the fuse but it refused to fizz, and then as he dropped the match, he exclaimed: "Why, it's a piece of twine." And then he gave it a pull, and instead of the usual contents of a firecracker, rolled around the string was a strip of narrow paper on which were printed the names and prices of some of the cigars manufactured by S. Davis & Sons, Montreal. "Well, that's a unique and clever way to advertise," remarked Mr. Lang when the general laugh which followed the discovery had subsided.

... STICKY FLY PAPER ...

Is packed 25 double sheets and two holders in each box; 12 double sheets loose in the box and two packages, each consisting of a holder with five double sheets.

Each double sheet is separately sealed with our wax border, while permitting the easy and ready separation of the sheets, absolutely confines the soft sticky mass in its place, preventing all loss from leakage and preserving each sheet indefinitely until used.

Price, in the Eastern Provinces of Canada,

One Box - - - 60 cents.

One Case, 10 Boxes, $5.25.

Tanglefoot is sold by all the Leading Jobbers of Canada, Druggists and Grocers.

The outlook for the merchant and husbandman of this country is by no means bad. The fields promise, take it all round, to give a good yield of grain, roots and hay, while the fruits, both cultivated and wild, are expected, in many instances, to yield bountifully.

Law suits are undesirable things. You may go into them and come out with the satisfaction that you have won. But too often that is about all you get, particularly if it be for the collection of an account that you are suing. You may take off your coat and give the other fellow a good thrashing, but if while you are thus engaged somebody walks off with your coat, the pleasures of victory are diluted with the knowledge that you are the victim of a theft. Yet this is what is occurring every day in tilts between creditor and debtor. The trouble is with the law. At one time the pendulum swung high in the creditor's favor. And in this connection our minds revert to the harrowing scenes in debtors' prisons so graphically described by Dickens. But of late nearly all amendments to the law have favored the debtor to the disadvantage of the creditor. As a result the pendulum now swings high in the opposite direction, or, in other words, the anomaly has been taken from the shoulders of the one and placed in another form on those of the other. The intention was to protect the poor but honest man who could not pay his debts from the hand of the stern creditor, but now the dishonest as well as the honest debtor often seeks shelter beneath the robes of the law. It is not necessary to specify. Nearly every merchant knows it is so from actual experience.

"Don't give credit, and then you'll have no difficulty about collecting your accounts," is the specie of argument used by some when the defective condition of the law regarding the collection of accounts is pointed out to them. But this line of argument is about as sensible as it would be for some one to say, in urging for a decrease in the police force, that if people properly guarded their premises burglars could not get in. The credit system is part and parcel of our business system; is engrafted in it, and is not likely to be soon, if ever, removed. A any rate, whether it be permanent or not, one thing is patent: As long as it does exist there ought to be laws to enforce the payment of accounts more cheaply and expeditiously than at present. Of course the ratio of a merchant's losses from bad debts will depend largely upon himself. If he is lax in his methods it will necessarily be large. No law will ever prevent it from being otherwise. While after all a careful scrutiny of accounts is the best preventative of loss, there are times when the most watchful of business men are led to give credit to those who are unworthy of it, and it is in order to cover such cases as this that the law needs to be extended.

Protection against fire is a subject that is at the moment commanding more than usual attention. The cause of the increased interest is the number of fires that have of late been occurring. Canada as well as the United States has suffered, and here, as there, they have been attended with loss of life, although probably not to the same extent. Among those who are taking a prominent part in the discussion in the United States is Albert A. Pope, who has heretofore earned a reputation as an advocate of improved country roads. Briefly stated, the climax of his argument is for the placing of fire brigades on a semi-military basis, and with this end in view he would have the subject of how to control a city conflagration treated, under a discipline similar to that adopted at military and naval academies, in a scientific way, in the polytechnic schools of the country as a special branch of study. The more efficient the fire brigade the less danger is there of course of a conflagration taking place. This is frequently demonstrated. But there are also the small towns and villages to be considered. They cannot afford to keep up an expensive and well disciplined organization. Some communities, such for instance as where there may be only a store, blacksmith shop and saloon, can scarcely be expected to maintain even an ordinary hand fire engine, but it is a well-known fact that there are in this country even respectably-sized villages of one thousand inhabitants or more that do not possess even this antiquated instrument. At a fire in one of this class of villages not so very long ago the spectators had to resort to the unique method of throwing snowballs to keep it from spreading to the roof of an adjoining building. Fires, like rivers, are never large at the commencement, and what is wanted is something conveniently and constantly on hand to extinguish a blaze in its incipency or that will tend to prevent it from rapidly spreading until more efficient means arrive. What this convenient extinguisher shall be is for every business man or manufacturer to determine for himself, and as a help in the premises he might give his clerks and his children too, if he is fortunate enough to have any, a little drilling occasionally in the extinguishing of incipient fires—yes, and a little instruction to the women folk would not be thrown away—for upon a cool head and prompt action much often depends in matters of this kind.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON CLOSING

Wednesday afternoon closing is subject that is being much discussed at the moment by the retail grocers of Toronto. For three or four years past most of the grocers, particularly the leading ones, have been in the habit of closing their places of business every Wednesday afternoon in the week during June, July and August; and they are all of one accord in regard to the benefits derived from the practice. But, from what can be gathered from a remark dropped here and an innuendo thrown out there it is just possible that blinds will not be drawn or store doors locked with the same unanimity and alacrity as formerly.

The reason is of course the same one that is periodically trotted out whenever any movement in the direction of early closing is inaugurated—the fear that the nearest competitor will adopt a contrary course, keep open and catch the trade that belongs to he who shuts up. In other words selfishness and its offspring jealousy are the obstacles that threaten to block this as it does about everything else having for its object the betterment of the grocer's condition.

The price of success in the grocery trade is close application to business. The keenness of competition and the small margin of profit demands it. But attention to business does not mean enslavement to it. A merchant, like any other human being, needs relaxation and change now and then. By closing his store at seven o'clock, as a good many are now doing, some opportunity is afforded; but at the best it is comparatively small. He and his clerks can take in a concert, call on their friends, enjoy a quiet drive or boat sail the cool of the evening, but that is about all. By two or three hours after closing the night is old, when sleep and not pleasure is in order. One free afternoon each week, however, gives merchant and clerk time and opportunity to go where they can find complete change of environment, pure air, and sunshine unobscured by city smoke. They can board a steamer, and get out on the lake and sniff its invigorating breezes, or allow themselves to be carried to one of the many resorts that are within a few hours' sail of the city, or in vehicle or on horse or on "bilk" take a trip into the country where the trees are budding, the birds of many species singing, the grain ripening, and where a hundred and one things can be found to admire and to detract the mind from the cares of business.

Life at the best is but short, and in his journey through it the man of business has got his share of hills to climb and thorny bushes to push his way through. But there are also fertile plains and valleys in which flowers and fruits abound. The periods when the mind is free from business cares are some of these plains and valleys, and turning into them one afternoon a week is surely seldom enough when the rest of the week it is probably hill-climbing. Close your store Wednesday afternoons, and never mind what your neighbor does. The chances are that he will not be long in following your example. But even if he does not you will soon overtake him in the race for business, although the chances are that he will be the first to cross the river of Death. But it is success and health, not death, that the average grocer is after.

POOR OUTLOOK FOR CURRANTS.

The position of the currant market has been one of considerable strength for some time. A number of causes have contributed to this end. Last season the vines in Greece were ravaged by the currant-grower's dreaded enemy, the peronosporo. Then came destructive earthquakes to some of the currant districts, and following these things came the natural concomitant, financial depression. A few weeks ago the cables announced the advent of further earthquakes, which were more destructive than the previous ones. In last week's GROCER was published this forecast of the crop made by Barff & Co. of Patras, May 6: "The coming crop is not progressing as favorably as usual at this season of the year; the cold and frost experienced during February and the early part of April caused much damage to the buds and plants generally and the vegetation is stunted and uneven, in many districts the show of blossom is small, so that only a small crop is expected. Peronosporos has appeared amongst the rose plants and in a few isolated cases has been observed on the leaves of the currant vines, but it is yet too early to expect any general visitation of the malady. We very much fear it is lurking in the plants and that it will show up before long, but the extent of damage it may cause will very much depend upon the state of the atmosphere during the next month." Saturday last P. L. Mason & Co., of Toronto, received a cable from Patras announcing that the fears regarding the re-appearance of the peronosporo had only been too fully realized, it having resumed its attack on the vines. Under any case it was expected that the currant crop would be short this season owing to the disasters of last season, but, in view of the latest developments, it now promises to be very much so.

RE MOLASSES AND SUGAR.

Mr. Felix Taussig, of New York, was in Toronto last week. As an authority on sugar, molasses and kindred subjects he stands high, and when THE GROCER ran against him the conversation naturally turned on these articles.

"The molasses market with us at present," he said in reply to a query, "is dull but strong owing to the scant supplies. The stocks at principal points are about exhausted. At New Orleans there remains hardly any desirable goods fit for grocery purposes. My trip to Cuba this season was far from satisfactory, as I could not secure one-half the molasses I wanted. I found very few plantations left that were making Muscavado sugars and molasses, and the Cuba Muscavado molasses is the only kind fit for grocery purposes. The centrifugal, or second molasses can only be used for distilling. The demand for molasses in the United States this year has been unprecedented. The reason of this was the high prices of pork products, and in our Southern country, where pork is one of the principal foods for the poor, they substitute molasses to a great extent when pork is high. Owing to the enormous increase in the consumption of molasses this season there remains very little stock in the various distributing points, and, as I have already said, hardly any at principal points. I see, therefore, no reason why values should not be enhanced considerably in the near future. All we have to wait for is a renewed demand, which is bound to come long before we can depend on replenishing our stocks from the present growing crops. Speaking for ourselves I can say that we have to-day the smallest stock of molasses that we have ever had at this season of the year, and I can safely assert that every other house is in the same fix and probably more so as we have been liberal buyers from the beginning of the season.

"On sugars I think the situation is even stronger. All crops are short and the increase in demand greater than ever before. The prospects with us in the United States are that the demand to come in the near months will be something never before equalled. Our fruit crops promise to be very large and the enormous quantities of sugar that will be required for preserving and canning is bound to advance prices. Our latest cable from Cuba said that the crop was about finished and that grinding operations had ceased on most plantations, and the estimated crop would be about 760,000 tons, which shows a shortage of about 150,000 tons. The reports on the beet crops are also of large shortages, and I can therefore see no reason why sugars will not advance materially between now and next September. Speaking with a large sugar importer the other day he used quite a novel argument about the coming increase in the demand for sugar. His words were: 'Just think of the hundreds of thousands of people that will visit the World's Fair and then figure the millions of cocktails, gin fizzes, lemonades, milk punches, and all other beverages that will be drank. And all contain sugar.' This of course is the funny side of the question, but in my mind there is no doubt that all sweets must advance. There is nothing to stop them until next January, when we get the new crop from Cuba. The recent lower cables on sugar from London were entirely speculative and caused by the realizing of speculators who held stocks of sugars since then, however the market has improved and prices are higher."

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"Anything new?" said a traveller to me Saturday in reply to a query for news, "Well, can't say there is. But, say, there is one thing that should be exposed," he added, as with a look of indignation overspreading his features, he stopped in the work of replenishing his tea samples, busy as he was. "And it is this: You know that there is a fixed price for tobacco, but some of those Montreal houses, and Toronto houses too, bad luck to them, are giving rebates. Yes, and by-the-bye," he added as he touched my shoulder, "even some of the Collingwood fellows are guilty of the practice. Well, when I say the houses I mean their travellers are. And this is how they do it: You are a grocer. You buy tobacco from those fellows presumably at the regulation price, and your invoice will show it, but the fact is you pay just one cent a pound less than the regular price for your tobacco, for the traveller goes down in his pocket and hands you back a cent for every pound of tobacco you have bought. I say it is dishonorable; it is mean. I can give you the names of the people who are buying from these fellows if you wish. One merchant told me that he gets a rebate direct from the house. How's that? That's combination for you! Why, do you know, there are some towns—Peterboro' for instance—where I cannot sell a pound of tobacco. When I try to do business with them they simply laugh at me and say: 'Old fellow, you are not in it.' Of course it makes me mad, but what can I do. We're not going to give any rebate, you can bet on that. Why we only get four cents a pound on tobacco, and what is that, taking into consideration all the expense and loss we have to bear."

"Well I am particularly surprised at the Montreal houses. Why if you will believe me, it was only the other other day that some of them were up here trying to induce the Toronto houses to put the price of tobacco up a cent," interrupted his superior, who was standing near by. "O, it annoys me, and I think it is dishonorable of all concerned."

"Yes, I am just down from Collingwood," said a gentleman to me last week. "But there has been nothing extraordinary happening up there that I know of, except it be that George Miller of Gravenhurst, has been visiting his old friends there. Who is he? Well at present he is manager for Homer & Co., of Gravenhurst. I think that's the firm, but at one time he occupied a similar position with a Collingwood firm. That's when he got his popularity with the Collingwood boys, and he has just been down renewing old acquaintanceships. O, he's the boy I can tell you; and he's like the Scotchman who kept the Sabbath and everything else he could lay his hand on, particular business and his friends, and what is more he he still well preserves his avoirdupois—some 300 pounds of solid good nature. Well, ta, ta, call in and see us if you ever come to Collingwood"

* * *

"Some people talk of sympathy for those retailers who were found selling soaked peas the other day," said a wholesaler to me, "they thought they were getting something cheap and that is about all they cared. They knew they could not get goods that were up to quality for the price they paid. But, O well, I suppose they have learned a lesson. At least I hope they have. Do you know that the matter had a somewhat injurious effect on the sale of canned peas for a while? Well it did, but I don't know that it worked any harm in the long run, for I think the incident enlightened the consumer a good deal as to the difference between canned and soaked peas."

BYSTANDER.

ASSOCIATION TALK.

The opening meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, to be held in June, is being looked forward to with a good deal of pleasure by the members. Messrs. R. Donald and Robert Mills, who are to lead the affirmative and negative respectively in the debate, "Resolved, that travellers are a benefit to the trade," are finding time, when not engaged sharpening up arguments for the fray, to add a number here and there to the programme of vocal and instrumental music and readings which is also being prepared under their supervision.

The members of the Cardiff Grocers' Association are considering the advisability of adopting a uniform price of bread by bakers and grocers.

The recent war between the Retail Grocers' Association and the commission merchants of Indianapolis, Ind., which resulted in the boycotting of all commission men who would not sign an agreement to quit retailing, has now involved the local millers. The millers agreed not to sell to the consumer, but supposed that, in thus binding themselves to the retail grocers, it was understood that the grocers would reciprocate, and buy flour at home. The millers claim this is not done, and that instead of bettering their condition they have simply added to the profits of the grocers without receiving any benefits themselves. They have appointed a committee to make terms with the grocers, and seem to be anxious to terminate the affair harmoniously, being inclined to look upon it as a misunderstanding rather than as an intentional affront.—American Grocer.

The retail grocers of Superior, Wis., are considering the advisability of forming an association for the purpose of adopting a strictly cash basis.

There are 3,000 grocers in New York city, and at a recent meeting of the Retail Grocers' Union there, an ex-president held that out of that number one half ought to be in the ranks of the association.

Officers of the Horse Insurance Fund in connection with the Retail Grocers' Union, of New York, report that 3 per cent. on the valuation of the animals insured cover all expenses. No assessment has ever been levied.

At a recent meeting of the Scottish Shopkeepers' and Assistants' Union, the chairman said that the recent plebiscite in Glasgow had shown that about 6,000 shopkeepers (employers) were in favor of early closing being secured by legislation. That was now within almost measurable distance owing to the efforts of the Union and the London Early Closing Association. But, while there were 6,000 shopkeepers in favor of Act of Parliament, only 1,659 of these had subscribed funds towards it furtherance, and their combined subscriptions amounted to only £115. He thought that in this lay the most of the delay in settling the question. If 6,000 shopkeepers and shop assistants were to subscribe at the rate of only 1d. per week an annual income of £1,300 would result to the Union. The Union had already expended £800 in furthering the object, and the directors hoped that by putting the matter before the shopkeepers they would be able to procure the requisite funds to carry forward the measure in Parliament to a successful issue.

NEW CROP JAPAN TEAS.

The first samples of new crop Japan teas consigned to the Toronto market arrived here Monday last. The teas themselves are expected end of this week; and Monday next will probably see wholesalers shipping out to the trade. The quality is fine and equal to anything seen on this market for some time. The choicest will sell at from about 35 to 40c. a pound.

The samples mentioned as arriving on this market last week were of teas consigned to New York, where they sold at 43 to 48c. This was of course too high a price for this market. Three or four hundred packages of the choicest sold there without sample, the stipulation being that the tea should be up to standard; and it turned out to be rather better.

THE HISTORY AND MYSTERY OF TEA.

"Tea; its History and Mystery," is the title of a 265-page book issued by Joseph M. Walsh of Philadelphia, who is already known as the author of a work on coffee. The obstacles and difficulties its author had met with in his endeavors to learn something of tea when he first entered the trade was the motive which led him to undertake the present work. The material composing it was collected during a period covering twenty years, and arranged subsequently in its present attractive and readable form. The book consists of ten chapters and the subject it treats of is dealt with in this order: (1) Early history, (2) geographical description, (3) botanical characteristics and form, (4) cultivation and preparation, (5) classification and description, (6) adulteration and detection, (7) testing, blending and preparing, (8) chemical, medical and dietical properties, (9) world's production and consumption, (10) tea culture, a probable American industry. The book is illustrated, and the time spent in perusing its contents will by no means be ill-spent.

SALMON PACKING ON THE COAST.

DEAR GROCER,—Thinking it may be of interest to the grocery trade I am sending you a few facts I have gathered respecting the preparations being made on this coast for the salmon packing season. As you are doubtless aware this is the year of the big runs on the Fraser river and every canner is making preparations to avail himself to the full capacity of his factory of the expected large supply of fish. There are this year twenty-five canneries on the Fraser, all now engaged in making cans. There is no combination or limitation among the packers as to their output, and as the preparations average 20,000 cases for each factory, the total pack on the Fraser this year will be half a million cases, if the salmon run is anything like what it was four years ago, the last "big run" year. There are fifteen canneries in the other parts of the province which will add about 125,000 cases, making the total for British Columbia 625,000 cases. In Alaska there is no combination among the packers, neither is there on the Columbia river. Taking everything into consideration it is considered by competent judges that this year will show the largest pack of salmon ever put up on the Pacific coast, and if all the cans now being made are filled, it will be decidedly a case of over production and everything points to low prices this fall.

Yours truly,

A. HENDERSON.

A GENTLE REMINDER RE COCOA.

EDITOR GROCER,—I notice in this week's Mail, in its grocery report, what purports to be an item of "news" regarding cocoa. The item claims to contain the views of a bona fide grocer, but happily the grocers of that kind are getting scarce. He mentioned the names of three makers, all foreign, and not the makers of the best cocoas either, not one English or Canadian name in the list. Is it possible that even in its commercial columns the Mail writers must wear the same old green goggles. Some of the grocers have been slow to recognize merit in a home article, and they cannot be blamed, for the reason that very often the quality was not up to the mark, but I think it is the duty of all Canadians to support home goods when they have equal or greater merit than the foreign ones, and next to Canadian we should give our preference to English goods.

Yours, etc.,

J. W. COWAN,

Cowan Cocoa & Chocolate Co.

Toronto, May 26, 1893.

VALUE OF THE SILVER DOLLAR.

An interesting table showing the commercial value of the silver in a silver dollar from 1872 until the present year is as follows:

Calendar Year.	Value.	Calendar Year.	Value.
1873.....	$1.004	1883.....	$0 858
1874.....	.988	1884.....	.861
1875.....	.964	1885.....	.823
1876.....	.894	1886.....	.709
1877.....	.929	1887.....	.758
1878.....	.891	1888.....	.727
1879.....	.868	1889.....	.724
1880.....	.886	1890.....	.809
1881.....	.881	1891.....	.764
1882.....	.878	1892.....	.764

At the date of the passage of the present silver law (July 14, 1890), the price of silver in London was 49¼ pence, equivalent to $1.07¼ per fine ounce. The highest point reached since the passage of the act was in New York, August 19, 1890—$1.21 per fine ounce, and in London, September 3, 1890—54½ pence, equivalent to $1.19¼ per fine ounce. The lowest price of silver was reached during the last calendar year, viz., $0.83 a fine ounce, showing a decline from the highest price in two years and a half of $0.38 an ounce.

TIN POISONING IN PRESERVES.

It is only during recent years that chemists and hygienists have given the subject of tin poisoning by preserves in tin cans serious consideration, says N. Y. Bulletin. Confirmatory evidence is abundant and the remedy indicated seems to be in finding some coating for the interior of the can that will resist the action of the organic acids and the sulphur contained in the albuminous matter of vegetables, meat, etc., on the tin of the cans.

A Holland manufacturer, C. Verwer, of Krommeine, has succeeded in preparing a varnish which, according to some investigations recently made, answers the purpose perfectly. In this invention not only must the varnish resist the action of the preserves, but it must be perfectly adherent.

In order to determine whether the above-mentioned varnish was capable of preventing the solvent action of the acids on tin, some of the most acid foods, such as sauerkraut, buttermilk, and pears in wine, after four to nine months' keeping in varnished cans, were subjected to examination. Only imponderable traces of tin were found. The same results were obtained with a sample of beans coming from France, and examined after being preserved twelve years in a varnished can. This latter example is of less importance since beans and peas free from salt dissolve almost no tin. The investigator was unable to obtain acid foods which had been preserved for so long a time, but in his opinion the experience acquired after four to nine months suffices to strongly recommend the varnishing process, in consideration of the strong reactions which occur in unvarnished cans. With experience thus far gained, sorrel is the only vegetable whose action the varnish is unable to withstand.

It is strongly urged that varnished cans alone be used, especially for acids foods, and it seems important that the various governments should give the matter consideration. Several manufacturers have already adopted the process for foods and beverages.

PRESERVATION OF CANNED APPLES.

While it is not "a well-established fact," as a contemporary solemnly avers, that canned apples, in common with other canned goods, undergo a change, and that their flavor is either entirely destroyed or sufficiently altered to render them more or less unpalatable in course of time; yet any process or improvement looking to their better preservation is not unworthy of consideration and investigation; for it so happens at times that the cans are not absolutely airtight or hermetically sealed, and in this way decomposition or deterioration is brought about, thus creating as "a well-established fact" what is really an exceptional case. Intense heat, too, when sufficient to make itself felt within the can, is not without an injurious effect; but while fruit is not often spoiled through such a possibility, the few exceptions that there have been are sufficient to warrant the adoption of improved methods provided any better process can be demonstrated. Cold storage, to be sure, is a safe-guard against any danger of this sort; but, besides the expense, it is not always practicable where the fruit has passed from the hands of the manufacturer into those of the retailer, to be held until disposed of to the consumer; and while the first mentioned may think that all responsibility, so far as he is concerned, is at an end when the goods pass from his possession, he must not overlook the fact that if they subsequently spoil or deteriorate, the blame will be laid at the door of the packer. So it is, after all, to his interest to assure their preservation, if possible, until finally opened for consumption. To this end a Chicago, Ill., genius, has conceived the idea of employing an air-tight can or receptacle from which the air can be exhausted and carbonic acid gas substituted, which, it is claimed, has the effect of effectually preserving the fruit while neither altering the flavor nor imparting to it any unpalatable taste—American Cider Maker.

BLENDED TEA IN ENGLAND.

In a discussion between the members of a grocers' association in England in relation to the tea trade, one of the leading disputants said that he thought many grocers made a mistake by buying blended teas instead of blending their own, thus sacrificing their individuality. It was quite impossible for any blending house in London to blend a tea that would be suitable equally for Coventry, Leicester, the Potteries and Birmingham. He gave some loose tea to show that their loose tea was better than packet, and in buying blended tea they were losing touch with their customers. "This emphasizes the necessity of every dealer in tea studying the wants of his neighborhood and of placing his tea trade upon an independent basis," remarks American Grocer.

CANNED GOODS GOSSIP.

British Columbia papers say that fish are still being taken in moderate numbers, but the large number of boats on the river runs the average per net lower than usual.

Canneries on the Nova Scotia coast have been securing a very fair supply of lobsters recently. The Digby Canning Company, it is reported, boiled about 6,000 in two days recently. It is also noted that shipments of lobsters from Yarmouth to Boston have been unusually heavy.

There have as yet been no advices of relief from drought in France, says a New York paper. The pea packing season is therefore very backward, and about the only work done thus far is the putting up of a moderate quantity of common and inferior articles. That the drought reports are radically different from the ordinary crop scare is an established fact. All information goes to show that the crop has been seriously injured, and that it is now beyond recovery that would enable canners to put up their average pack and assortment. Significant in this connection is the fact, well authenticated, that some packers have bought back contracts made early in the season, paying $1 per case above the original contract price; and that as high as $1.50 per case has been paid in a few instances to cancel orders. Spot goods, last season's pack, have advanced sharply as well. "Fines" are commanding $2 per case more than they could have easily been purchased at six weeks ago, and other sizes have undergone nearly, if not quite, as radical change in value.

The Armour Packing Co. have brought out a new line of canned soups, packed in 2-pound tins. The line consists of braised beef with vegetables; braised beef with gumbo and rice; braised beef with piquant sauce. The soups retail at 30c. per can.

Apropos of canned tomatoes, some statistics were brought to notice that deserve passing thought, if not serious consideration. In brief, the data show that nearly or quite 7,000,000 cases will have been distributed and a large percentage consumed during the two years ending August, 1893. In other words, it is figured out that the consumption for 1892 and 1893 amounts to at least 3,300,000 cases per annum. That jobbers have light stocks is evidenced in the fact that they are obliged to pay $1.20 to $1.25 per dozen for tomatoes to keep on hand enough goods to accommodate their regular trade. That retailers are not carrying any too many may be inferred that their current purchases are but little behind the average for the season. Prices at the opening this season were about 85 to 90c. delivered, or 30 to 35c. per dozen below present selling price. In connection with the facts above outlined, this one speaks for itself. Another little suggestion was brought up. It may be summarized thus: There are at least 150,000 retail grocers in the United States. Ten cases to each at the beginning of the coming season would absorb 1,500,000 cases, or over 40 per cent. of the quantity packed last season. Opening prices this year are as low as they were last year. Why should the consumption not be as large and tomatoes as "good value?"—N. Y. Bulletin.

There are 43 canning establishments in California, 10 of which did not pack fruits for the season of 1892. With a view to arrive at substantially correct results regarding this growing industry in the State, the California Fruit grower has been at great pains and labor in the compilation of the following facts and statistics. These have been obtained from the various canning companies themselves under circumstances eliminating all probabilities of exaggerated statements or erroneous returns. They may therefore be regarded as a practically safe guide to the canners themselves and to the trade generally, as indicating the requirements of the present season, making due allowance for stock on hand. If these figures shall assist canners and dealers in the adjustment of supplies to consumption, and thus maintain a steady market for our canned goods, the California Fruit Grower will be amply repaid for its three months' labor of correspondence and investigation relative to this important matter. During the season of 1892 the 33 canneries operating in California packed fruits as follows:—Apricots, 385,757 cases; peaches, 565,455 cases; pears, 268,479 cases; plums, 135,296 cases; other fruits, berries, grapes, cherries, etc., 247,409 cases; total pack, 1,602,369 cases. A case of standard fruit consists of 24 cans of 2½ pounds each; and while all fruit was not put in such manner, some being put into larger cans, the calculation of amounts is based upon the standard packed as noted. That is to say, the canned fruit pack of California for the season of 1892 amounted to an aggregate of 1,602,369 cases, or 112,165,830 pounds, including syrup and packages. The pack of tomatoes was 228,492 cases and that of other vegetables 33,224 cases.

Among the Canadian exhibitors of canned goods, says a contemporary referring to the Worlds Fair is the well-known firm of Boulter & Sons, Picton, Ont., who have sent a large display of their fruits and vegetables in cans. The well-known label of the Erie Preserving Co., St. Catharines, Ont., is also conspicuous in the Canadian exhibit.

Reports come from various points between Maryland and California to the effect that bank accommodation is so tightly drawn that some canners of fruit and vegetables are inconvenienced. Whether financial conditions will lean to a curtailment of packing operations is however very uncertain.

Early orders for British Columbia canned salmon, 1893 season, N. Y. Bulletin is informed are ahead of the average for this season of the year in Canadian and English markets.

The receipts of Southern peas by boat at this port do not indicate an average crop, but they may come with a rush a little later on. As a rule the 10th of May averages the time when packers may take steamboat peas, but receipts will have to increase mightily in the next few days to bring this year to an average on time. Last year the early steamboat peas were very fine and found great favor with the packers of the finest quality. Reports are that peas have been drowned out in the lower Ohio section, where some of the heaviest planting for packers has been done, but peas easily recover from injuries, and aside from a slight reduction of supply the packers there will not suffer more than a slight delay. As the acreage this year was considerably reduced from an average in the section where the "Viners" are operated any serious loss of supply would leave the market barer than it has been for several seasons past.—Trade, Baltimore.

The outlook for canned salmon is, if anything, more perplexing than usual at this season of the year. Spot stocks of ordinary goods seem to be just a trifle heavier than it was estimated some time ago that they would be at the middle of May, and an air of mystery is assumed by the Alaska canners combine that by no means promotes confidence as to the future. The impression prevalent here that there will likely be some friction between the combine and the independent canners, due as it is to interpretation of the spirit of recent correspondence from the Coast, prompts indifference, to say the least, on the part of eastern buyers generally. The idea seems to have become whispered that the combine's price for red fish will not be above $1 per dozen f.o.b. San Francisco, if the Alaska pack this season exceeds 600,000 cases, and the impression gains ground that if a contest between the different interests takes place, the opening price will be nearer to 90c. So much for possibilities on this side of the Atlantic. Another suggestive fact is that the British Columbia pack this season will be limited only by the supply of fish cans and labor. The only interpretation of this is that Alaska canners are likely to meet active competition in the foreign markets. As for the Columbia River, there is quite satisfactory evidence that the fish packed in that quarter will be pushed vigorously in all markets if prices for Alaska fish are not kept on a comparatively low level.—N. Y. Bulletin.

The Tatamagouche correspondent of the Truro News writes: "The season has arrived when preparations are being made for the lobster fishery. Our packers are in good cheer, as the outlook just now in prices is fairly good, being much better than this time last year. Lobster canning of late years has assumed large proportions, and is now quite an important industry on the Northumberland Strait. Already all the available young men and women are booked for the season. Not a little of the money in circulation is obtained from this source. The McLellan Bros are the only packers of this town; they are now making ready in anticipation of a good summer's work. Our bay, as well as the straight and gulf, are clear of ice, so that they who go down to the sea in ships and lobster boats and do business on our waters can now do so without obstruction."

FACTS ABOUT CASSIA.

Cassia, or bastard cinnamon, as it is sometimes called, is indigenous to the forests of Quang-ting and Quang-see in China, and is grown in several parts of South Asia, says Merchants' Review. Some of very fine quality, of late years, has been imported here from Java and Saigon. The trees which are cultivated are kept as a sort of coppice, and numerous shoots spring from the roots. These are not allowed to rise higher than about ten feet. When the trees first put forth their flame-colored leaves and delicate blossoms, the scenery is exquisitely beautiful. In three years after planting each tree affords one shoot fit for cutting; at the fifth year from three to five shoots may be taken, but it requires the vigor of eight years before it yields as many as ten branches of an inch in thickness. From the age of ten to twelve years is the period of its greatest perfection, but its duration of life is not limited, as the root spreads and annually sends up new shoots or suckers. The tree is in its best state when the bark separates easily from the wood and has the inside covered with a mucilaginous juice; but if that be not carefully removed the flavor of the spice is injured. The shoots are cut when from half to three-quarters of an inch in thickness, and in length from one to three feet; the bark is instantly stripped from the wood, and freed from the epidermis, which is scraped off. The fragrance diffused around during this process is extremely delightful. The wood, when deprived of its bark, has no smell, and is only used for fuel. When the bark is cleansed it is of a pale yellow color; and it is then thoroughly dried in the sun, where it curls up and becomes of a much darker tint. The small pieces, when practicable, are then put inside the larger ones, and the whole close together in the tubular form in which it is sold in the stores.

When the rind or bark is first taken from the tree it consists of an outer portion, which tastes like common bark, and an inner portion which is very sweet and pungent. In the course of the drying the oil of the inner portion, on which the flavor wholly depends, is communicated to the whole, and the quality of the entire bark depends more upon the relative qualities of those portions of the bark than upon anything else. The Ceylon cinnamon has the outer portion much thinner than the cassia of other countries, and thus its higher pungency. There are three styles or classes of cassia—the "thin quill," or inner bark, manipulated without its outer rind, which seldom comes into this market in its genuine state; the "cassia vera," or the bark proper taken from the green yearling shoot, and which is often very aromatic; and the lignea, or woody bark, taken from near the trunk. The principal exports are from China and Batavia. Under favorable circumstances the tree yields a large and small harvest every year

The large one is obtained soon after the fruit is ripe; that is, when the tree has again pushed out shoots and the sap is in full circulation. May and June are the best months for the great harvest; in November and December the little harvest is obtained. Oil of cassia or cinnamon is generally distilled from the fragments broken off in packing, but a very great portion of cassia that finds its way into our market has been "sweated," or the greater portion of its oil extracted. A very small quantity of oil is contained in the bark, one hundred pounds of which are required to yield half a pound of oil; consequently it is extravagantly dear. When distilled from the finest cinnamon its specific gravity is greater, but from the cassia it is less than that of water.

Though cassia has found a place in our pharmacopœia, the purpose to which it has been applied by the South Americans invests it with medical properties which it is not usually supposed to possess. One thousand bales are said to be consumed annually by the miners in South America; each receives daily a certain quantity cut into small pieces, which he eats as a preventative against the noxious effluvia of the mines. The average weight of a bale of China cassia is from 70 to 80 lbs., with 9 per cent. allowance for tare.

HOW MACKEREL ARE CAUGHT.

A salt mackerel for breakfast has usually been looked upon as evidence of poverty and a desire to economize, but of late years this lowly fish has become almost a luxury, owing to the falling off in the catch. How many who smack their lips over a broiled bloater or one boiled and served with cream sauce, think of the hard work and danger attending its capture? How they are caught may not be uninteresting. Most of the vessels engaged in the fishery sail from Gloucester, Mass., and have crews numbering from 15 to 25 men. They cruise from Cape Henlopen to Newfoundland, keeping within a few miles of shore. When a "school" of mackerel is sighted by the look-out at the mast-head, every man on board is full of life and energy because they work on a share of the profits, and no opportunities must be allowed to escape. The seine-boat and dory are lowered, the former having the immense net or seine carefully stowed away and in position for immediate use. The seine-boat is usually about 38 feet long, built of fine cedar, is 7 feet, 6 inches to 8 feet wide and 3 feet deep. They cost from \$225 to \$250. Generally, seven or eight men row, two throw the seine, and one steers. This is the regular crew, and each man has his position to which he goes promptly on signal. The dory, with two men, always goes with the seine-boat. The work now is a splendid example of muscular activity, cool heads and quickness of action. As soon as they come up with the fish, one end of the seine is given to the men in the dory, who hold and keep it in position, the men in the seine-boat throwing the net and rowing around the "school" of fish. When this is accomplished and the seine-boat reaches the dory, the men there quickly pass the end or bight of the "purse-line" to the men in the seine-boat. Then comes the quick and careful work—"pursing the seine," which means drawing the bottom of it together with this "purse-line," which is made of best Russian hemp rope, $1\frac{3}{4}$ inches in circumference, running through rings attached to the bottom of the seine. To this line are attached purse-weights, of which there are two weighing 60 to 75 pounds each. They are used to keep the bottom of the seine steady and overcome the ocean currents to some extent. This pursing of the seine gathers the mackerel into a huge bag. Sometimes all this effort and work is wasted. The mackerel may be wild, and sometimes when a good school is almost enclosed and only a small opening remains, they will dive, go through it quickly and escape. Sometimes a shark will get caught inside the seine with the mackerel and go through it with a rush, leaving a hole through which the smaller fish escape. Then the net must be repaired and all the work done over again. Sometimes sharks outside the seine with large appetites and a great desire to satisfy them make it necessary for the crew to be active and careful. That catching mackerel is hard work may be concluded from the fact that on a trip last season the schooner Hattie Graham brought in 430 sea-packed barrels, and in catching that quantity the seine was thrown 135 times. The seine is 1,200 to 1,400 feet long and 150 to 175 feet deep. The crew probably rowed all of 400 miles in getting to the schools, rowing round them and pursing the seine. The schooner Grayling for 400 barrels sixty-eight times and rowed 200 miles; schooner Harvard, forty-eight times for 200 barrels, and in eleven sets of the seine secured only 28 barrels. What practice this would be for a Yale or Harvard boat crew.—American Grocer.

CIDER PRESERVATIVES.

We think salicylic acid is the best preservative for cider, and in small quantities is perfectly harmless. The acid should be either dissolved in alcohol or in a little of the cider, so as to prevent its floating. The proper quantity is about an ounce and a half to fifty gallons of cider, and should be added when the first fermentation has just been completed. There is no harm in using sulphur by burning it inside the casks, either in the apparatus used for this purpose by French wine-growers or by soaking strips of cloth in melted sulphur, lighting them, and allowing them to burn inside the cask. This destroys the fungi which oftentimes are apt to spoil the cider.—Fereign Ex.

ATTENTION !!

THE fine Dargeeling Teas we are offering are worthy any Grocer's attention, and no wonder; they are the finest money can buy. It paid us to handle them; why wouldn't it pay you?

We have a range of sweet drawing Ceylons at 30 to 32c., and Japans and Hysons at 16 to 17c. These are exceptional value.

Don't put off buying just because you have some in stock. You can never get too much of a good thing. Say the word and we will mail the samples.

ON BEGINNING BUSINESS.

In country towns connections have a great deal to do with the success of the storekeeper. For instance, writes a correspondent in Merchants' Review, if a would-be merchant proposed to set up a rivalry against an old-established and respectable dealer, the writer would certainly feel inclined to advise him to think well before so doing, but if he replied that his "connection" was sufficient to establish a business, it might overrule the objections. Friends and acquaintances, however, ought not to be to implicitly relied upon. They are, as a rule, more exacting and less easily satisfied than the general public. The writer has known, in his nearly 40 years' experience, many an unfortunate victim to the promises of friends, who has opened with the most glowing prospects and closed with the most disastrous results. Your friends, of course, expect you to give credit, and are surprised that you should be so importune about those "little bills;" they may possibly remind you of certain obligations that you are under to them for past favors. By and by your friends discover that your goods are not a whit better nor cheaper than those of other merchants, and soon find fault with goods purchased of you, comparing them to their disadvantage with articles bought by neighbors at rival stores. It is not long, perhaps, before some of your warmest friends leave you for some other dealer, forgetting, of course to settle their accounts, and when you remonstrate, you lose not only your friend and customer but your maney also. The sold reliance of the beginner in the retail business should be in the integrity of his transactions, the reasonableness of his prices and the civility of his demeanor. He should make it the interest and the pleasure of the consumer to his store. If he pays due attention to these points he will make patrons of his friends and friends of his patrons and establish a connection that will never desert him.

Religious and political connections are easily formed in small towns, where the minds and habits of every man are known to his neighbor, but the merchant should never seek to make the pretense of religion a means of worldly progress. If he does, in all probability the truth will out some day, he will be condemned as a hypocrite, and having built his expectations on so substantial a foundation he and they will come to grief together. In these days of toleration a man may hold any religious opinion if he do so becomingly. The store is the place to practice the principles taught in the place of worship, but it is not the place to traffic under the cloak of religious reputation. The same with politics. A good citizen will discharge his duty to his town and state conscientiously. Let him allow others the freedom of opinion which he claims for himself. There are proper times when we have political duties to perform; but in the place of business let not the storekeeper weigh the opinions of other men, as he would his merchandise, in brass scales. Politics is the business of the state; fair dealing is the business of the storekeeper, and while the writer is the last to say that men should not recognize and discharge political duties, he does assert that they should neither seek nor bestow custom for party purposes.

SOME LONG SAUSAGES.

In former times it was the custom in many German towns to manufacture sausages of enormous length and carry them on festive occasions in solemn procession through the streets, says an exchange. On New Year's day in 1558 a giant sausage 742½ feet in length was carried in triumph by forty-eight persons. But in the year 1583, according to a German paper it took ninety-one persons to carry a sausage 2,235 feet long and weighing 434 pounds. The chronicler of the period says: "The butchers' men were all nearly attired in white blouses. The first man wound one end of the sausage several times around his neck with a portion of it hanging down in front, the rest followed at equal distances carrying the trophy on their shoulders, and the last one had the other end wound round his neck like the man at the head of the procession." In the year 1601 we are told that the sausage attained a length of 3,768¾ feet, 487½ of which were presented to their serene highnesses at the castle. All this happened at Konigsberg. In 1613 Emperor Mathias regaled the princess of the house of Austria with a tournament, at which the butchers of Vienna gave a representation of a peasant's wedding, and paraded the streets with a sausage measuring 3,746¼ feet long.

THE AROMA OF COFFEE.

The aroma of coffee develops especially during the process of roasting; its fatty oil oxidizes, is burned, and is changed into essential oil, or caffeine, a species of ether that cannot be isolated by distillation, and which we can sometimes see with the naked eye on the surface of the ordinary infusion. But coffee, like many other natural products, such as wine, tobacco and cocoa, requires a certain length of time after being gathered before it reaches its full maturity. Experience has shown that the development of its aromatic principle is acquired by keeping it in a green state from one crop to another. But it is well known that for about the last half century the caffeine seems to be lacking in the infusion of coffee, which has no longer the exquisite qualities due to its aroma. If, now, on one hand, we consider that the production of coffee is necessarily limited by the conditions of climate requisite for its growth, and that, on the other hand, the planter, in order to supply the demand which is constantly on the increase, is now obliged to deliver the crop as soon as it is gathered, we can do nothing but infer that the cause of the degeneration of coffee lies in the fact that it is supplied to trade too soon, while it has not yet developed its constituent principles, and particularly its caffeine.—New York Herald.

FLUSHINGS, PICKING AND CURING OF INDIAN TEA.

Col. Edward Money, in his prize treatise on Indian tea, makes the statement that some of the newer districts, such as Daijeeling, Chittagong, or Kangra, are not as good tea districts as Assam or Cachar, thereby probably leading to the conclusion that tea from these districts is inferior to that produced in the more favored localities. Col. Money was speaking as a planter, and favored Assam and Cachar, because of the greater number of flushes, and, consequently, the greater yield and ultimate profit, the increased yield more than counterbalancing the high price obtainable for the finer flavored high grown teas. Flushing will commence in Assam about the 20th of February, and continue through October, yielding in extreme cases as high as 38 pickings, while in Kangra the pickings have been known to fall to ten or twelve in a season. The tea bush when under cultivation and ready for picking, stands about 5 feet high and about as many in diameter, though in its wild state as found in the jungle it attains a height of 25 feet.

Were tea picked with a care for the proper separating of the leaf according to its size, beginning with the top of the bush and the outer ends of the branches, we should have in the order of their quality the following styles: Flowery Pekoe, Orange Pekoe, Pekoe, Pekoe Souchong, Souchong, Congou, Bohea. The two latter brands would be very coarse, and do not find their way to America except mixed with other sorts, for which we have to thank the London dealer, who has likely forgotten more of the tricks of the business than we in the New World can learn in a life-time, to which I will refer later under the head of bulking.

These designations of the fineness of Indian tea are somewhat perplexing to Canadian retail dealers, as up to a short time ago the brand "Orange Pekoe," was supposed to properly refer to an artificially flavored China tea produced in Foochoo, and also in Canton, that from Foochoo being best known, and generally of a small make.

I feel called on to make a digression in referring to the practice of many salesmen in offering even to the wholesale trade, a tea marked only "Pekoe Souchong," or "Souchong," the place of growth not being stated. The result proves that the tea in question turns out to be Java, which I think a dealer with a fair regard for his reputation would not offer except with the distinct understanding that it was Java, and that no retailer will sell but to his hurt.

Gould Bros., of Uxbridge, are reported to be doing a rushing business this spring.

The bloom promises a great fruit season in the United States. And plenty of fruit means a good demand.

The people of Beautiful Plains county, Man., want a creamery and cheese factory, not one of which industries exist in the county.

The Critic, of Halifax, says that Robt. Manning, of Parrsboro', has this season shipped to the States about 1,900 lbs. of spruce gum.

A. F. McLaren, the cheese manufacturer, of Stratford, will be banqueted by the business community there before leaving for Windsor.

On Saturday night the Executive Committee of the Toronto Pedlars' Protective Association waited upon Ald. Stewart and presented him with an illuminated address in appreciation of his efforts in getting the license for them reduced.

H. R. Moore and Geo. Wilcox, Owen Sound, have leased a large two-storey building on Bay street, that town, which they are fitting up for an evaporating and pickling factory. The building is in a good situation, being in close proximity to the C.P.R. station.

Several Victoria, B.C., firms are exerting themselves to engage in the Australian trade, and samples of Australian mutton are coming by the first ship, while samples of various products will be sent back, notably fish, fresh and salted.

"Isn't that awfully high for strawberries?" she asked, as she stirred up the berries with her finger. "Yes'm, it is rather high—most too high—but I've got pickles at half that price. About the same thing, but just as cheap again." She sighed and took the pickles.—Detroit Free Press.

The returns by counties show that California had 733,284 prune trees in bearing one year ago and 813,709 non-bearing trees. Many counties made no returns, so that the grand total is much larger than the figures given indicate. There is plenty of room for the profitable extension of the industry, for, practically, there is no limit to the demand.

A merchant in an Eastern city advertised for a clerk, giving the list of qualifications he desired should be possessed by the employee. Among other requirements, the clerk must be "one who has a taste for reading trade journals with a view to being well informed." That merchant had a lot of good sound brains in his head.

Freight engagements of deals to British ports from Montreal have been made at the low figure of 32s. 6d., which, according to Trade Bulletin, is the lowest rate accepted for a long time, while some state that it is about the lowest on record. Other engagements have been made at 35s., so that the range of freight rates at present is from 32s. 6d. to 35s.

At a meeting of the Toronto City Travellers' Association held Friday night last the committee reported that arrangements had been completed for holding the annual excursion to Niagara Falls and Buffalo on July 19 by the Niagara Navigation Co.'s boats. The meeting was entertained during the evening with songs by Messrs. J. Owen and Ed. Chudley.

A good-sized Spanish onion, after boiling a short time, will yield, on being pressed, quite a large quantity of very adhesive fluid, says an exchange. This is used quite extensively in various trades for pasting paper on tin, zinc, or even glass, and the tenacity with which it holds would surprise anyone making the first attempt. It is the cheapest and best mucilage for such purposes, and answers as well as many of the more costly and patent cements.

Wakeford Bros., Battersea, have started excavating stone for the erection of a new mill. The Kingston Whig says that men have been engaged for the past two or three weeks digging out the iron which lodged in the cellar when the floor was burnt out. It will also take a couple of weeks to wheel the burnt grain away. The new mill will cost in the neighborhood of $7,000. J. Lemmon, whose grocery was also burned down, has started to rebuild a brick place of business.

Judging from the increase in butter factories this season in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, the production of creamery butter will be the largest on record, and it therefore follows that producers will have to find a larger export outlet, which can only be done by following the English market and selling on an export basis precisely as cheese factory-men do. Butter is certainly a more perishable article than cheese, yet, strange to say, makers as a rule speculate more on the former by holding, than on the latter.—Trade Bulletin.

An enterprising Parisian shopkeeper has hit upon a novel device to induce people to stop in front of his show windows in the chill of winter and spring. He secured a length of gas-pipe, and, perforating it with tiny holes, laid it just under the edge of the window outside. Then he rigged a small pump that forced a gentle current of warm air through the pipe, and thus practically heated the space in front of his display. Nor was this all. He fashioned a clever machine that sprayed a delicate perfume into the pump, and so the warm air is kept scented, to the great delight of the feminine shoppers, who can scarcely be induced to "move on." The warm air also keeps the glass clear and bright.

The Ontario, Cal., Record notes the picking of 1,050 boxes of lemons from a ten-acre lemon grove of seven-year-old trees. These will yield after curing 900 boxes. The grower intends holding the crop for next summer prices. Aside from that, at $3 per box, the crop returns $2,700 gross from 10 acres, or $270 per acre. Deducting all costs, the returns are a dozen times over the net returns to growers of cereals. If $4 or $5 a box is obtained, then the profits become enormous. And yet California growers want protection, and most of them are good borrowers.

There has been a remarkable increase in the importation and consumption of sugar in Japan during the past twenty years, which can scarcely have failed to have had some effect on the course of the world's markets. In 1868 the declared value of sugar imported by Japan was $918,700, and last year it was $10,000,000. A Japan native paper gives the total value of the sugar imported during the last 24 years as $98,840,000, or an average of about $4,300,000 per annum. In 1880 the declared value was $3,630,000, and in 1891 $8,490,000. Meanwhile the value of the sugar produced in Japan itself has increased from $1,700,000 in 1884 to upwards of $6,000,000 in recent years.—London Grocer.

Now and then the Sugar Trust officials evolve some new rule in regard to handling their produce, that appears to be constructed upon basis of making matters as disagreeable as possible to those compelled to deal with them. The latest is on syrups, and in substance is as follows: A line of syrups is placed on sale, say 200 or 300 barrels or more, and priced at a certain rate, which will be accepted for the entire parcel. But if buyers take only 100 barrels, then they must pay 1c. per gallon additional, and less than 100 barrels 2s. per gallon additional, a discrimination that is raising a very decided protest—except possibly from some grocers who may have suggested the plan.—N.Y. Bulletin.

The average retail grocer is content when he is left alone. He is willing to work hard, and to mind his own business if unmolested. He cares not, as a rule for the worryment of politics, unless he is imposed upon. Touch his pocketbook and you make him fretful. Show him that he is imposed upon and you arouse his indignation and he will get on his fighting clothes. Under a smooth exterior he conceals oftentimes a very pugnacious temper, and when he strikes it is direct from the shoulder.—Ex.

"If our American cousins would stencil the weights of their cheeses on the boxes instead of marking them with black or red lead it would do away with any chance of mistaking them," writes a correspondent of an English trade paper. "Under the present system the figures are often difficult to make out, and sometimes entirely obliterated. To wholesale firms who store with carriers and railway companies, and have to rely on them for the weights, it is very important that a system should be used which renders accuracy easy of achievement. To avoid any chance of confusion between the shipping number and the weight the stencil might mark the word "weight" over the figures. This system would also save time, as the figures could be so easily read as to enable them to be taken quicker."

According to the census there are 1,588,055 married persons in Canada, of whom 791,902 are females and 796,153 males, so that there are over 4,000 wives missing. The census does not account for them. Nearly every husband in Ontario has a wife in the country, the figures being 353,060 husbands and 352,798 wives. The discrepancy is still smaller in Quebec province, where there are 244,792 husbands and 244,639 wives. In all Canada there are 129,015 widows and 62,777 widowers. In Ontario the number of widows is 60,289, and in Quebec 36,362, or one in about every 40 of Quebec's population, and one in about every 35 of Ontario's. Toronto returned 23,856 married men, and 23,933 married women. In this case there were 77 husbands not accounted for. The number of widows in Toronto is 5,295.

Second clerks and learners are like 20-dollar gold pieces in the States. Ever since the cholera scare last fall, when emigration was suspended, this class of help has been very scarce. Sixty-five dollars was the lowest rate possible for the passage over, and the boys who make the best clerks could not afford it, and those who could and came were a lot of "Berliner Gelernte Kaufman," who modestly demanded 25 dollars monthly "zum anfang," including board, etc. Now that this emigration barrier has been raised, the few that are coming in are headed directly for Chicago. The World's Fair acts like a big sheet of fly paper, or a magnet, and they imagine the gold dollars are flying in the air. Since the winter is over and the roads fair, the walk back won't do them any harm, and they will know better, consolingly remarks an exchange.

FORCING SALES OF CANNED GOODS.

It is now the season for more or less speculation in canned goods which always occurs, but in some striking respects the present season, in Montreal at least, is an exceptional one, that is so far as tomatoes and salmon are concerned. Very low offers have been made of the new pack of both, very much lower in fact in the minds of conservative buyers on that market than the natural conditions call for. It is claimed that the agent for a Western cannery has been making free offers of tomatoes at 87½c. for delivery shortly, which is fully 7½c. under the basis of last season, the opening price on new pack then being 95c. Everyone admits that tomatoes are in a more or less unsettled condition owing to the low offers that are being made by some dealers in Montreal, but in spite of these business is being done in prime brands at considerably over 80c., at which stock is offered by some Montreal wholesale houses. In fact, for prime brands 85 to 90c. is a juster quotation, and for some pet canneries $1.05 to $1.10 is what holders ask. It is argued, therefore, that with an unusually excessive supply on hand there is no reason for these low offers so far ahead, and that besides the canneries are injuring themselves to a certain extent as the very fact of these low offers being made makes it harder to do business, and so work off what supplies of old stock there is before the new pack becomes a genuine factor in the situation. It is held that it would be far more business like therefore for the packers in question not to force trade so much, but wait and see what the natural price is and not try and make one before there is any absolute necessity on their part for doing so.

In canned salmon the case is even worse. The market here is fairly well cleaned up, there being no red sockeye to be had at all. The canners on the coast however have in the opinion of dealers here absolutely gone mad, for they are making free offers everywhere at $1 a dozen on the coast. A comparison with the opening price last year shows how low the above figure is. Last season the opening figure was $1.32½ and it worked up in the first portion to $1.35, gradually stiffening on that until the minimum was reached in the face of $1.55 to $1.60. In the face of all this the canners are to-day quoting excessively low prices before they actually know what the run is going to be. In fact they are making a bigger gamble than usual on the future, and the only possible solution of it is that some of the canners who were disappointed last year in not making as many sales as they wished are determined to get orders this season willy nilly without any regard to what the fish may cost them or to the prospects of a large run. If the run is a small one the consequences will be decidedly unpleasant to them, for it is needless to remark that they are getting all the orders they want at the above price and are booking them right and left, in fact six and eight weeks ahead. This is making a regular plunge of it, and it is more than probable that there are lively times ahead for some people when it comes to a question of delivery.

A MAN WHO WILL SUCCEED.

"Now, if you will show me where the burglars got into your store," said the detective, "I will see if I can find some clew."

"In a minute," said the proprietor. "I am working at something a little more important than hunting for a clew just now. Take a seat."

And while the detective waited the merchant wrote as follows at his desk:

The man who broke into Katzenhefter's store on the night of the 15th and carried away a silk hat, a pair of French calfskin boots, a fur-trimmed overcoat, a black broadcloth suit and two suits of silk underwear was a black-hearted villain and scoundrel, but a man whose judgment cannot be called in question. He knew where to go when he wanted the finest clothing the market affords.

"Jacobs," he said to the bookkeeper, "send a copy of this to all the papers in town, and tell 'em I want it printed in big black type to-morrow morning. Now, Mr. Hawkshaw, I am at your service."

CEYLON COCOA AND CINNAMON.

One scarcely realizes what riches, especially in food supplies, are to be found in that far-away "Isle of Paradise," Ceylon. It is wonderfully productive in aromatic spices, coffee berries, tea plants, cocoa-trees, etc., to say nothing of oranges and other tropical or semi-tropical fruit.

Along the coast line are forests of cocoa-trees. These do not extend far into the interior but confine themselves to the coast, as they seem to thrive on a sandy soil and sea air. In fact, it is said that they grow so near the strand that they over-hang the salt waters of the sea, and in such bare and naked sand that not a single blade of grass could grow near them.

Barbary is a considerable center for cinnamon, and here there are numerous stone warehouses built for the purpose of storing this product. Ships find anchorage in the harbor and are laden with the pungent bark.

Before the cinnamon is packed up, it must always first be examined by surgeons appointed for that purpose, as well as by the surgeon who resides at the place where the package is made, as by him that accompanies the ship. "I had very frequently an opportunity, in the course of this year," writes a traveller in a contemporary, "to assist at this employment, and was obliged afterward, in conjunction with the others, to be responsible for the goodness of the cinnamon. From each bundle a few sticks are taken out, which are examined by chewing, and by the taste. This office is very disagreeable and troublesome, because the cinnamon deprives the tongue and lips of all the mucus with which they are covered, and causes afterwards an intolerable pain, which prevents one from going on any further with the examination. So that one must perform this business with great caution, and at the same time eat a piece of bread and butter between whiles, which in some measure mitigates the pain. It is but seldom that one is able to hold out two or three days successively.

"The superfine cinnamon is known by the following properties, viz., in the first place, it is thin and rather pliable; it ought commonly to be about the substance of Royal Paper, or somewhat thicker. Secondly, it is of a light color, and rather inclinable to yellow, bordering but little upon the brown. Thirdly, it possesses a sweetish taste, and at the same time is not stronger than can be borne without pain, and is not succeeded by any aftertaste.

"The more the cinnamon departs from these characteristics the coarser, the less serviceable it is esteemed; as for instance: In the first place if it be hard and as thick as a half-crown piece; secondly, if it be very dark or brown; thirdly, if it be very pungent and hot upon the tongue, with a taste bordering upon that of cloves, so that one cannot suffer it without pain, and so that the mucus upon the tongue is consumed by it when one makes several trials of it; fourthly, if it has any after-taste, such as to be harsh, bitter or mucilaginous.

"Such are the sorts of cinnamon, when they are selected from the storehouses, and sorted for exportation; but the barkers, who examine the cinnamon trees in the woods, and strip off the bark, speaks of more and different sorts of cinnamon, the leaves of which, in their external appearance, bear some resemblance to each other, and are not all used indiscriminately for barking, but are picked and pointed out by those that are judges of the matter."

ESSENTIALS TO SUCCESS.

In most cases success or failure depends on the man. Sometimes good men fail, not on account of lack of business ability, but from circumstances which they could not foresee nor control. But if failures of this kind were the only ones, the number would be comparatively few. The greater number of failures among merchants is the result of a lack of some one or more of the essential elements on which success depends.

What are some of these essential elements?

(1) To understand one's business; to know When, where and how to buy goods.

(2) To know one's customers; to understand their tastes, peculiarities and characteristics.

(3) Politeness, equability of temper, decision and firmness.

(4) The ability to refuse a request without making an enemy. This is harder to do than most persons think.

A man may be honest, intelligent, have a fair business education, possess sufficient capital, and all that, and yet not be able to win and hold desirable trade simply because he lacks politeness, or has an unpleasant manner; or, if polite enough, he may lack decision and firmness, and so makes too many bad accounts. A brusque and abrupt manner in refusing credit to some customers often loses the merchant the cash trade of these same persons, whereas it might be retained by a polite and diplomatic refusal. One must have tact in business.

There are many persons who, while they have no legal responsibility, are nevertheless honest and worthy of credit to a reasonable amount. Such customers are often better payers than others who own property and from whom an account may be collected by law. It is not a bad plan to give persons of this class a trial, limiting the line of credit to an amount within their respective capacities, and then if they do not pay up according to contract, withhold further credit. In many places the bulk of one's patronage comes from poor people, who have nothing to depend upon but their earnings. Knowing that their credit depends upon maintaining it, they are likely to pay with reasonable promptness. Since a strictly cash system is, in most places, impracticable, one is forced to adopt the credit system, but let it be discriminative and judicious.—J. C. Watkins in Trade.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, June 1, 1893.
GROCERIES.

The feature of the trade is a re-awakened interest in canned tomatoes consequent upon the shipment by one house here of 1000 cases to Chicago, and the arrival on this market of samples of new season's Japan tea. Business otherwise has developed no strikingly new features. Trade is quiet, but probably not more so than is usual at this time of the year. On the contrary, judging from remarks dropped here and there, the volume for May is larger than for the corresponding month a year ago, while the margin of profits is generally conceded to be more satisfactory. Coffees are higher outside but no change has been made here. The dried fruit market remains much as before, although a little more interest is being taken in currants owing to damage by frost and the reappearance of the peronosperos in Greece. The sugar market continues to rule quiet and firm, outside figures seemingly obtaining more than a week ago. Syrups are in better supply but demand is poor. In molasses the feature is a firmer feeling in New Orleans make in sympathy with higher prices outside. Teas continue quiet and unchanged.

COFFEE.

Business here continues to be of a hand to mouth character and with no change in prices. We quote as before:—Rio, 19½ to 21½c., East Indian, 27 to 30c., South American, 21 to 23c., Mocha, 26 to 30c., Santos, 21 to 22c., Java, 30 to 32c. Prices are a shade higher outside.

DRIED FRUIT.

The report of renewed attack on currants by the peronosperos and of damage by frost to both currants and prunes is awakening some interest in these lines, but otherwise the fruit market is quiet and featureless. A few of the cheaper Valencia raisins have been selling, but the demand outside these have been insignificant. Prime layers are scarce. The idea for off stalk is still 4 to 4½c. pound for seconds, 5¼ to 6c. for fine; layers, ordinary selects, 6¾c.; fancy selects, 7½ to 8c., according to quality. In currants, good fruit continues to grow scarcer, and next year's crop will be small on account of ravages of the peronosperos and damage by frost. The demand is fair at 6 to 6½c. for good fruit and 5½ to 6c. for ordinary. There is the ordinary demand for prunes at 7¼ to 8c. in cases. Some damage has been done by frost to the coming crop but it is not thought to be serious. In dates the movement is confined to an odd case or two at 5 to 5½c.

RICE AND SPICES.

New crop B rice is now ready at the mill, and other qualities will be next week. B will be worth 3¾ to 3¼c. The idea for last season's growth is still 3¾ to 3¾c., but there is practically nothing doing.

Spices are quiet and unchanged. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c.; pure white pepper at 20 to 28c., and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

No material change has developed during the week. A few odd cars are moving, but the general trade for small lots has not commenced yet, it being yet too early in the season. Refiners are still firm in their views and independent about selling, saying that they expect higher prices next month. Granulated is quoted as before at 5¾ to 5½c., although jobbers are getting the outside price oftener than a week ago. A yellow sugar can be got as low as 4¾c., but the quality is held to be poor and in value relatively lower than the sugar which sells at 4½c., which seems to be the lowest price for a sugar of fair quality. Raws seems to be attracting a little more attention, and there is an opinion among some that this may have the effect of pulling the price of dark yellows down, particularly should country consumers give more than the usual share of attention to the raw article.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Supply of syrups is better but, the demand is on the other hand poorer, and no improvement is anticipated for another couple of months. Low grades are scarce. Ruling prices are still 2½ to 3½c.

New Orleans molasses has advanced 3c. a gallon in New York and Philadelphia, and this market is firmer in sympathy, although no actual change in quotations has taken place; the idea here is 32 to 35c.

NUTS.

There is no change in this line. We quote Brazil nuts 11 to 11½c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; unshelled, 16 to 17c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to 12½c. for green; cocoa nuts, $5 to $5.50 per sack.

TEAS.

First muster samples of this year's Japan tea have arrived on this market. The teas are expected to arrive in a day or so, being now en route from Vancouver. They show slightly better draw than last year and they sell at 35 to 40c. These teas are of course of fine quality, the lower grades not coming in till July or August. The local demand for tea continues small and the little that is selling is chiefly in Ceylons and Assams. We quote Japans—Low grade and common, 13 to 14c. Medium, 17½ to 19c.; fine to finest, 28 to 35c. Blacks—Low grades congous, 14½ to 16½c.; medium, 18 to 23c.; fine, 30 to 45c.; fancy 60 to 70.

BUTTER AND CHEESE

Receipts of butter are liberal, and although the demand is good the tendency of prices is downward. The market is altogether in buyers' favor. There are a few more tubs of dairy butter offering, but the market is still principally supplied by large rolls. Dairy pound prints are also offering freely. The range of prices for large rolls is 13½ to 14½c., with the greater part going at 14c. Ordinary tub sells at 14 to 15c. Strictly fine dairy tub, uniform in color and sweet, is enquired for, and jobbers report that they could get 16 to 17c. for it. Dairy pound prints are quoted at 16 to 18c. There are a few creamery tubs coming in, but demand is limited. They sell at 21 to 22c. Creamery pound prints are plentiful, but demand for them is only fair at 22 to 23c.

There is not much doing in cheese and prices are easy. Makers are beginning to offer more freely, but still only to a limited extent owing to the backward character of the season. Jobbers are getting 10c. for new make and quote old at 11c. Some small lots have gone forward to the Old Country from Aylmer.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Much as before. Jobbers do not seem inclined to pay more than $1.25 to $1.30 for a good hand-picked bean, and they are selling at $1.40 to $1.45.

DRIED APPLES—Quiet and unchanged, jobbers paying 4c. and selling at 4½ to 5c., although it is seldom that the outside figure is obtained.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Dull and easy. Purchases have been made by jobbers at 7 to 7½c., but no one seems anxious to buy unless it be to fill an order; 8 to 9c. is the jobbing price.

EGGS—Supply and demand both good with prices steady at 11½ to 12c., the outside figure being for single cases.

HONEY—Dull and unchanged at 8c. for extracted and 5c. for dark.

POULTRY—As before. We quote: Chickens 75 to 85c., turkeys 10 to 12c. a pound, geese 8 to 10c. a pound.

POTATOES—Market is somewhat unsettled and opinions regarding it differ. There are not many offerings, and prices range from 90 to 95c. on track; store lots are quoted at $1.05 to $1.10.

ONIONS—New Egyptian onions are arriving this week, and they sell at $2.50 to $2.75 per bag. We quote red at $1.10 per bag, $2 per barrel, and yellow at $1.20 per bag and $2.25 to $2.75 per barrel.

HOPS—Dull. There have been sales of a few bales at 15c., and we quote 15 to 19c. as range of prices.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

Demand for dressed hogs is limited, packers being out of the market. Farmers' deliveries are fair and prices are easier at $7.75 to $8. Hog products are still in good demand and prices steady; 11½c. was refused this week for a carload of pickled hams.

BACON—Long clear, 10½ to 11c. Smoked backs are 13c., bellies, 13½ to 14c., rolls, 10½ to 10¾c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c. for smoked; pickled, 11¾c.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13¼c. in tubs, 13½c. in pails and 12¾ to 13c. in tierces. Compound 10 to 10½c.

DELHI CANNING CO.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

The feature of the market is a firmer feeling in tomatoes consequent upon the shipment by a local firm of 1000 cases to Chicago, and goods formerly held by some houses at 80c. are now quoted 10c. a dozen higher. The idea seems now to be about 85 to 90c. with some older and well known brands quoted as before at $1. There are no surplus stocks of tomatoes here and should further shipments be made out of the country we shall likely see higher prices. There is just the ordinary demand. Stocks of corn are light, and as none seem to be in the hands of the packers, one house reports having found it necessary to buy in 1000 cases; 85 to 90c. is the idea with $1.40 quoted for honey sweet. Peas are in fairly good supply with prices ranging from 80c. up. Peaches are unchanged at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and $3.25 to $3.75 for 3's. Apples are in fair demand and unchanged at 85c. to $1 for 3's and $2 to $2.25 for gallons. Plumbs much as before at $1.45 to $1.55. A fair business is still being done in salmon of the better quality, and prices are unchanged, the ruling figures for well known brands being $1.50 to $1.55 for talls and $1.70 to $1.80 for flats. Demand continues fair for lobster at $1.90 to $2.10 for talls and $2.50 to $2.70 for flats.

MONTREAL.

The canned goods market is dull in so far as actual spot business is concerned. In new pack very low offers are being made on salmon and tomatoes, the facts of which are specially dwelt upon elsewhere. New pack tomatoes have been offered it is claimed at 87½c. and salmon at $1.

MARKETS—Continued.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $21, Canadian short cut $21.50.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 4½ to 5½c., hindquarters 6 to 8½c., veal 8 to 9½c., lamb 8½ to 9½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade shows some improvement, although the movement is not so free as it might be owing to the cold weather. This is particularly noticeable in regard to lemons. Messinas are about the only kind of oranges on the market and the demand for them is brisk. Banana trade continues good at steady prices. There has been a little scarcity of pine apples while demand has been good and prices higher. Strawberries are slow of sale at 23c., and tomatoes are quiet at $3 to $3.50 per case. There are not many apples offering, the season being about over; $1.50 is about the idea for ordinary stock and $2.50 for choice, with the range all the way up to $3.50 for fancy stock. We quote: Oranges—Valencias $6.50 to $7 per case; ditto, Jumbos, $8 to $8.50 per case; Messinas, $3.50 to $3.75 per box for 160's, $1.85 to $2 for 80's and $2 to $2.25 for 100's, $2.50 for bloods, half box; lemons, $3 to $4.50; bananas, $1.35 to $2; pineapples, extras, 17c., No. 1 16c., No. 2 14c., No. 3 12½c.; Callifornia apricots, 20c. per lb. 25-lb. boxes; apples, $1.50 to $2 for ordinary stock and $2.25 to $3.50 for choice to fancy.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

Demand for maple syrup continues to fall off and prices are easy at 75 to 80c. per wine gallon in tall tins and 70 to 75c. per wine gallon in flat tins. Maple sugar is unchanged at 8 to 10c.

FISH.

Trade continues to improve and may now be characterized as brisk. Receipts are principally white fish, trout and herring. Quotations are as before: Fresh salmon, 20c.; skinned and boned cod-fish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half bbl.; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; pike, 5 to 6c.; ciscoes, $1.35 a hundred; finnan haddie, 5c.; perch, $2 to $3 per hundred, as to size; blue back herring, $2 to $3 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; shad, $3 a dozen; halibut, 15c. a lb.; lobsters, 15c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7 to 7½c.; eels, 8 to 10c. a lb.

SEEDS.

The seed trade is about over for the season, although there is still a free movement in ensilage corn at from 65 to 70c. per bushel, the same as before. There is also a limited demand for Hungarian grass and millet seed at from $1.20 to $1.25 for the former and 80 to 90c. for the latter.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—There has been no quotable change here, but owing to a serious decline in Chicago the local market is weak and lower quotations are expected soon; 5¼c. for good selections is purely nominal, there being no sales to report.

SKINS—Calfskins are also weaker. Jobbers are still paying 9c., but as large quantities are being imported to this country at lower prices, values are on the decline here. Jobbing seems to be at a standstill.

TALLOW—Is a little firmer if anything but without actual change in price. Demand is fair and supplies rendered. Dealers are paying 5½c. for moderate, and they are selling as before at 6 to 6¼c. Rough is quoted at 2c.

WOOL—There has been a little new wool offering, but so far it has been confined to unwashed, for which 10c. has been the market price. It is expected that the market for washed wool will open at about 18c. More or less foreign wools are selling at fair and unchanged prices. The mills are reported to be still busy.

PETROLEUM.

Trade is keeping up fairly well for the season. There is no change in prices, although there seems to have been a slight

MARKET NOTES.

Davidson & Hay are showing a fine line of Indian tea in chests.

A carload of Baltimore strawberries was received this week by Clemes Bros.

Warren Bros. & Boomer are offering new season Japan teas to arrive here in a week.

Something nice in the way of imported Japan rice is being shown by T. Kinnear & Co.

Davidson & Hay have two lines of Japan teas arriving, which are of exceptionally fine quality.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are handling Hire's root beer, a beverage that is both palatable and economical.

Perkins, Ince & Co. have received a sample of choice Yokohama leaf Japan tea which shows excellent quality.

T. Kinnear & Co. are in receipt of a shipment of case prunes, which they are offering to the trade at reasonable figures.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are offering gallon apples (Ontario Packing Co.'s brand), solidly packed, at $1.90 per dozen.

Eby, Blain & Co. report a large and increasing demand for Cunningham & De Fourier's potted meats and game delicacies.

James Turner & Co. are offering a great bargain in jams at 7c. These goods are as pure as jams can be, packed in 15-lb. pails.

The fine values offering in Ceylon and Assam teas by Lucas, Steele & Bristol of Hamilton are said to be attracting much attention.

First shipment of early pickings of extra choicest new Japan tea, "St. Olaf crop," consigned to Balfour & Co., is due next week.

Perkins, Ince & Co. are showing one of the finest samples of Patna rice that has probably ever been seen on this market. It has a beautiful polish and is free from oil.

There is a report that the estimate for the Padang sale of coffee, May 30, is increased to 20,000 peculs (15,000 interior), against previous estimate at from 14,000 to 17,000 peculs.

T. Kinnear & Co. are in receipt of a nice sample of raw sugar, in barrels of 300 pounds, which they are offering at figures which they consider bargains.

Egyptian onions are beginning to arrive on the Toronto market, and Clemes Bros. have just received a shipment which they are offering at close prices.

Balfour & Co., of Hamilton, have just to hand another consignment of their famous Blue Mountain coffee, straight from the plantation.

"Yes, the demand for tea is rather light," said a wholesaler. "The people seem to be waiting for the new teas to come in, but I'll tell you what it is, those who fancy that when the new tea comes in that they can get all grades of new Japs are making a big mistake. It is only high grades that come in early in June. The lower grades do not come in till July or August."

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are in receipt of another line of Morton's preserved bloaters in oval tins. It is exceptionally fine for the summer trade.

Smith & Keighley have made a purchase of a line of bright raw sugars which they offer at 4¼c. They also showing this week the samples of new season's Japan teas at 33 to 35c. for delivery June 1.

"We find," said Mr. H. P. Eckardt of H. P. Eckardt & Co. the other day, "that Batty's goods, both pickles and Nabob sauce, are giving good satisfaction and that the sales are increasing very much."

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, June 1, 1893.

GROCERIES

There has been a trifle more activity in some lines of the wholesale grocery trade during the week, but the situation taken on the whole has not shown any very appreciable change. Values all round maintain their firm position, all the staples keeping the strong position they have shown all along. The feeling on sugar continues quite firm, there being no change in the price here, while the news from New York would indicate that the trust there is looking for higher prices, as they have been heavy purchasers of the raw article. The demand, however, is not especially brisk at the moment. Molasses shows no special change, the combine sticking to their price, but there is considerable speculation as to whether they will be able to do so right along in the face of the heavy shipments now on the way to this port. Teas and coffee have been quiet but steady, and spices have ruled very firm. In canned goods the feature is the low prices which are offered by canners on new pack tomatoes and salmon, which, in the opinion of the majority of the trade, are lower than the natural position of the market calls for at present. Payments have been rather backward, which is due to the exceptionally bad roads which interfere with business in some sections. For instance, up the Ottawa valley reports from travellers to their houses here state that they find it almost impossible to get about owing to the condition of the roads.

SUGAR.

The raw sugar markets are very strong and advancing developments within the past week have demonstrated the steadiness of the market and the possibility of still higher prices ere long. On the strength of bullish news from New York and elsewhere the local market is very strong and refiners refuse to make any large contracts. Buyers, on the other hand, however, are not showing any great urgency, so that although firm the market is quiet. It is possible when the situation is thoroughly digested, however, that buyers will show more anxiety, and sellers are expecting a change to this disposition in a day or so. Quotations now are 4-3-8 to 4-7-8c. for yellows and 5-1-4c. for granulated, and refiners refuse to make any large contracts at this basis. They claim that their advices from New York bear them out in this, as the trust there, which has been bearing the markets right along, has picked up all the available centrifugals afloat and on hand at 4-1-4 to 4-3-8c., purchases being made to-day at the last figure. There are also reports current that the trust has made many heavy purchases in Cuba and of beet in Europe, having evidently come to the conclusion that sugars are not going to be any cheaper.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

The market for syrups is quiet at 2 to 2-1-4c. per lb. for Canadian in wood, and at 18-1-2 to 20-1-2c. per gallon for American.

The molasses market is very dull, and advices from primary markets are very easy in their tone. Latest quotations from the Islands are 12c. On spot the combine price is nominally unchanged at 33 to 34c., but no business is doing at this basis of any account.

TEAS

The market is quiet, business being confined to a few sales in a small way. Some small lots of Japan have been moved in this connection at 12 to 14c. for common and 17 to 18c. for medium grades on city and country account, but the aggregate is very small. New Japan tea is expected here during the course of the week, but it is only a small lot of 250 packages, and will not be an important factor in the situation. It has been offered at about equal to 30c. We quote: Japans—low grades, 13 to 14c.; medium, 15 to 18c.; fine, 19 to 21-1-2c., and finest, 23 to 31c.

COFFEES AND SPICES.

The coffee market is quiet but steady. We quote Jamaica, 19 to 20c.; Maracaibo, 20 to 22c.; Rio, 19 to 21c.; Java, 24 to 28c., and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

In spices the market is firm, common Jamaica ginger selling at 16 to 18c., and finer stock 20 to 24c. Black pepper is 8 to 9c., pimento, 6-1-2c., and nutmegs, 50 to 52-1-2 and $1 for round business in a wholesale way.

DRIED FRUIT.

A fair demand exists for dried fruit, and further sales of Valencia off-stalk raisins have been made at 3-5-8c. for common, 4 to 4-3-8c. for finer qualities. Layers are scarce and firmly held at 6 to 6-1-2c. Currants are dull at 5 to 6c., as to quality.

RICE.

The first cargoes of new crop rice have arrived, and the quality proves to be excellent. The price has advanced 3d. to 4-1-2d. on the European markets, but there is no change here. We quote ordinary, $3.85 to $4; Japans, $4 to $4.50; and Patna and Carolinas, $4.50 to $5.50.

FRUIT.

The market was dull in anticipation of the big auction sale of the Escalones' cargo on Monday. Prices at this sale were low owing to a dull demand and the poor condition of the fruit. There were 28,000 boxes offered, prices ranging as follows: Lemons—Messina, 50c. to $4; Catania, 75c. to $1.87 1-2; Palermos, 87 1-2c. to $2.62 1-2. Oranges—Messina, $2.50 to $3.12 1-2, half boxes, 80c. to $1.75; Catania, $1.87 1-2 to $3;

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

Dullness continues to characterize the flour market. Prices remain as before. The lateness of spring has caused an unusual demand for mill feed, and millers report they cannot fill the demand for shorts fast enough.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.30 to $4.35; strong bakers' $3.80 to $4.00; white wheat patents,
$3.50 to $4.00; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.30,

half boxes, 95c. to $1.75; Palermos, $2 to $2.25, half boxes, 90c. to $1.65.

Bananas are fairly steady, selling at 60 to 75c., while choice large lots meet with active sale from $2 to $2.50.

Figs rule steady at 9 1-2 to 10c. per pound.

Pine apples are rather scarce and firm at 8c. to 12c.

BEANS.

The market is quiet, with business in Western hand-picked at $1.60 to $1.65, ordinary $1.25 to $1.50, and inferior $1 to $1.10 for round lots.

HONEY.

Honey moves very slowly at 7c. for extracted, and 9 to 13c., as to quality for comb stock.

HOPS.

There is no change in hops, which rule quiet, at 17 to 18 1-2c. for good to choice, poorer grades, 14 to 15c.

POTATOES.

The market remains firm, and we quote $1.10 to $1.20, as to quality.

ONIONS.

There are no domestic onions offering on the market. Egyptian stock are offering at 2 1-4 to 3c. per lb.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market shows no change, business being still confined to a small jobbing movement in smoked meats and lard. We quote: Canadian short cut, per bbl., $21 to $22; mess pork, western, new, per bbl., $22.50 to $23; hams, city cured, per lb., 12 1-2 to 13 1-4c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 12 to 12 1-2c.; bacon, per lb., 11 1-2 to 12 1-2c.; lard, common refined, per lb., 10 to 10 1-2c.

EGGS.

The egg market holds steady notwithstanding the many receipts, dealers reporting a good demand at 11 to 11 1-2c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The butter market is much the same in its ruling features. Prices are still sagging off, and it looks as though we would soon see an 18 cent market if matters are allowed to take their natural course. But nothing is so uncertain as the price of June creamery, and it is likely that the present season will be no exception. One thing is certain, however, and that is if the price is put up it will be by operators on this side, who, if they are willing to take their chances, have every right to do so. At present, however, the market is a purely jobbing one. Creamery was dealt in to-day at 20 to 20 1-2c., and the tendency is downward at this basis. Very little townships dairy is offering, the range for it being 18 to 19c., and it must be something very choice to fetch the outside figure. Western rolls are freely offered, but no one wants them now that the hot weather is here in earnest, and they are an exceedingly slow sale at 15 to 16c. Western dairy is worth 16 to 17c. Some old creamery is still on the market, the holder asking 18c. New creamery, 20 to 20 1-2c.; new township, 18 to 19c.; western dairy, 16 to 17c.; western roll, 15 to 16c.

Cheese continues to rule on the heavy side, and, although a fair amount of business is done from day to day, the Britishers manifest more or less indifference at present. For finest white stock 9 1-2c. and under is the basis, and for colored possibly 9 3-8 could be made, but it is impossible that any offer of this kind will stand long. We understand, however, that there are some negotiations on this basis for the London steamer which sails on Thursday. But although this is the case, very much lower offers are being made over the cable. At the wharf this week some 1,200 French cheese were offered, and a comparatively high price was paid for them. Its quality left much to be desired; in fact, it should not have been out of the factory at all, and if it is true as alleged that it is to be shipped on this week's steamer to Bristol, there may be some unpleasant complications arise over it, that is, unless the buyers over there knew that their bids involved the shipment of this kind of goods, which is not likely. This sort of business is the worst thing possible for the market. It led to trouble last year, and will lead to more this if buyers here continue to take such cheese as was offered at the wharf this week. Besides it makes it difficult for dealers who have an order for goods that are really marketable to do business. At St. Hyacinthe some 300 boxes were offered, the price being 9 1-8c. It was all white; in fact colored stock is as scarce as ever, and it is very difficult to fill a good sized order for it at present.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

Regan, White & Co. are offering to arrive some choice Ceylon teas, etc.

Lightbound, Ralston & Co. control Schweitzer's Cocotina for the Canadian market.

Hudon, Hebert & Co. say that the city trade is fully up to the average at present.

Canned goods are not especially brisk just now, but N. Quintal & Fils are offering a cheap line of goods at 80c.

Caverhill, Rose, Hughes & Co. have on hand some first-class lines of canned corn and tomatoes. They offer a bargain in their standard corn.

There is a lot of 2,800 bags of potatoes on the wharf at present from Prince Edward Island which are in such bad condition that no one will touch them.

The berry and small fruit season is now close at hand, and all the wholesalers anticipate an increased demand for sugar which generally follows this.

New crop Japan teas are expected here during the course of the week. The lot is only a small one, however, some 250 packages, and is offered somewhere around 30c.

Travellers in the Ottawa Valley say that the roads are almost impassable. Some of Kinloch, Lindsay & Co.'s men report that they absolutely cannot get about.

Advices to sugar refiners here say that the Trust in New York are purchasers of $1,800,000 worth of raw sugar. This is interpreted to mean a still higher market for refined in the future.

There are now ten vessels on passage from Barbadoes to Montreal with molasses, varying from 500 to 1,200 puncheons each. It is an interesting speculation whether the combine will hold up under this load of stock.

A large lot of Trinidad molasses which has been knocking around this market for over two years was cleared out this week at a very low figure. The price could not be definitely learned, but it is said to be considerably under the regular market quotation.

REGARDING VINEGAR.

DEAR GROCER,—In the last issue of THE CANADIAN GROCER you have an article on vinegar, the insertion of which in your paper was ill advised, as it contains statements which are not warranted by facts, either as regards the goods manufactured or the methods of manufacturing and doing business adopted by the Bonded Vinegar Manufacturers of Canada. As the article is calculated to injure the reputation of our vinegars with the grocery trade, we propose calling a meeting of those interested to consider the matter.

Yours truly,

WM. MARSHALL,

Manager Hamilton Vinegar Works Co., Ltd.

Hamilton, Ont., May 29, 1893.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Fred. Ward, representing John P. Mott & Co., Halifax, passed through Toronto this week on his way to Chicago.

Byron Estabrooks, representing Petti-john's California Breakfast Food Co., Minneapolis Minn., was in Toronto this week.

T. O. Leonard of Detroit, representing the Oswego Starch Co., was in Toronto last week after an absence of some two months.

Charles Kane, formerly of Kane & Kane, Orillia, was married Monday last. There were but few of his friends who knew of his intended step, but they are none the less backward in tendering congratulations.

E. S. Kilgour, grocer, Guelph, is talking of selling out and retiring from business on account of ill-health. He has only been in business about six months, having bought out the business of John A. Wood. The store is one of the finest in Western Ontario.

Gino Kabiglio, a partner in the firm of Salomon, Kabiglio & Co., of Trieste, Austria, makers of the Atlas brand prunes, was in Toronto this week. He is making a tour of the American continent in guest of both business and pleasure. He considers Canada a grand country, judging from what he has so far seen of it, but then it is a little too cold, he says, for his taste. Speaking of the prune crop, he says that while it has been slightly damaged by frost, a good yield is anticipated.

DAWSON BROS.' BRAMPTON STORE

Dawson Bros., the wholesale fruit men, West Market Square, Toronto, also run a retail fruit, confectionery and canned goods business at Brampton. Trade up there has increased so much this spring that they have found it necessary to move to larger and more convenient premises. The change was made last week, and the new store is one door north of the old stand. Dawson Bros. make a specialty of canned goods and carry one of the most varied stocks in this line of any retail store outside the large cities. The new quarters have been fitted up with modern appurtenances and Dawson Bros. have good reason to feel proud of their store, which is claimed to be the equal of anything of the kind in the Dominion.

TO PUSH PORT STANLEY.

A Board of Trade has been formed at Port Stanley with these officers:—President, M. Payne; first vice-president, John Price; second vice-president, John Ellison; secretary, Arthur Ellison; treasurer, T. J. L. Orme. The formation of the board arose out of the need of an association through which the commercial world might be made acquainted with the advantages of the village and harbor of Port Stanley.

IT WAS HER ANNIVERSARY.

Some drummers were diverting themselves in a smoking car by repeating episodes of so-called "check." All but one had related an instance; when he was called upon, he drearily said:

"I don't remember anything worth telling; in fact my wife has completely dazed my memory of matters of that kind by a fine sample of her own stock. You see, when I got back from my latest trip I went home at something after 9 o'clock in the evening. Well, there was my house lighted up from top story to basement; carriages were leaving the door, and affairs seemed to be going inside on a grand scale. I let myself into the basement with a latch key and walked into the dining room. Strains of music came from the back part of the hall, and the mingled laughter and conversation indicated a host of guests.

"Presently my wife came into the dining room, dressed like a Princess; she ran up to me saying:

"Oh, Jack! I'm so glad you've come home early."

"So'm I," said I; "what's the racket—surprise party?"

"Surprise party?" said she, with a pout; "no, indeed, it's the anniversary of my wedding."

"Tilda," said I, "you're off; you're way off! This is the month of March—it was in summer we were married."

"She serenely replied; 'I know that very well; this is the anniversary of my first marriage. Go put on your dress suit, dear.—N. Y. Tribune.

BANANAS WILL BE HIGH.

So says the Produce Bulletin. The latest correspondence of the banana brokers of New Orleans indicates an advancing market in bananas. Cargoes are arriving not more than one-third their usual size and the demand has increased to such an extent during the first half of this week that orders cannot be filled. "The reason for this," said Geo. W. Martin this morning, "is on account of the revolution in the central part of South America. One of the largest banana boats down there was recently seized and made into a war vessel and the workmen on the plantations have been drafted into service. This is the season, too, when men are most needed to harvest the fruit. Under these conditions boats must go to a good deal of trouble in order to get even part of a cargo. None but regular customers can buy bananas in New Orleans at present, and I do not believe any but the big city dealers are getting them. The grade of the fruit is better than usual, for there is only time to harvest the best stock."

"I am already asking $2.50 for the best bunches, which are almost as large as you are," said J. B. Hoxie in speaking of bananas.

"This is the time when everyone is beginning to eat the fruit, and the demand will continue to increase. There is a scarcity in Chicago, and I have no doubt prices will be advanced still higher. The best grades sold in New Orleans yesterday for $1.50 from the importers."

From yesterday's purchases good fruit will cost laid down here from $1.75 to $1.90 a bunch. After taking out small and damaged bunches in a car, $2.50 must be received in order to realize anything on them.

REGAN, WHITE & CO. IN TROUBLE

Regan, White & Co., the well-known wholesale grocers of Montreal, are financially embarrassed, and a meeting of the creditors was held Wednesday. The announcement was a surprise to the trade, and a good deal of sympathy is being extended to the firm in their adversity. THE GROCER hopes that they will be able to pull through. At the hour of going to press little information can be gleaned beyond the fact that the chief creditors are John Duncan & Co., Kinloch, Lindsay & Co., and Lightbound, Ralston & Co.

OUTWITTING AN EXCISEMAN.

An old woman in Orkney was noted for selling whiskey on the sly. Her house was a few miles from the town, and excise officers had tried in vain to get her convicted, so many attempts had failed that they had given up the task as impossible. A young officer was appointed to the place, who said, on being told about her, that he would soon secure her conviction.

Early one morning he left town and arrived at the old woman's house by seven o'clock. Walking in, he saw no one, but, noticing a bell on the table, he rang it.

The old woman appeared.

He asked for a glass of milk, which was set down before him. After a little he rang again and the old woman appeared. He asked if she had any whiskey.

"Aye, sir," said she, "we aye have some in the bottle," setting it down before him.

He thanked her and laid down a sovereign, which she took and walked out. After helping himself he rang again and asked for his change.

"Change, sir?" said the old woman. "There's nae change. We hae nae license. Fat we gie we gie in presents; fat we get we get in presents. So good day, sir!" The exciseman left the house a poorer but a wiser man.

The following little story, clipped from Wide-Awake, carries its own moral: Two brothers, Willie and Johnny, set up a lemonade stand the other day. A gentleman was their first patron. Willie's sign read: "Lemonade 4 cents a glass." Johnny's modest announcement was: "Lemonade 2 cents a glass." Being a man with an eye to the fact that "a penny saved is a penny earned," the customer bought a glass of Johnny's lemonade, paid the two cents due, and casually enquired, "Why is yours cheaper than your brother's?" "Cos mine is the lemonade that the puppy fell into."

EMPTY BOTTLES.

THE T. A. SNIDER PRESERVE CO., CINCINNATI, O.

GENTLEMEN,—I write you this under protest, but who ever knew a woman to hesitate about having her own way, even if the whole household were up in arms. My husband thinks me a full-fledged lunatic, and is quite sure you will publish me as a fit candidate for some lunatic asylum, and all because I avowed my intention to write you and ask this simple little question:

I have about 70, I think, of your catsup bottles, perfect in all respects, screw tops not hardly dimmed. Shall these go over the "garden wall," or have you headquarters where these could be left and forwarded to you, or perhaps you do not use bottles the second time. It went against my Yankee grain to throw them away, but if they are of no use I will consign them to the tender care of a peculiar specimen of nature, whose sonorous voice resounds through our alley, "Bottles, rags, old iron!" I know it will not hinder your business one bit to drop me a line, and it will settle this mooted question, and I have had my own way.

In conclusion, allow me to add my mite to the intrinsic worth of your Catsup. IT IS ALL IN ALL. There is NONE BETTER. The number of empty bottles tells the tale in a family of three adults; no children. The World's Fair should give you the gold medal.

Yours respectfully,
CHICAGO, May 15th, 1893.

Mrs. _____

THE REPLY.

CINCINNATI, O., May 16th, 1893.

MRS. _____, CHICAGO, ILL.

DEAR MADAM,—

As in writing you did not hesitate,
We certainly your letter appreciate;
It does not read like from a candidate
For such an asylum as you state.

As to taking empty bottles back,
In this art we entirely lack;
Some come greasy and others black,
And their use our trade would surely slack.

As "a stitch in time saves nine,"
We must know where to draw the line,
Or our business would in time
Cause us to murmur and repine

When you hear that "sonorous" call,
Coming over your "garden wall,"
Would suggest you sell the bottles all
To the man who makes the call.

We thank you for your little "mite,"
And we are sure you are quite right.
For people everywhere do write—
"Snider Catsup—out of sight."

Yours very respectfully,

THE T. A. SNIDER PRESERVE CO.

DRY GOODS.

TORONTO MARKET.

Sorting orders have been brisker during the past week than at any previous time since the opening of spring trade, and the wholesale trade has a better feeling in consequence. Many buyers have been in the market, and some large miscellaneous parcels have been bought, and nearly every line has received a share of attention. Clearances and job lots have been in good demand and readily picked up, and if the present trade continues for a month the wholesalers will be in a splendid condition to receive their fall stock.

Letter orders are very brisk, and the enquiries are for very numerous classes of goods, but especially for the classes of goods which are advertised from time to time or mentioned in the reviews of the trade as published in THE GROCER or in The Dry Goods Review. Hosiery, laces, curtains, summer vests, clearances, etc.; all these have received attention from the increasing number of merchants who find letter orders a useful and expedient way of ordering goods. Most of the houses are now supplying their customers with order pads.

Laces of all kinds are in especially good demand these days. One house cleared out four cases two hours after their arrival on Saturday last.

In prints the leading varieties are heliotrope flowers on black, pink and cream grounds. There is a rage for these goods. Blue and red, red and black, and white and red are the leading combinations in drilletes.

Fall orders are somewhat slow, as retailers are waiting to see how the spring trade turns out, and what the summer trade promises before placing orders. This is a wise plan, although not a pleasing one to those who are on the road drumming for fall.

W. R. Brock is now in his accustomed place in the trade, and after a six months' absence has not lost his interest in everything pertaining to the trade. He says he saw no country in all his worldwide travels which was as prosperous as Canada, and that while we may not have an El Dorado, yet we have a comfortable and prosperous nation.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have opened up a large shipment of laces, including cream, two-tone and beige cotton gimpures, two-tone guipure insertions and Bourbon silk insertions and laces. Insertions are coming to the front this season, and the enquiry for these is very active at present. Two-tone and cream insertions are especially active. This house is just passing into stock a large shipment of cream and beige handmade guipure insertions of the very latest designs. These have been in very active demand in European markets for some time back.

W. R. Brock & Co., anticipating the great demand for ladies' and misses' lace mitts, have laid in a very large stock of these goods. They show them in lace effects of lisle and pure silk, also taffeta, lisle and pure silk in plain goods. All the blacks are Hermsdori's absolutely stainless fast blacks, with a guarantee ticket from the dyer attached to each pair. Their pure silk in lace effect to retail at 25 cents is an extra special line, and they claim fully 25 per cent. cheaper than if they were bought to-day from the manufacturer.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence report a strong sorting trade in parasols. They are offering special bargains in clearances of this class of goods.

W. B. Brock & Co. have cleaned out a lot of American wide-width prints, delaine patterns—a manufacturer's stock. The regular wholesale price of these goods is 18 cents, but they have purchased them so that they can be retailed at 12 1/2c. and yet leave a good margin to the dealer.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have just opened up an assortment of summer vests or waistcoats, which includes cashmere in single and double breasted in various qualities. Their range includes some very choice goods. Linen vests in tasty patterns are also shown, and are preferred by many people on account of the better appearance after laundering. Dark ground vests with fancy spots and small figures are in good demand.

Alexander & Anderson have received their first shipment of new fall prints; they have just arrived from Manchester and are very choice goods. They have also received their samples of new autumn dress goods, and these will be in the hands of their travellers in a few days. In plain goods whipcords and diagonals will still be popular for the autumn trade, and the prevailing color will be "Eminence."

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have just opened up 110 cases, each one of which is full of plums picked up by their buyers when in Europe. Amongst others there are the following goods manufactured for the Australian trade now in such a depressed condition: Plain and twill white cottons, printed flannels, fancy chintz, fancy prints, flannelettes, Turkish towels.

Domestic goods, such as flannels, cotton, tickings, tweeds, etc., are now being received by Alexander & Anderson. These goods have all been purchased at proper prices, and the values are exceptional.

A line that is being paid particular attention to in Gordon, Mackay & Co.'s smallwares department is infants' quilted bibs. These goods they claim come from the best makers in England, and are unsurpassed in value. They invite merchants to see the range.

John Macdonald & Co. have received a shipment of fine note papers in papetrie form. A large shipment of new metal dress buttons, pompons, upholstery tassels and cords are also to hand. Bathing suits and bathing trunks are also to hand, to keep up with the requirements of the summer trade. Men's drill and cashmere vests of the best London makes have been re-stocked. Pearl buttons in all their standard qualities have also been re-stocked. Hand-painted dress fans have just been received in large quantity and long range.

John Macdonald & Co. are receiving large shipments of midsummer and fall prints. Dark grounds with Eminence and Emerald flowers will be the leading varieties. All these goods have been purchased by a very expert buyer, and dealers will find in their stock all the leading novelties.

By anticipating the market and placing large orders for velveteens, Gordon, Mackay & Co. are enabled to offer their customers a well assorted range at old prices. They have just passed into stock five cases assorted blacks and colors, which makes their stock in this line complete in every respect.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

Business in dry goods has shown a decided improvement during the past week, sorting orders for most lines of light wear having shown an increase. Quite a number of customers from near-by points were in the city making purchases and paying up arrears. There is no advance in Canadian woollens yet, although the mills, it is said, are trying to establish higher prices all round. Velveteens show an advance of 20 per cent., and silks are being held at higher prices also. Remittances have shown a slight improvement.

The oil cloth seconds put up to open tender by the Dominion Oil Cloth Co. have been secured by Messrs. Hodgson, Sumner & Co., who now offer them to the trade.

Messrs. McIntyre, of Hodgson, Sumner & Co., and Brophy, of Brophy, Cains & Co., are the last detachment of buyers yet to return from the other side. They are expected the first or second week in June.

The extensions to the warehouses of Messrs. Gault Bros. & Co., on St. Helen street, are almost completed. The firm secured the two adjoining warehouses and they are now all connected with the big main building on the corner.

Jas. Johnston & Co. have been doing a satisfactory trade on city account during the last few warm days. They have turned over quite a quantity of prints, silks and summer trimmings.

Greene, Sons & Co., note an increased trade in gents' furnishings brought on by the fine weather. They have received a number of sorting orders for their reinforced shirts, negligee shirts, also summer underwear. Excessively wide brimmed straw hats will be all the go according to Mr. Radford, for men's wear this season.

The houses are all getting into their stock-taking in earnest now, and will be at it well on into June.

Jas. Linton & Co. note a satisfactory increase in the demand for silks, hosiery and muslins during the past week.

Mr. Howell, of Brophy, Cains & Co., says that the aggregate business during the past two weeks will be pulled up materially by the turnover of the past week, and will be much in excess of the last half of April when the sorting up demand is usually felt. His house has been sharing fully in the call for light goods, their extensive line of prints, foreign and domestic, not being neglected.

Thouret, Fitzgibbon & Co., who have secured the agency for Jammes, Freres' kid gloves, as already noted, report encouraging returns from the west.

Spanish Blacking

EXCELS ALL OTHERS

It contains more oil and keeps the leather softer and more pliable than any other.
It gives a beautiful bright polish, and holds the polish longer than any other.
It does not burn or injure the leather.
It gives a quicker polish than any other.
It resists dampness from the foot.
It does not rub off on the clothing.
It is the handsomest put up blacking in the world.
It will never get hard or dry up, it will keep for years in any climate.
It is altogether the best polishing blacking made or sold in Canada, and we challenge the makers of the world to produce a blacking to equal it.

REGARDING SICILY FILBERTS.

Sicily filberts have been offering in this market for several months past at prices considerably below the cost of the goods as cabled from primary sources. From what we are able to gather it appears that the market at Messina is at the present time under the influence of speculative operators, who are endeavoring to squeeze a short interest. Following the opening of the new year, and in anticipation of a materially lower range of values, some heavy short sales were made in Messina for forward delivery. The bear operators were confident they held the key to the situation, and regarded themselves as safe in venturing upon the sale of round parcels below the then current values of the market, but a quiet buying movement was inaugurated by parties in interest, who believed in an opportunity for a rise, and their action resulted in the available stock being brought under close control. As the purchase of the goods there progressed, the value gradually appreciated, until, according to the latest advices, the bull operators had gained control of the situation, and forced an advance to the equivalent of 85-8 to 83-4c. laid down in this market. Though the importers of the filberts here were fully aware of the movement, and tendency of prices in Messina, yet the limited consumptive requirements of the country did not encourage an advance in price here to correspond. For a lengthened period the prevailing value stood in the neighborhood of 8c., holders being unable to bring about a further appreciation, the demand for some time not warranting any actual advance. With a continued rise abroad, however, coupled with the fact that the stock here was centred in the hands of two concerns, courage was promoted, and an additional eighth to a quarter cent per pound tacked on. This improvement was sustained and demand stimulated, although enquiries that developed indicated speculative rather than consumptive interest. Some few transactions were completed at 8 to 81-8c., and jobbing purchases made up to the point of 81-4c, when holders, further encouraged by their success, took another step forward and raised the limit to 81-4 to 81-2c. The supply to-day is said to be largely controlled by one house, but in the hands of the outside trade there appears sufficient to meet the present limited requirements of consumers, and to hold in check a further improvement, at least for the time. At this season of the year this class of stock is not wanted to any considerable extent, hence the difficulty in forcing quotations to a point to better correspond to the present import cost. The statistical position of the fruit to-day is indeed a favorable one. The stock in Messina is estimated at not exceeding 7,000 to 8,000 bags, while in this market, though the quantity held is not positively known, yet all are satisfied that the supply is a very small one. The quantity in transit consists of only 700 bags, an invoice coming via Liverpool. Though filberts are raised largely in Spain, Turkey, Italy and Sicily, it is the fruit of the latter section which is given the preference in American markets, that of Turkey and other localities going to Great Britain and the continent.—N.Y. Bulletin.

IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT.

It is said that in England the experience of the legal profession is adverse to any proposal for the abolition of imprisonment for non-payment of debt, as at present authorized by the debtor's act; that the remedy is well adapted to meet the case of debtors, who, though owning no goods, are earning wages or salaries, and such must always be met with. It also serves to prevent conduct which is in many cases virtually fraudulent, being crowned with the success desired.

Nearly ten millions of dollars are annually collected through the county courts, while less than six thousand of the million debtors go to prison in the course of its recovery. Comparing the number of warrants of commitment issued with the number of judgment summonses heard, as appeared from the latest county court returns, the average is about one in two. One judge issued 6,090 warrants on 8,421 summonses, and the others in about the same proportion. The judges of Birmingham and Liverpool show a less proportion of warrants. In 1870 there were 179,822 warrants issued against the goods of judgment debtors, and in 1891, 228,538. This was an increase of 48,716. The number of debtors imprisoned in 1890 was 6,597; in 1891 there were 5,852, or 745 less. This is somewhat remarkable, because during that period there was an increase of 116,275 judgment summonses. It seems, therefore, that the law has been successful as a lever to compel the payment of debts. Not more than one-half of the persons remained in prison for the full term, a large number raising the money to obtain their release. The maximum term of imprisonment is 42 days. We understand that it is against the law in England to attach a working man's wages, the law being abolished on account of the great inconvenience to employers and the hardship resulting to workmen having their entire wages attached week after week, and thus leaving them penniless.—The Collector.

A blue book of considerable interest, particular to business men, has just been issued by the Dominion Government. "Commercial Relations; Canada; No. 1," is its title and it contains reports upon trade and trade openings in Great Britain and other countries to Dec. 31, 1892. The very first subject dealt with is of more than usual interest at the moment. For some time a movement has been on foot with a view to preferential trade relations with Great Britain, and lately a leader has been found for it in the person of Dalton McCarthy. This movement received its impetus some two years ago when Col. Howard Vincent, the leader of the English wing, made a tour of this country and Australia, delivering a series of addresses on the subject, principally before boards of trade. As a result largely of this tour, it will be remembered, the Dominion Parliament again, as in 1882, memorialized the Imperial Government, asking that steps be taken to denounce or terminate the treaties with foreign countries in which there were the most favored nation treatment clauses. This step is necessary before either England or Canada can enter into an agreement giving a preference to the products of the respective countries and from which the favored treaty nations would be excluded.

The very meaning of the favored nation clause is that articles the produce or manufacture of the country with which the treaty has been made shall not be subject in the British colonies to other or higher duties than those which were or might be imposed upon similar articles of British origin. The blue book just issued shows the number of nations with which such agreements have been entered into by the Imperial Government to be twenty-three. Among them are the German Zollverein, Russia, Persia, Austria-Hungary, Chili, Denmark, Hamburg, Sweden and Norway, Madagascar, Morocco, South Africa Republic, Venezuela, Belgium, Uruguay and Columbia. In 1882, when Canada asked to be exempted from the provisions of these treaties, it was pointed out that to carry this into effect would necessitate fresh treaty negotiations, something the Imperial authorities did not seem inclined to undertake. While, whether we view the matter from a preferentialist's standpoint or not, Canada may be placed at a disadvantage by her hands being so tied and without her consent, yet, through these treaties, she is sometimes enabled to reap where she has not sown. An instance of this is pointed out in blue book referred to. In 1892 treaties were made by Germany with Austria-Hungary, Italy and Belgium, and in the reductions in tariff thereby effected Canada shares. It is an ill-wind that does not blow somebody good.

The less law we have the better. Nearly everybody will probably agree with this. But at the same time there is good reason for believing that the arm of the law is in some respects not far reaching enough. And one of these is in regard to the disposal by a merchant of his stock and good will. As the law now stands there is nothing to prevent a dishonest man from selling his business, say at noon, pocketing the proceeds, boarding a train and being out of the country before many hours have passed, leaving sundry accounts unpaid. How this is taken advantage of by the unscrupulous is frequently demonstrated. When a man sells a piece of real estate in the deed transferring the property is a clause which implies that the land is free from encumbrances, or if there are any, showing what they are. Now we are not prepared to say that such a procedure would be either advisable or adequate if extended in principle to the disposal of a business, yet at the same time some legal enactments are necessary that will provide the means, as in a real estate deed, for protecting from fraud the interests of all concerned. A simple way, it seems to us, whereby the desideratum might be obtained would be for the law to stipulate that a certain time should elapse between the making of an agreement to sell and the final consummation of the transfer, an advertisement in certain mediums to announce the fact. This period might be fixed at, say, ten days or two weeks from the date of the appearance of the advertisement. This would allow ample time for the creditors to take steps to protect themselves. The question is an important one, and we would like to get the views of our readers upon it. Who will be the first?

Patron stores, or what is substantially the same, do not seem to meet with success in the State of Kansas any more than in Canada. During a year or more past an organization down there known as the National Union Company has been supplying groceries and dry goods to the farmers of that State. There were six stores in all under the supervision of the company and all six have recently fallen into the hands of receivers. It could not be otherwise. Because a man can turn a straight furrow with a plow it does not follow that he will make a successful merchant or that he is any more qualified to fix the percentage of a storekeeper's profits than he is to determine which to point of the compass a marineshould steer in order to escape disaster. A good many have essayed to do these things, but with what result is revealed from time to time by the failure list. As a leavening influence in the politics of the country the Patrons may do good, but when they meddle in business matters they step outside the pale of common sense and the results are evil instead of good.

• • •

Speaking of the patrons of industry reminds us of a little reprimand which the Co-operator, the organ of the organization, recently administered to some of the members. THE GROCER has from time to time charged that the Patrons did not always keep their part of the agreement with the storekeeper, often buying from him only such goods as they could not get as cheap elsewhere. This the Co-operator acknowledges to be true; and thus plainly does it speak: "As a whole we think there has been a good deal of dissatisfaction with the mode of dealing. If the Trustees, in the name of Patrons of Industry, make bargains with a man to furnish goods at a certain price, on the understanding that the Patrons are to sustain him and patronize him, and he cuts the prices low, then every man who belongs to the order should carry out that arrangement. We believe that the Patrons should carry out their portion of the agreement as well as the merchants. We do not blame any merchant who retires disgusted from the contract he has made with the Patrons, if they will not act honorably with him. We think, as a rule, Patrons try to live up to their contracts, but there are many, alas, who do not. There are some, even in the very Grand Association, who pay little attention to their promises or contracts, we are sorry to say." This is rather a different tune from that which the organ was built to play, and for that reason should have more weight with its subscribers.

• •

The Patrons of Industry one moment shout, "Down with combines," and the next join hands in an effort to grind the profits of the storekeepers down to their idea of fitness. It is evident that consistency is not numbered among their jewels, and as long as such is the case the Patrons will never be a power for good in the land. To organize to improve their own condition is legitimate and praiseworthy, but when they use others as stepping stones their acts come under the category of injustice.

'TIS THE TRADE'S OUTLOOK.

"Yes, we always read THE GROCER. If we haven't time we make it; and I can tell you we have often got to do that, for we are a pretty busy firm all the time. But it is like this: If we omitted reading THE GROCER we might miss some information that would either lead us to make or save money. Consequently we always peruse it. And between you and me, the merchant who thinks he can do without his trade paper is in the same boat with the man who thinks he knows everything, and consequently, like him, will come to grief."

These were the remarks of a member of a well-known eastern wholesale grocery house who was in Toronto the other day en route to the Chicago Exposition; and they contain food for reflection. The trade paper is to the merchant what the lookout is to the mariner. While the merchant is actively engaged attending to his business the trade paper is concentrating its energies in the gathering of market data, commercial news, and information to be served up to him at stated periods for his guidance and consideration. This is the office of a trade paper; and the one that is not doing this is not true to its mission.

The merchant who consistently reads a good trade paper is certain to gather at least enough information to reimburse him for the amount of his subscription. Yes, and taking into consideration the low price of subscriptions obtaining to-day, even the poorest of trade papers published are cheap at the price asked for them, for it must be a "rag" indeed that one, two or three dollars' worth of good cannot be gathered during the year. But of course the better the journal the larger the benefit derived from reading it. And the return comes back to the subscriber in a double sense. The first and most important source from which he draws benefit is the market reports. By scrutinizing these carefully he is not only kept well informed as to the trend of the market, but he is in a position to know when an article of merchandise offered him is worth the price asked or not. The second source from which he derives benefit is the articles. These are prepared with the object of suggesting to the merchant ways and means of improving his methods, extending his business and increasing his profits.

Call it a strange co-incidence or whatever you will, but it is a fact nevertheless, that seldom does the name of a subscriber to THE GROCER appear in the list of failures. And while we do not for one moment claim that this is simply because they are readers of THE GROCER, yet we do maintain that our subscribers are largely wide-awake, progressive and as a rule successful merchants; and furthermore that they are every week gathering from this journal bricks and mortar for use in business building.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"The only thing new that I know of," said T. J. Wilkins, who takes in the west for T. Kinnear & Co., to me on Saturday, as he took a tighter grip of a parcel under his arm, "is that burglary in Oakville the other night. Didn't hear of it? Well, four fellows broke into D. McArthur's general store up there, blew open the safe and robbed it of $125. But the strange thing about the affair is that the burglars went to unnecessary work to get the money. The fact of the matter was, the safe wasn't locked at all. Did they catch the burglars? No, not yet. They traced them to Flesherton, where they hung around all day, but by the time warrants were got out the birds had flown."

"There, stick your nose in that sample of rice there," said a wholesaler to me the other day, pointing to a handful or so of rice lying on a stand. I did as bid, but phew, Emma! Parafine galore! "That of course is a very poor sample," he explained, but he had no need to tell me so. There is evidently no Lacedemonian blood in his veins, otherwise he would have been satisfied that the evidence needed no words to substantiate it. "That rice," he continued, "was soaked with parafine in order to give it the appearance of having been polished. In this instance they were evidently too liberal with the oil. Yes, it would taste strongly of the parafine if boiled. Would the Chinamen here eat it? Not much. Don't know whether they are particular about anything else that they eat, but I know that they will have nothing but the best rice; the finest Patna, no less."

"There, just nose that," said a Front street man as he opened a sample tin of tea and handed it to me. "Isn't that fragrant? Isn't it a beauty?" I agreed that it was, and then he added: "Well that is an Oolong that we are offering to the trade. These teas seem to be again coming into more general use here. Some years ago they were used extensively here, but there has been a general dropping off till this season, when a turn of the tide has set in. That is at least so far as our house is concerned. They are used in the States a good deal all the time, where they drink them alone. Here they are used for blending. No London houses show them; they all come from New York. O, I tell you it is a lovely tea," he concluded as he turned the leaves out into his hand and rapturously stuck his nose into them.

"Some men along the street say that profits are a little more satisfactory than they were a year ago," said a thoughtful representative of a well-known wholesale house as he assumed at "an ease" attitude. "Well," it may be so in regard to sugar, for you will remember, prices went to the dogs for a while after the Guild dropped the sugar clause. But generally speaking, I don't see how profits can be any better. It's contrary to the natural order of things. The older a city or community gets the greater becomes the competition. And you know what the result of that is; why the margin of profits gets smaller. If the fellows in New York were to get as much profit on teas as we do here they would think they were in Paradise. Why a cent a pound is reckoned a pretty fair profit by them on tea and here we get something like three cents. But then look at the difference in the turn over."

"How's business up the Northern? Well, kind of quiet," said Robert Keys, who does that line for T. Kinnear & Co., "but the outlook does not seem to be at all bad. All my customers are in good spirits and look for a healthy business. The farmers were late in getting in spring wheat, but I really think that the crops taken all round are not much if anything behind last year at this time. The farmers are busy now getting in their potatoes."

BYSTANDER.

PICKING AND CURING OF INDIAN TEA.

When a flush has fully developed it is picked by native women and children, with much the same oversight as is employed in the picking of American cotton, the baskets being carefully weighed when the pickers are paid by what they pick, or what we call piece work. Whether paid by the piece or by the day their wages will run from one to—when hands are scarce—two and a half annas per day! A rupee being worth somewhere from 30 to 35 cents, and there being 16 annas in a rupee the wage seems distressingly small, yet, although when expressed in our currency 2 to 5 cents seems a hard hearted pittance, it is no worse than the average paid working Americans, whether in the field or the factory.

While with us 5 cents is, for all practical purposes, save postage, our smallest currency; an anna is subdivided into 12 pice, one of which will purchase a pound of rice!

Each day's picking must be cured the next day at the least. To do this requires a number of operations that vary with the fancy of the planter regarding the quality of the tea required.

It is probably an old story to most of us that we were taught in childhood, that black tea was dried on iron plates while green tea was dried on copper plates, conveying the idea that green tea was to a certain extent a poisonous and nerve destroying beverage. The fact is that green tea and black tea are grown from the same plants, the difference in color being due to different treatment before drying, the drying being in most cases done in shallow trays of wickerwork. The first process is withering, in the sun where possible, or, in heavy weather over fires, that dried directly after withering, without any exposure save rolling of the leaf makes green tea, while the process has to be continued by kneading, fermentation and oxidation to produce what we call black tea. The amount of fermentation determining the darkness of the liquor, and known to the trade as "body." When the fermentation is light the liquor is said to be thin, though it often exceeds a highly fermented tea, in flavor and strength.

The fermentation is usually effected by kneading and rolling the leaves in balls, the process being continued till the sap runs out, which is immediately mopped up with the ball. When thoroughly bruised and adhering, the ball is set aside until with a proper temperature it will have thoroughly fermented. The fermentation is stopped by breaking up the balls, the workmen commencing with the first worked balls. Rolling, now done on most tea estates with machines, is the next process to give the leaf a curled, close texture. This in no way affects the cup quality of the tea, but renders the leaf more saleable, being heavier and more handsome.

Firing over charcoal or coke is the next operation. When there has been much fermentation and a good firing we call the tea matty. If there has been too much firing after high fermentation it is said to be "burnt."

The reader will be able to see that from the picking to the final firing so many things may be over or underdone that with tea picked this week from the same plants as compared with that picked the previous flushing there may be all the difference between good and bad.

THE SUGAR BOUNTY.

It appears that the total amount of the bounties to be paid to the sugar producers of this country for the crop of 1892 is about $9,100,000. Most of this money goes to the sugar cane growers of Louisiana, but the producers of beet sugar get more than in 1891. The production was 12,000,000 pounds that year, while in 1892 it was more than doubled, being 27,000,000 pounds. In view of this advance it is not improbable that a continuance of the bounty for a few years more would build up a great American industry and prove that this country could be made independent of the rest of the world as far as sugar is concerned. It is hard to see, however, how the democrats can retain the bounty, great as is their affection for the democratic planters of Louisiana. In spite of the stimulus of this bounty the production of sorghum does not increase. The 2 cents was paid on only 986,000 pounds. Such a result in the face of the labors and experiments of so many years indicates that the manufacture of sugar from sorghum will never be a success.—Chicago Tribune.

RETAIL PRICES OF TEA.

In an English grocers' association meeting a few days ago the question of the competition with tea stores that give away other goods to induce sales of tea was brought up and discussed. One member proposed a general move on the part of the grocers for the purpose of showing the public that good tea could be sold by the grocers at lower prices than at the "giving-away" stores. It was therefore decided that the members should put tea of their own blending in their show-windows, labelled "Association Tea, one shilling a pound," and keep it there until the following meeting night, the said tea to be described and advertised in the daily papers. It was believed that the result of this step would be to stop the inroads of the "giving-away" stores on the members' trade. We ask our readers' attention to the price mentioned above. With an import duty of 8 cents per lb. these English retailers are offering "good" tea at 25 cents per lb. Tea enters our own ports duty free, but a good grade cannot be had at retail in this country for 25 cents, the profits of the importer, jobber and retailer preventing its sale at any such price. If all these profits could be scaled down and a fair tea sold at retail for 30 or 40 cents there probably would be seen an increase in the demand for the leaf that before long would become quite marked.—Merchants' Review.

A DRAWING ATTRACTION.

Here is a design for a grocer or a dealer in general merchandise that will without a doubt prove a genuine attraction as well as a lasting advertisement, writes C. A. Hirleman in Trade.

Let the merchant make it known through his local papers that on a certain date he will have an attraction in his window that will pay every one to call and see. Do not hint at what the attraction will be. Arrange one of your largest windows for the making of coffee. Engage several young ladies to make and serve it. Have it smoking hot. Set off some part of your store with a table and chairs. Serve hot coffee to all who enter. Give them a chance to taste your goods. Have displayed in your window a quantity of the brand of coffee you are making and advertising. In the store have a quantity in sight, and let one clerk attend to it and show it to every person who enters. In every way possible give the people to understand that the coffee you are advertising is a special brand and that you have the exclusive sale of the goods for your city. Your store will be the centre of attraction, as it will be a sight for the country as well as city folks to see the neatly attired ladies in the window making coffee in large kettles, and to see the white-aproned waiters carry it away on trays to serve to the people inside. Give it a trial and you will be convinced that this design combines an attraction and an advertisement.

THOSE POISONED CANNED PEAS.

DEAR GROCER,—The article in your issue of May 19th, 1893, headed "Poisoned by Canned Peas" is so manifestly unjust, to both canners and can makers, in its conclusion that I cannot pass it unnoticed. I will leave it for the canners to make their own defence, as they are perfectly competent to do, and in that connection will only remark that had Dr. David Armstrong purchased canned peas of any of the well known "brands" put up by the reliable canning houses of Ontario, and followed the directions contained on their labels he would have been in no danger of being poisoned. He probably bought "soaked" peas, or permitted them to stand in the can after being opened and before using.

The idea of a person going to a plumber to get information respecting can making is what struck us, as particularly ridiculous. It seems to us that a man of ordinary intelligence would as soon think of going to a blacksmith's shop to get his watch repaired. A plumber is supposed to know about as much about can-making as a shoe maker does about making clothes. The plumber and can-maker both do soldering. The shoemaker and tailor both do sewing. And that is as far as the similarity of their occupations go. As a can-maker of considerable experience, having made and sold in Canada during the past five years something over 25 million fruit cans of different sizes, we have never had a complaint of the nature your article suggests. We do not use "muriatic acid" as a soldering flux. What we use is of an acid nature, but harmless in quantities of a teaspoonful taken into the stomach clear. There would not be enough left on a thousand cans, if it could all be gotten together and put into one, to injure a person with an ordinarily healthy stomach, if all taken at one dose. Hand made cans are always soldered with resin. At least I know of no one in Canada who makes cans by hand, that uses acid. A majority of the canners now use for capping the same "flux" that we use for making cans. There is occasionally one who uses muriatic acid cut with zinc, and can do so with perfect safety, as the construction of the top of the can prevents the possibility of any of it getting inside; but one drop is used to each can.

If you had deliberately gone to work to damage the canning and can making industry of Canada you could not have studied up a more successful plan than that of publishing the mess of "rot" contained in the article under consideration. Speaking for ourselves we expected better treatment from you and your paper, and we desire to say now, and here, if this is the kind of treatment you propose to give your subscribers and advertisers you can "count out" the Norton Manufacturing Co. from and after this date.

We think you will probably hear from a number of the canners with no "uncertain sound."

Yours, etc.,

W. C. BRECKENRIDGE,
Manager and Treasurer Norton Manufacturing Co.

Hamilton, May 23, 1893.

[We are glad to have this letter from Mr. Breckenridge, as he should be the best informed man on the substances used in the manufacture and sealing of tin cans. The subject is a most important one. If the statements made by Dr. Armstrong be correct it is a matter for very serious consideration by the trade and by packers. There is a feeling, happily growing less, among consumers that danger lurks in the canned products. Occasionally statements are made in the daily press that particular families have been poisoned by eating thereof. THE GROCER has several times investigated these reports, but as its readers are aware in no case was illness traced to fruits or vegetables put up by reputable Canadian packers, though Chicago canned meats have several times caused just such poisoning as Dr. Armstrong refers to. The statements made by Dr. Armstrong in his letter were too important to pass unnoticed. He is a disinterested and reputable physician. His letter was published at the request of a well known grocer to draw attention to this important matter and get, if possible, at the true facts of the case. We regret that Mr. Breckenridge should have fallen into the error that because his firm happens to advertise in THE GROCER he has a right to dictate what shall or shall not be inserted in its columns. When he becomes better acquainted with THE GROCER and its proprietors he will understand they are not open to bribes of any sort. Its motto in the past has been to "Do right and fear not." Unfortunately this policy has hit some of its best friends. We may add that this policy will be continued as long as the present proprietors are at the helm. THE GROCER is not yet in receipt of any complaint from a packer. It does not expect one. No reputable packer is afraid of any criticism of this sort. He knows that any can bearing his label can be relied on.—ED. CROCER.]

A GOOD WORD FOR JAVA TEA.

DEAR GROCER,—I have been reading carefully the letters by your correspondent on "The tea districts in India, flushing, picking and curing of tea, etc.," and you will pardon me, I feel sure when I say that, so far the information given it is of no importance to us retailers and far less I should think to the wholesalers. I doubt very much if your correspondent knows anything about the flushings or curing of tea, and like most of us engaged in selling it, would not know a tea plant from any other similar plant if it was shown to him without a name. What leads me to say this is because he says, "he felt called upon to make a digression in referring to Java tea," by stating "that no retailer will sell this tea but to his hurt." This inference is false in the extreme and your correspondent not only digresses in this particular but he is led into a transgression, because I have sold straight Java tea for seven or eight years in succession, and it has given better satisfaction than any other tea I have sold. More than that, it is my highest priced tea and I could not do without keeping it for my trade, as my customers, who comprise some of the best people in the city, will not use any other tea. This, then, is a direct contradiction to your correspondent's statement. Like many other teas Java tea has its peculiarities, and some of it, in my opinion, is of little or no use, but the same can be said of other teas, whether from China, Japan, or India. Such, for instance, as a rank "tarry" morning Congou or a sour, highly fired Kangra or Darjeeling, or a over fermented, too highly fired India tea, similar to most of the teas from the Derha Dhow district, which spoil any blend that you may put them with, then a smoky Foochow, young hyson or boxey Pingsuey, and these extreme fishy Japans are all detestable teas and unfit to drink alone, mixed with others, or any other way, as far as my experience has proven. I think all such teas are very unsafe for any retailer to handle, but to condemn all the teas from those districts would be simply foolishness, and why your correspondent should only select Java tea for his condemnation is perhaps only known to himself, or perhaps his knowledge is only gained from what he reads. But my experience has taught me that in buying and selling tea we require quite a little of practical knowledge as well as a little of bookology. Now if your correspondent can give your readers some useful information, such, for instance, as, Why and how teas take on or get their different flavors, and what gives them their peculiar character, and how we can tell or distinguish them and know the different teas when shown to us, and what then to do with them so as to please everybody? he would confer a great boon on many, and upon none so much, perhaps, as a

YONGE STREET GROCER.

Toronto, June 6, 1893.

Burglars entered the store of H. Carl, Cobocok, the other night and took his till, besides $1.50, and some undershirts. John Ham's store was then entered and $2.50 in postage stamps taken. Dr. Broad's store was next visited. To each of the stores visited the entrance was effected by properly-fitting keys. Just as Dr. Broad reached home and entered the office he was seized by one of the fellows who called lustily for "Jack." The doctor, surprised, but not dismayed, grappled with the burglar, who managed to escape, leaving the key in the door.

FACTS ABOUT SAGO.

Sago is a farinaceous substance obtained from the pith of several species of the palm tree, found mostly in the southeastern part of Asia and the various islands of the Indian Ocean, says the Merchants' Review. The sago palm, or as it is called in the Molucca Islands, the libley tree, is of peculiar appearance. The trunk, which is formed of the basis of the leaves, grows at first very slowly, and is covered with thorns; so soon, however, as the stem is formed the growth of the tree proceeds with great rapidity, and it soon attains its full height of about 30 feet with a circumference of about 5 or 6 feet, losing at this stage its prickly thorns. Before the tree has arrived at maturity the stem or trunk consists of a mere shell, about two inches thick, filled with a great mass of fibrous pith. This becomes gradually absorbed, and ultimately the stem remains hollow. At the maturity of the palm, the time when the pith is fully developed, and before it has begun to diminish, which is indicated by the transpiration of a kind of farina or white dust through the pores of the leaves, giving them quite a whitish appearance, the tree is felled, and the trunk cut into lengths of about six feet long, which are split to admit of the pith being more easily removed. Mr. Forrest, in his writings from the Molucca Islands, thus describes the process of manufacturing sago: "The tree being felled is cut into lengths of five or six feet. A part of the hard wood is then sliced off, and the workman, coming to the pith, cuts across the longitudinal fibres and the pith together, leaving a part of each end uncut; so that when it is excavated there remains a trough, into which the pulp is again put, mixed with water and beaten with a piece of wood. Then the fibres, separated from the pulp, float at the top and the flour subsides. After being cleared in this manner by several waters, the pulp is put into cylindrical baskets made of the leaves of the tree, and if it is to be kept some time, these baskets are generally sunk in fresh water to keep it moist." We seldom see sago but in a granulated state. To bring it into this form it must first be moistened and then placed in a trough having a sieve at one end. The water charged with the farina passes through the sieve, and is received in convenient vessels, where it is allowed to stand until the insoluble matter has subsided. The water is then strained off, and the farina which is left is then passed through a coarse sieve into a very shallow iron pot held over a fire, which enables it to assume a globular form. Thus all our sago is partially baked and will keep a long time. The pulp or powder of which this is made will also keep long if preserved from the air, but if exposed it will soon turn sour. Large quantities of this sago flour are sold in Europe as arrow-root, but it can easily be detected by the microscope. Loaves of bread are often made in the Molucca Islands from sago flour. The finest quality of sago is produced in Borneo and the eastern part of Sumatra, where great care is taken in its manufacture, the globules being more even and symmetrical. Sago forms the principal food of the natives of the Moluccas. As it grows spontaneously and in great abundance in the Asiatic islands, a means of substance is thus afforded to the indolent natives without much toil or ingenuity. A decoction of sago fermented yields alcohol by distillation and by acescence it forms vinegar. The fruit of this palm is about the size of a hen's egg. The base of the leaf stalks is covered with long fibrous filaments that serve to make cordage and sacking. The sago palm affords a greater amount of nourishment than any other except the banana. The single trunk of a tree, in its fifteenth year, sometimes furnishes 600 pounds of sago. Mr. Crawford has calculated, in his history of the Indian Archipelago, that a single acre of land will support 435 sago palms, which will annually produce 120,500 lbs. of sago. Sago is generally imported in cases of about 150 lbs. each, with actual tare allowance; the commoner kind is sometimes imported in bags, with allowance of two pounds for tare and one pound for draft.

CONFIDENCE AMONG BUSINESS MEN.

Mutual and general confidence is the basis of all successful business, and confidence is impossible unless men live up to the principles which they profess, remarks the Chau-tauquan. Some sneer at the expression, "Commercial Morality," and intimate that it is only a variation of "Honor among Thieves," but that conclusion is obviously wrong. Commercial morality implies that it's exemplar is worthy of trust. The idea business is a sort of legalized theft—a system in which success depends upon slyly getting the best of other people—is far more common than is good for the community; consequently the man who lives up to the principles of commercial morality is gratefully held up for the admiration of his fellows. It would be idle to deny that humanity is almost as absolutely dependent upon the business community as upon the solid earth upon which it lives. No amount of wisdom, forethought or precaution on the part of the average member of the community can avert the general disaster that follows a great betrayal of confidence in business.

All of our financial panics were the results of sufficient causes which were in operation long before the final crash, but when the crisis came it was not through general suspicion, but because some individual or institution, previously supposed to be trustworthy, failed to meet its obligations and was unable to explain honorably its default. The great panic of 1857, which paralyzed the commercial world so long that confidence was barely restored at the outbreak of the civil war, was precipitated by the failure of a single loan and trust company, and not a large one either; no great amount of money had been lost, but a more important factor, confidence, had disappeared. Confidence is worth far more than actual capital in most business transactions. For instance, all the money in the United States, could it be gathered together in a single large city, would not suffice to conduct the business of that city were actual cash the sole medium of purchase and sale.

Credits, notes, drafts and checks constitute the machinery by which exchanges are facilitated, where most business is done, and these are as sensitive to commercial disturbances as the barometer to a change of weather. Not one firm in twenty could do business at a profit on its actual cash capital. It must trust and be trusted, counting on bills receivable to liquidate bills payable, springing as eagerly as a sentry or a spy upon any one who shows the slightest sign of shirking his financial responsibilities.

LOCKED UP THE GROCER.

A woman who lives on one of the small streets leading from Belmont street, Brockton, Mass., not a great ways from the centre of the city, owes a grocer who does business at the North End. Of course the grocer is anxious to receive his due, and he was highly gratified the other day when the woman told him to call and receive partial payment, after being dunned by him.

He called upon her at the appointed time and found her at home. She received him graciously enough, and they discussed the amount of the bill and one thing and another for a few moments. Then the woman excused herself from the room, saying that she would return in a few moments, ostensibly going out for the purpose of getting the money to pay the bill. The grocer began to fondle her children, calling them pet names, and possibly tossing them a few coppers, as he awaited her return. The minutes flew by and still he waited. Finally he began to grow anxious, and investigation proved to him that the woman had turned the key as she left, locking him in the apartments with the children. In vain he tried to find a way of exit. He pounded on the door, but no one came to unfasten it.

Then he kicked up a great commotion, and at the end of two or three hours a clerk in a store in the same building heard him, and after considerable difficulty in moving boxes and barrels led him forth through an unused doorway leading through the store to the street. What a mad grocer he was! The woman had told him to call merely to "put him off," and when he did so she had no money, and probably could think of no better way out of it than to skip and lock him in. It was a woman's way. The grocer has not seen her since, but says he proposes to, and when he does there will be a scene.—W. E. Grocer.

FACTS ABOUT TAPIOCA.

The plant from which tapioca is obtained is a native of South America, and cultivated extensively in Brazil, as also in many parts of the East Indies and Indian Archipelago, says a contemporary. It is a woody plant, with slender stalks, and grows to the height of about eight feet, and is known as the Cassava or Manioc plant. It has smooth, palm-shaped leaves, and bears small, green flowers, which grows in clusters, with an immense sized fleshy root, sometimes weighing as much as 40 or 50 pounds. The plant belongs to a highly poisonous tribe and is itself one of the most virulent of the species. This poison is found more particularly in the juice of the plant, a small quantity killing birds, quadrupeds, and even man himself, causing cold perspirations, great swelling and convulsions, generally ending in death; but this deleterious substance is so highly volatile if exposed to heat, or even the open air for about two days, that its property is entirely dissipated.

A Surinam physician administered it, by way of experiment, to dogs and cats, which died after 25 minutes in dreadful agony. Dissection proved that it operated by means of the nervous system alone—an opinion confirmed by 36 drops being given to a criminal. These had hardly reached the stomach when such torments and convulsions ensued that the man expired in six minutes. Three hours afterwards the body was opened, when the stomach was found shrunk to half its natural size, so that it would appear that the poisonous principle resides in the volatile substance, which may be dissipated by heat, as, indeed, is satisfactorily proved by the mode of preparing the root for food.

The root from which tapioca is prepared is of rapid growth and comes to perfection in six months, and somewhat resembles a huge parsnip. It is then taken up and washed, and the rind, which is of a dark color, peeled off; then grated or ground into a pulp, and the pulp submitted to pressure, by which the juice is expressed and preserved. The meal or pulp that remains in the press being dried is called conaqué, and is made into bread or cake, which is called cassava bread. The expressed juice, after being allowed to stand, deposits a white powder, which, after being well washed and dried, constitutes what is called tapioca flour or Brazilian arrowroot, and by the French, moussache. All the products of the root are nutritious and easy of digestion. The natives frequently ferment the expressed juice with molasses and form an intoxicating beverage called onycan, that supplies the place of wine and beer of the temperate climate. When the climate is favorable, the plant is of a hardy nature and easily cultivated. It requires a dry situation and the land to be of good quality, and will not well yield on the same ground two successive crops. The mode of planting is from cuttings, and a little moisture is needed by the plant at its first growth. There are nine different species enumerated by botanists but two only of which are cultivated for human food; they are known as the bitter cassava and the sweet cassava. The two roots are very similar, the first by far the most poisonous, the only perceptible difference between the two roots being a tough ligneous cord running through the centre of the sweet cassava root, which the bitter variety is wholly without.

EFFECTS OF DEAR SUGAR.

The sugar trade is a vast one, and it is difficult sometimes to recognize how serious a matter even a small advance may be, when multiplied by a commodity weighing millions of tons. The consumption in these portions of the civilized world, for which the ordinary returns are available, is about six and a half million tons a year, and a rise of 4s. per cwt. on that weight would amount to an extra burden on the consumers of no less than £26,000,000 sterling a year. Taking the English consumption of 1.1-2 million tons, the rise would be equivalent in the year to £5,000,000. If such a burden were suddenly placed upon the nation by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the indignation of the public would be very marked, unless there were very good cause for the advance. As it is, market rises in commodities like sugar attract no attention whatever, and are simply noted in the public press in small type under the reports of the produce markets. The public, indeed, is totally unaware of what has taken place in any concrete form, and only becomes familiar with it as scattered individuals, if, and when, the retail price is proportionately raised; a change which is often long delayed, as the grocers only too frequently lag behind the markets. In the present case, no doubt other circumstances have caused the retail traders to follow the market more closely than usual, and it may be generally stated that the public have to pay 1-2d. per lb. more for its sugar. To the well-to-do and middle classes, such a change is of course of little importance, but to the working classes and poor, however, (who of course form the enormous mass of the consumers, and in the aggregate use far more sugar) such an advance is of the most serious character. The weekly consumption of sugar being 1.1-2 lbs. per head of the population, and an average family forming five, one halfpenny per lb. on sugar amounts to 4d. per week to the working class consumer, and if a further advance took place in the market, and the retail price went up another 1-4d., the charge in the average family would be 6d. per week. On wages of 15s., 20s., or 25s. per week, an extra

6d. in outgoings is sufficient to have the most serious effect upon the consumption of sugar, and in fact to practically stop its use among large classes of the community.

The decrease in the actual consumption following a great rise is only one of the causes which act as a drag upon markets. One most important feature in regulating prices is the extent of the invisible stocks of sugar held by merchants, refiners, dealers, or shopkeepers in private warehouses or places of business, and not included in the public returns. The large addition to capital that is required, owing to a rise like the late one, is often lost sight of, particularly in circles where financial assistance is easy in ordinary times. Our sugar consumption is about 1,250,000 tons per annum, which represents a consumption of 24,000 tons per week. Assuming, as appears probable, that the average stock held by refiners and wholesale dealers is equivalent to about a fortnight's demand, and that the grocers hold another week's supply in their shops, a quantity of about 75,000 tons is usually held in Great Britain and Ireland, which is not shown in the public returns. An advance of 4s. per cwt. on such a weight, if it had been maintained, represents an extra capital, which had to be found from some source or another, of £300,000. The stocks of raw sugar published in the ordinary returns would represent, at an advance of 4s., another £400,000 to £500,000. In addition to this, the extra capital locked up by such a rise, in the credit given in the British sugar trade, would, in the aggregate, be very heavy, indeed. It may be assumed that, taking the average, one month's credit is given to the retailers by those from whom they buy, and with the addition of a few days for collection, this represents a lapse of something like five weeks, before cash which has been advanced is received back, the credit in the grocery trade being open and not by way of bills, as it is in some trades. It will be found that 4s. advance in price on the credit given represents a further £480,000 to £500,000. Adding this to the previous figures given for the extra lock-up of money in stocks, we arrive at the result that the recent rise in sugar means that from one source or another the British sugar trade had to find about £1,250,000 more for carrying on its business. The circumstances of other countries are very different to our own, so that it is hardly possible to say whether figures which apply to England would also apply throughout the civilized world. At the same time, if they did so in strict proportion to the consumption, the extra amount of capital locked up in the sugar trade through the late rise would amount to £6,500,000 and after allowing for the fall of this week to, say, £5,750,000.—Produce Markets Review.

THE REGAN, WHITE & CO. MATTER.

The news that the wholesale grocery firm of Regan, White & Company had been compelled to assign was a genuine surprise to everyone in the grocery trade in Montreal last week. The firm was a young but enterprising one, having been two years in existence, and twenty-four hours before the failure had any one hinted at it as possible he would have been laughed at. In fact, the development was all the more surprising in that everyone believed that the house was doing a prosperous business. At present nothing definite is known of the affairs of the firm, but it is intimated that the causes which led up to the failure were three, and quite patent ones at that, viz., close competition, bad debts, and the greater financial resources of houses longer in the trade. It is notorious that the wholesale grocery business, as at present carried on, is run on about as close a margin as possible, and it is to this fact and some bad debts that were incurred that mishap to the firm above mentioned is generally attributed. They started in with a solid cash capital of $20,000—Mr. Regan contributing $15,000 and Mr. White $5,000. The creditors have held several meetings, but it will be some time before the exact state of affairs will be definitely known. The liabilities are placed at $58,000—direct $30,000 and indirect $28,000, the Merchant's Bank figuring largely in this latter item. As to their assets it is claimed that they can show a surplus of from $7,000 to $8,000, but this is simply a statement and nothing more. The chief creditors aside from the bank are: John Duncan & Co., $2,205; Kinloch, Lindsay & Co., $2,500; Lightbound, Ralston & Co., $2,055; St. Lawrence Sugar Co., $4,189; Jno. Pinder, $1,300; Doyle & Anderson, $1,754; all of Montreal, and Carter, Macy & Co., of New York, $2,677. The formal demand of assignment was made by Kinloch, Lindsay & Co., and a meeting of creditors will be held on the 14th in the court house for the naming of a curator to the estate. In the meantime Mr. Jno. McD. Hains has been appointed provisional guardian.

MORE ABOUT CANNED SALMON.

Last week THE GROCER referred to the fact that very low offers had been made in Montreal by the agents of Pacific coast canners on canned salmon, and they have been repeated this week; in fact canned salmon is one of the interesting points of the grocery market just at present. It is alleged, in support of these low offers, that the parties making them have strong belief that there will be a large run this season, but this the more conservative traders characterize as pure bosh, and hold that these offers are simply the rankest kind of speculation. The people who are most put out by them are the buyers who placed their orders for June and July delivery on the basis of $4.40 to $4.50 for favorite leading brands, and $4.20 to $4.30 for seconds. This is fully 35 or 40 cents above the basis on which present offers are being made at the coast, for, as we noted last week, $1.00 per dozen was being quoted, which would permit of goods being laid down in Montreal at $4.00 to $4.15, as to brand, and this is naturally very annoying to those who booked at the higher quotations. However, before the season is wound up they will not have the same reason to complain, for it is claimed that a good many of these low offers have been made, as we intimated last week, by canners who determined to get orders at any cost, and resorted to this cutting to do so. With regard to the prospects of a large run, advices from the coast do not furnish any reason why prices should be so abnormally below those of last year. The pack, according to recent advices, is placed at about the same as last year. During April the pack was somewhat more than in April, 1892, but during May it kept falling off every day, and was at the end of that month about the same; in fact, the anticipations, according to letters to brokers in Montreal, were that their correspondents would not be surprised if there was a shortage by June. The water was reported to be rising rapidly at the end of May, and the rivers to be full of rift, which seriously interfered with the fishing of all kinds. Numbers of traps had been totally destroyed, seining was out of the question, and gill netters were using lots of web, and having a very hard time of it. This information does not furnish ground for low prices, and it will be interesting to note how, if it proves to be correct, the makers of these low offers will fare when it comes to a question of delivery.

A WORD REGARDING BUTTER.

The following circular has been issued regarding butter, by D. Gunn, Flavell & Co. of Toronto:

Now that butter has obtained full grass flavor, we presume you are packing. Use tubs, crocks and pails are not desirable. You are doubtless aware of the very depressed condition of the English butter market, brought about by the unprecedented receipts, from Australia and New Zealand during the winter months, the effects of which are far-reaching and not yet worked off. We notice Danish and Normandy butter is quoted at 84 to 96s., which usually sells in London at about 120s., and these are London's chief source of supply in summer. In view therefore of the increased and increasing competition in the English market, where our Canadian surplus must find an outlet, we advise dealers to be more careful than ever in packing, for we can only hold the market by making as good an article and selling it as cheap as others. Avoid keeping for any length of time before packing; pack, while separated, for present use; carefully select and pack each shade of color by itself; cover each package carefully, make it as nearly airtight as possible, and keep in a cool place. To meet competition, we advise buying at lower prices than were current last year.

FUNK & WAGNALLS CO.'S GREAT TASK.

The great task undertaken by the Funk & Wagnalls Co. is drawing to a close. They are now able to present, for the first time, a complete prospectus of "A Standard Dictionary of the English Language," a work that has been for several years in preparation and is now being pushed rapidly toward completion. The definers are in the letter "T," and over one-third of the entire work is in type. Of the two hundred specialists, all except one have reached the end of the alphabet. The enormous task of perfecting a work of this kind may be judged from an examination of the prospectus. Nearly $300,000 have already been paid to the editors and specialists engaged in the preparation of copy; and before the work is completed over a half million dollars will have been expended.

The following is an actual count of words and phrases recorded under the letter A:

Stormonth Dictionary, total terms in A, 4,692; Worcester Dictionary, total terms in A, 6,983; Webster (International) Dictionary, total terms in A, 8,358; Century Dictionary, total terms in A, 15,621; the Standard Dictionary, total terms in A, 19,736.

The full number of words and terms in these dictionaries for the entire alphabet is as follows: Stormonth, 50,000; Worcester, 105,000; Webster (International), 125,000; Century (six volumes, complete), 225,000; Standard, 280,000.

The whole work has been done by the best scholars procurable, and is endorsed by the leading educationalists of America and Great Britain. Hon. William Clark, LL.D., D.C.L., F.R.S., Professor of Philosophy, Trinity College, Toronto, says: "I think the plan excellent, and the carrying out of it, as far as these specimens enable one to judge, as near perfection as we are likely to attain. I ought to add that I have compared a good many articles with the corresponding ones in the best dictionaries which I possess, and find them, in almost every case, fuller and more satisfactory."

The price when issued will be $12; but those who subscribe now and deposit $1 can secure it for $8, thus effecting a saving of $4. It will be a work every person is desirous of securing, and consequently the dealer who makes arrangements to have copies on hand first will secure most sales. Correspondence with the firm might elicit information as to some plan whereby dealers could take subscriptions now and thus secure the low price for their customers.

A Philadelphia contemporary shows how cholera may come to the relief of some of its merchants: "Some of the leading operators in and out of the wholesale grocery trade are unhappily possessors of large blocks of the dry commodity. Buyers are as scarce as the proverbial hen's teeth, and the only cloud with a silver lining in the fact that a visitation of cholera might prejudice the public against eating fresh fruit and thereby stimulate a brisk summer demand."

The Mooretown Salt Company commenced the manufacture of salt on Monday last. The brine is as clear as crystal and registers fully 100 per cent. The company's pan has a capacity of at least 200 barrels a day, and the well is said to be the only one in the province of Ontario that is cased to the bottom, which in this instance is 1,693 feet, thus ensuring pure salt. The company has been fishing for drilling tools, casing, etc., for over seven months.

The Boston Commercial Bulletin gives a few figures taken from the books of Armour & Co., Chicago, at the close of business, April 1st, 1893: Distributive sales, $102,000,000; hogs killed, 1,750,000; cattle killed, 1,080,000; sheep killed, 625,000; number of employees, 11,000; aggregate wages paid, $5,500,000; car equipment, 4,000; horses in use, 700. To this may also be added the business of the Armour Glue Works, which employed 750 men and turned out 12,000,000 pounds of glue. The firm of Armour & Co. have just built a grain elevator with a capacity of 3,500,000 bushels. It was entirely constructed and ready for use in the short space of forty days.

For some time past the rice committee of the New Orleans Board of Trade has had under consideration the recommendations of the last annual meeting that some plan be devised for the placing of supervisors at the depots and warehouses to look after the interests of the rice trade. The marketing of the rice crop of the past season gave rise to numerous complaints of lost lots, wastage from improperly handled packages and other kindred abuses. The general idea of the work of the supervisors is based upon the rules adopted by the cotton exchange for the government of the cotton supervisors. It is proposed, however, to station supervisors at all depots where rice is received, at the warehouses and on the steamboat landing. The Columbia Line is the name of the new steamship company which has established a fortnightly service between Antwerp and the St. Lawrence. It is run under the patronage of the Belgian Government, and the Louisiana, 2,000 tons, is the first of the fleet to arrive in port. There are four other vessels: The Pelican, 2,586 tons; the Kent, 2,484 tons; the Glengoil, 2,693, and the Suffolk, 3,303. They are all first-class cargo boats, owned in Glasgow, and will carry general cargo and passengers from Antwerp, and return with freight and cattle. Next season it is the intention to try to get cabin passengers from Canada for Antwerp.

The following agreement was signed by the coal dealers of Ottawa in March last: That the lowest quoted price by the principal wholesale dealers from month to month shall be taken as the maximum price for the month quoted. The expense of handling and delivering shall be the difference between that of a ton of 2,240 pounds and that of a ton of 2,000 pounds. This agreement to hold good for all quantities sold under 25 tons in single order; orders from 25 to 50 tons may be taken at 15 cents reduction per ton. No dealer who is a party to this agreement shall be at liberty to tender at less than 25 cents off the retail price without the unanimous consent of the coal dealers who are a party to this agreement.

DRY GOODS.

TORONTO MARKET.

A fairly brisk week has been experienced by the wholesale trade. The movement generally has been good, and many buyers have been on the market. Laces are in especially strong demand in various kinds, qualities, and colorings. White, creams, and two-tones lead. Summer underwear is brisk, as is light hosiery. Fast black is the color in the latter, except in ladies' hosiery, where colors are again to the front. All kinds of summer dress fabrics have received attention, although the volume of trade in these lines is not extremely large. The staple trade is fairly good, but some lines are being cut, much to the disgust of some of the dealers. Frillings are in good demand, but embroideries are dead. Some kinds of parasols are scarce, and the general sorting trade in these is fairly brisk, especially in fancies of all kinds. Men's summer vests and straw hats are receiving a great deal of attention, and orders are numerous.

Orders for fall are reviving somewhat, and buying is slightly brisker, which is no doubt due to the fact that brighter weather is fast lightening retail stocks.

W. R. Brock & Co. are showing a nice range of polka dot flannels. Wool delaines and navy and black serges are also moving very freely with this house.

John Macdonald & Co. have just passed into stock the largest shipment they have ever received of the justly celebrated Featherbone corsets. Several cases of art cushions, tea cosies, and head rests are also to hand.

W. R. Brock & Co. have bought a manufacturer's stock of sateen outing shirts in white grounds with hair stripes of blue, red and black. These goods can be retailed at a dollar, and are a splendid imitation of silk goods of three times the price.

In their staple department John Macdonald & Co. have just opened two special lines of art muslins with heliotrope and other colored flower patterns, and another line with Madras designs, the latest novelty in these goods. Buyers who have seen these are much pleased with their taking appearance.

W. R. Brock & Co. have opened out their entire purchase of German knit boating shawls and evening wraps, which is much larger, more attractive, and of better value than in any previous season on account of their large trade in this line of goods. They have also opened out their cable repeat orders for their well-known lines of Hermsdorf's absolutely stainless black hosiery in 1-1 rib numbers C.O. and C.I. Back orders have been all shipped.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have a special line of absolutely stainless black half hose which can be retailed at 12 1-2 cents a pair, or 10 pairs for a dollar, which is something unusual. In fact, their range of half-hose at the different prices is so extensive that no buyer could desire more. Their stock of men's natural wool, natural balbriggan, and brown balbriggan underwear is complete in all sizes from 32 to 46 inches. They show a variety of quality in each of these different makes.

W. R. Brock & Co.'s staple department is in full swing in their fall staples and report large sales. They have two special lines of gray flannel which are particularly good value, and also two lines of all wool blankets which stagger the trade on account of price and quality. They are well satisfied with their share of fall trade.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have opened several cases of frilling, and now show all the latest novelties in silver light, ostrich, watteau, and hypatia. The latter is the newest thing out, and the demand for it is steadily increasing.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. report a larger demand for art muslins than is usual at this season, which can easily be accounted for when their stock of these goods is examined. It includes single and double fold muslins in a great variety of colorings, and newest designs, marked at their usual close prices.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have a repeat of shot silk flounced parasols. These are scarce goods.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. are keeping up their reputation for the choice range of black cashmeres they carry, and declare they are now in a better position than ever to cater successfully for the "black goods" trade. Their special line numbered 185 in blue-black and jet, confined to themselves for Canada, should be inspected.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence report that the fashion this year will require belts of a double and single bodice nature, and are now moving actively. They show a special line of blacks and tans at $2.25, not ordinary value.

In Gordon, Mackay & Co.'s staple department there is a huge pile of bleached sheetings containing some 300 pieces, 60 inch, double warp, plain, suitable especially for single beds. This is a recent importation, secured at a price which enables G. M. & Co. to offer to the trade at manufacturer's cost.

Alexander & Anderson have new shipments of domestic goods in shirtings, flannelettes, flannels, tickings, cottons, etc. The goods were bought early, and they claim that as a consequence prices will be found to be right. Fall samples are coming forward and travellers will have these at an early date.

Gordon, Mackay & Co., who claim to have one of the best assortments of flannelettes in the trade, have just added to their already complete stock a job lot of 1,500 pieces, English manufacture, comprising 45 patterns in stripes and plains. These, with their standard ranges give purchasers a choice of colorings, designs, and prices hitherto unapproached.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence are expecting several cases of black and cream silk guipure laces, which will be pleasing information to dealers, as these goods are very scarce in Canada at present. Their range of parasols for sorting trade is very good, and they are doing a steady trade in these goods.

A bargain is being offered by John Macdonald & Co. in 800 dozen of drill and cashmere vests, being the surplus stock of a West End London (England) manufacturer. The goods are of the latest London designs and patterns, and certainly cannot be beaten in style and finish. A shipment of white pique flat ties is also to hand; also white China four-in-hands, fancy pique derbys, and the World's Fair bows. This latter is a very taking piece of neckwear. A German braid four-in hand is the latest novelty in washing ties. The patterns and colorings are suitable for summer.

John Macdonald & Co. have received a few new lines in all wool carpets in some very new designs and the latest colorings. These are a few new lines taken in for the benefit of the sorting trade.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

Anticipations regarding an increased trade in dry goods have been fully verified, and the warm weather we have been having has increased the movement in a sorting up way for all kinds of summer fabrics. The turnover of summer underwear, hosiery, costumes, hose, and dress fabrics, especially for all wool staples, such as challies, etc., has been unusually good. Staples in fact of all kinds are firm, and the same is to remark about all lines of domestic fabrics which generally rule steady.

Several of the wholesale houses complain about the action of the colored cotton combine in unloading a lot of goods on the market at a heavy reduction after the wholesalers had loaded up with goods. It is contended in connection with these, however, that these goods offered so cheap are very undesirable, and, despite the low prices given on them, will not seriously affect the regular market. They consist principally of gingham.

Considerable regret is expressed by the more conservative houses that the mischievous and harmful custom introduced a year or so ago of giving goods now and dating them for the fall is being continued this season, and goods now in everyday demand are being sold in this way. The result is that traders generally are buying their spring and summer supplies dated fall, and their fall and winter supplies dated as spring. It is claimed that this unsatisfactory state of affairs is all due to the action of one or two houses, who proposed it without any solicitation by the retail trade, who were quite content with present dates had not the other proposition been made to them.

Messrs. S. Greenshields, Son & Co. are opening up this week an extensive line of Irish point and Gulpure laces in shades of black, cream and white. They are also receiving a large line of velveteens in the popular shades of lizard, vert, eminence, heliotrope and bright cardinal.

The supply of challies on the market is small. Messrs. McIntyre & French had an extensive assortment on board the S.S. Wandraham which was wrecked down in the gulf, and they are of course practically ruined. The demand runs principally in heliotrope on a dark ground.

Messrs. J. G. McKenzle & Co.'s is one of the houses which have a full assortment of challies in the popular shades, both on light and dark grounds.

The houses all expect their travellers in this week. Stock-taking is going briskly on, and work will be commenced on fall samples shortly.

Larose & Poquin had a large line of German cashmeres on the Wandraham, and the General Bazaar was another large consignee on the same boat. The latter are offering the damaged goods this week at a wholesale reduction.

Mr. Wm. Agnew, of Wm. Agnew & Co., has got back from his trip west, and is now up in the Ottawa Valley. He had an encouraging trip right through on the whole.

Jobbers here remark that it is interesting to note that silks at present values are higher than they ever were before except once, and that was in 1876. This was fully explained in the May issue of The Dry Goods Review.

Reports in regard to placing orders on fall account continue to be satisfactory.

Matthews, Tower & Co. have been pushing an extensive line of broad brimmed cow-boy hats that they are handling in Manitoba and the North-west.

REGARDING NEW JAPAN TEAS.

N. Y. Bulletin of Friday says: Local jobbers express satisfaction with average quality of samples of new Japan teas received here thus far this season. These samples represent shipments by the first three vessels from the primary source of supply and, to all accounts, reveal remarkably high average quality. Of itself that is considered a favorable feature, but quite as important is the fact that average prices are somewhat lower than those that ruled at the corresponding period last year; and, as the matter of cost is particularly important in these times of financial depression and nervousness in trade circles generally, distributors find some cause for satisfaction, as far at least as the opening of the season is concerned. Regarding the supply, nearly all advices are to the effect that the 1893 crop will exceed that of last year. Coincident with this is the fact that purchases have been made within a very few days at prices that have the appearance of being very low when compared with quotations made at the beginning of the season. It is not uncommon that an early reaction from opening prices takes place, since the mere anxiety to secure new teas as early as possible prompts some buyers to pay fancy prices for first invoices. To some extent similar anxiety played some part in shaping initial prices this year, and the natural reaction is therefore not surprising. Well informed jobbers, however, attach some importance to the fact that a fair amount of old Japan tea is on hand at the present time, whereas the markets were almost bare a year ago, and, connecting this with the fact that prospects are flattering for a good supply, they incline to the opinion that moderate cost is likely to be the rule during the early part of the season at least. Orders from retail trade are therefore solicited at prices unusually close to original cost, and the belief is that moderate prices and higher average quality will ultimately be reflected in a larger volume of consumption.

Editor—"No, he can wait; you settle with me now and the devil hereafter."

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, June 8, 1893.
GROCERIES.

Not a new and special feature has developed in trade during the week. The turnover has been comparatively small, although not more so than a week ago; in fact, if anything, it is probably slightly larger. Travelers report but little doing on their routes, although the farmers are visiting the stores a little more frequently, having generally finished seeding. Locally the coffee market is still in that uninteresting condition that has characterized it for some time, but the outside markets have been attracting some attention on account of the fluctuations they have shown. In dried fruits there is just the ordinary demand, and the only thing new in values is an advance of 1s. in currants in London. New rice is coming in more plentifully, but there is not much demand yet. Sugar is quiet, firm and unchanged. The refiners refuse to shade, while the Moncton refinery has advanced prices $\frac{1}{8}$ c. during the week. The season is practically over for syrups and molasses, and there is consequently little or no interest being taken in these lines. There is a fair seasonable movement only in teas and prices remain as before. Canned goods are in fairly good demand, and opinions are somewhat conflicting regarding tomatoes. Eggs and butter are weak, and another week or so will probably see cheese lower in price.

COFFEE.

A few small lots are sufficient to supply the local demand at prices unchanged. We quote same as before:—Rio, $19\frac{1}{2}$ to $21\frac{1}{2}$ c., East Indian, 27 to 30c., South American, 21 to 23c., Mocha, 26 to 30c., Santos, 21 to 22c., Java, 30 to 32c. Outside markets were irregular during the latter part of last week, but they have been all steadier during the last few days and the result is fractionally higher prices than a week ago. The visible supply of Rio coffee indicates a decrease of 197,000 bags.

DRIED FRUIT.

The only thing really new in the dried fruit market is a firm feeling in currants consequent upon an advance of 1s. in the English market. Demand for Valencia raisins is ordinary only and prices are unchanged. The idea for off-stalk is still 4 to $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. pound for seconds, $5\frac{1}{4}$ to 6c. for fine; layers, ordinary selects, $6\frac{3}{4}$ c., fancy selects, $7\frac{1}{2}$ to 8c., according to quality. Demand for currants is small; in fact probably more so than usual, in spite of the anticipation of higher prices. The idea continues to be 6 to $6\frac{1}{4}$ c. for good fruit and $5\frac{1}{2}$ to 6c. for ordinary. The usual sorting up trade is being done in prunes at $7\frac{1}{4}$ to 8c. in cases. Dates quiet and unchanged at 5 to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c.

RICE AND SPICE.

Rice quiet. The mill has all kinds of rice ready for delivery. The idea is $3\frac{3}{4}$ c. for common and $5\frac{3}{4}$ c. Patna.

There is not much doing in spices and prices are unchanged. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c.; pure white pepper at 20 to 28c., and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

There has been no material change in the situation. A few car lots are moving, but there is not much yet doing in a sorting-up way. The refiners are still looking for higher prices and will not shade at all. The Moncton refinery has advanced its views $\frac{1}{8}$ c. since a week ago. Granulated advanced 1-16c. in New York on Monday, and cable advices report an advancing market. Granulated is firm here at $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. A dark and undesirable yellow can be obtained at $4\frac{3}{4}$ c., but anything like a good yellow cannot be obtained at less than $4\frac{1}{2}$ c.

Willett & Gray, New York, say:—Latest Notable Facts Affecting Sugar—Appearance of cholera in Hamburg, the principal shipping port of beet sugar. Rapid and unusual decrease of stock of raw sugars in the United States early in the season. Possibility of reduced meltings from inadequate raw supplies. Unfavorable financial conditions holding back a probable advance of prices.

The Week—Raws and refined unchanged. Receipts, 17,064 tons; meltings, 37,000 tons. Total stock in all the principal countries, 1,170,373 tons, against 1,445,258 at same date last year. Afloat to the United States from all countries estimated, 70,000 tons, against 80,000 tons last year.

Raws—The advance noted last week has been fully maintained. Refiners by keeping quiet and showing no anxiety over the situation have avoided a further advance thus far, and drawn out a few more cargoes on the previous basis, but the purchases and receipts are so far below the meltings and sales that stocks have decreased rapidly, 20,000 tons for the week. The strong statistical position is still partially offset by the weak financial position and inability of buyers to carry as much refined product as the conditions warrant. Two sugar vessels were swamped at sea on the voyage from Cuba. It is very unusual for the stock of sugar in the United States to decrease at this season of the year.

Refined—The market still remains in favor of buyers. Early in the week orders were large and purchases free to the extent of monetary facilities. The conditions remained unchanged at the close and buyers are taking all the stock they can pay for comfortably as is fully warranted by the conditions of the raw supply markets. Refiners have been melting in excess of requirements, but this may be changed by necessity, should purchasers of raws continue to be made in amounts below meltings, and it is difficult to see how purchases can be increased very much even by paying moderate advances. This is a very exceptional sugar campaign and the advance is by no means ended, or the difficulties of an assured supply to the end at all diminished. We advise carrying full stocks all the time.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups neglected. Low grades are scarce, and they have none in the United States of the test that would allow them to be brought in here; $2\frac{1}{2}$ to 3c. is still the idea. Molasses is much about the same as syrup. The idea is 32 to 40c., according to grade.

NUTS.

Nuts are quiet and unchanged. We quote Brazil nuts 11 to $11\frac{1}{2}$ c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; unshelled, 16 to 17c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to $12\frac{1}{2}$ c. for green; cocoa nuts, \$5 to \$5.50 per sack.

TEAS.

There has been very little movement in teas. Ceylons and Indians, from medium to high grades, continue to show exceptionally good value. Low grades are scarce and dear. A little more is being done in young hysons, chiefly in low grades. Japans are rather quiet. A few more new season's teas are offering, with buyers showing an inclination to secure nothing under high grades. The new crop Japan teas, expected to arrive here Friday or Saturday of last week, had not arrived at time of writing. We quote Japans—Low grade and common, 13 to 14c. Medium, $17\frac{1}{2}$ to 19c.; fine to finest, 28 to 35c. Blacks—Low grades congous, $14\frac{1}{2}$ to $16\frac{1}{2}$ c.; medium, 18 to 23c.; fine, 30 to 45c.; fancy 60 to 70.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Increasing weakness still characterizes the butter market. During the week receipts have been liberal, particularly of tubs, the warm weather having caused arrivals of large rolls to fall off perceptibly. Saturday last tubs touched as low as 13c., but the range is $13\frac{1}{2}$ to 14c. for good, the inside figure being for job lots; for something choice in dairy tubs the retail grocer would probably pay 15c. Large rolls are quoted at 13 to 14c., and pound rolls at 15c. The enquiry is good for tubs and pails. Receipts of creamery butter have been pretty heavy. This season a lot of new creameries are on the market, which has had the tendency to lower prices. There is a fair demand for creamery, and it may be expected to improve as the weather gets warmer. The idea is 21 to 22c. for tubs and 23c. for pound prints.

Demand for cheese is rather better than a week ago and the supply is increasing. There have been transactions between the factories and jobbers at $9\frac{1}{4}$ to $9\frac{1}{2}$ c., and the latter are quoting 10 to $10\frac{1}{2}$ c. here, but these prices are not likely to be long maintained. There is still a little old on the market, for which 11 to $11\frac{1}{4}$ c. is the idea.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—There is no change. Jobbing trade is dull with prices unchanged at $1.40 to $1.45 per bushel.

DRIED APPLES—Dull and easy. Jobbing lots are going out at $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. and small lots at $4\frac{3}{4}$ c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Inactive. There have been a few jobbing lots selling at 8c. and small lots at 9c.

DELHI CANNING CO.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

Opinions regarding the market are varied. This is particularly so in regard to tomatoes. All this indicates an unsettled feeling. The bulls and bears are easily discernable, and, strange to say, some of those who are known to hold at least fairly good stocks are in the camp of the latter and make no bones about saying so. Those who are taking the bear side claim that stocks are larger than expected, that while demand is good prices are unsatisfactory, a good many having bought at prices which will not now yield them a profit. Some of those who even take this view of the situation acknowledge that the low prices may so induce consumption that the end of the season may see stocks pretty well cleaned up, but even then they hold that the result will not be satisfactory as far as prices are concerned. The bulls on the other hand claim that stocks are not large, and as an evidence of their faith in the market some of them are holding tomatoes at slightly higher prices.

Another thing they pin their faith in is the United States market which they say will take our tomatoes at 80c. Toronto. But it must be remembered that holders on the other side are, as N. Y. Bulletin puts it "quietly getting under the umbrella," as new good will be on that market in five or six weeks and that three pound canned tomatoes have been purchased for shipment hence from England at $1.27½. There have been no further shipments this week to Chicago from Toronto, but a Hamilton firm announces that it has sent forward 1000 cases of tomatoes. There are some tomatoes, of brands not so well known, selling freely on the Toronto market at 80c. and this in itself, aside from all other influence would have a weakening tendency on the market. The idea with most houses, however, is 85 to 90c. Peas are selling at from 85c. up, but there is not much doing. Corn is rather scarce, with prices firm at 85 to 90c. Corn is evidently good property, and is about the strongest article in the canned goods trade. Stock of peaches is light, while demand is good and prices unchanged at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and $3.25 to $3.75 for 3's. Plums are in fair demand and unchanged at $1.45 to $1.55. Apples are getting scarce and demand is improving; 85c. to $1 for 3's and $2 to $2.25 for gallons. There is an active demand for the better grades of salmon at $1.50 to $1.55 for talls and $1.70 to $1.80 for flats. Lobster continues in good demand at $1.90 to $2.10 for talls and $2.50 to $2.70 for flats. Since the warmer weather set in there has been an improvement in the demand for sardines, at unchanged prices.

MARKETS—Continued

EGGS—Receipts liberal and prices easy at 11 to 11½c. Handlers will be through pickling in a few days and then lower prices may be looked for.

HONEY—No change, extracted white being quoted at 8c. and dark at 5c.

POULTRY—Much as before. We quote : Chickens 75 to 85c., turkeys 10 to 12c. a pound, geese 8 to 10c. a pound.

POTATOES—The market continues steady with supplies scarce; 98c. to $1 is the idea on track and $1.05 to $1.10 is asked for small lots. New potatoes are on the market and they are selling at $4.75 per barrel.

ONIONS—There is the usual trade doing and prices are unchanged. We quote red at $1.10 per bag, $2 per barrel, and yellow at $1.20 per bag and $2.25 to $2.75 per barrel; Egyptian, $2.50 to $2.75 per bag.

HOPS—There is not much doing and prices are easier at 15 to 17c. for 92's and 10 to 12c. for yearlings.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The packers being out of the market for hogs the butchers are the only buyers and prices are in consequence lower at $7.50. Demand is increasing for hog products particularly smoked meats, and prices are steady and in fact rather firmer in some lines.

BACON—Long clear, 10½ to 11c. Smoked backs 13c., bellies, 13½ to 14c., rolls, 10½ to 10¾c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c. for smoked.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13c. in tubs,

13½c. in pails and 12¾c. in tierces. Compound 10 to 10½c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $21, Canadian short cut $22.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 4¼ to 5½c., hindquarters 6 to 8½c., veal 8 to 7½c., lamb 8½ to 9½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

A good business is being done in this line. Oranges are in rather better demand than a week ago and prices are without change. The hot weather has given quite a stimulus to lemons. Demand is scarcely so good as it was for bananas, although there are not too many coming in owing to the higher prices ruling in the United States markets. Pineapples are coming in more freely, but they are being absorbed by the market at prices rather lower than a week ago. There are a few foreign tomatoes coming in and they sell at $2.50 to $2.75 per crate of 30 boxes for Floridas and $3 per crate of 24 boxes for Mississippi's. Strawberries are arriving more freely and they sell at 14 to 15c. a box. Oranges—Messinas, $4.00 per box for 200's, $3.50 to $3.75 per box for 160's, $1.85 to $2 for 80's and $2 to $2.25 for 100's, $2.50 for bloods, half box; lemons, $3 to $4.50; bananas, $1.25 to $2; pineapples, extras, 17c., No. 1 15c., No. 2 12½c., No. 3 10c.; California apricots, 20c. per lb. 25-lb. boxes; apples, $1.50 to $2 for ordinary stock and $2.25 to $3.50 for choice to fancy.

FISH.

There is a fair business doing at last week's prices. Supply is about sufficient for the demand. We quote: Fresh salmon, 20c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half bbl.; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; pike, 5 to 6c.; ciscoes, $1.35 a hundred; finnan haddie, 5c.; perch, $2 to $3 per hundred, as to size; blue back herring, $2 to $3 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; shad, $3 a dozen; halibut, 15c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7 to 7½c.; eels, 8 to 10c. a lb.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—No material change. Supplies are not large at the moment and all offered are taken at 5¼c. for good selections.

SKINS—Calfskins are lower, jobbers now paying 8c. and demand is light. Wool skins are scarce at $1.40 to $1.50 and lambskins are quoted at 30c.

TALLOW—Steady and unchanged, jobbers paying 3½c. for rendered and selling at 6 to 6¼c.; rough 2c.

WOOL—There is a little beginning to come in, and dealers are paying 17 to 18c. for good merchantable fleece combing, and for coarse unwashed 10c. and fine 11 to 11½c. The mills are still fairly well employed.

PETROLEUM.

The Petrolia Advertiser in its weekly report says: "The dullness which was so apparent at the close of last week has, in some instances, become more active and promising. Refined illuminating oil is very depressed. The general position of crude oil is dull and unchanged, but is steady. The movement in consumption of course will quicken as the season advances, and in two or three months from now there is no doubt that a better tone and feeling will prevail. In the meantime the situation is decidedly interesting, and uncertain whether the market will improve or go lower. Should the demand from manufacturers improve, it would send prices upward, as no considerable quantity of the raw material can be secured at present figures; but, on the other hand, a continuance of the present dullness will probably witness a further shrinkage in the prices. On the other hand, holders of oil who can afford to carry their holdings are confident that a change for the better is sure to come, and they do not propose to sacrifice their oil when by holding it they believe they will be able to realize a much better price as a reward for their patience and faith in the future. They are encouraged in the position they take by the fact that the stocks here of both crude and refined are very small, and supplies in the east are supposed to be limited. Indeed it is the general belief that with a normal demand during the remainder of the season an actual scarcity may be experienced, but to counteract this the drill can be set to work, as the territory is prolific enough for years to come to supply any extra demands that may be made on it." The Advertiser quotes Petrolia crude $1.07 per barrel in tank, or $1.10 delivered.

MARKET NOTES.

T. Kinnear & Co. are offering a new package tea in pounds and half pounds. It is known as the "Victoria Ceylon" tea. These goods are specially selected by one of the best houses in England. The tea will retail at 50c. a pound.

Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, are in receipt of a large shipment of new Japan teas. The quality is fine.

Sloan & Crowther are handling a fine line of fancy biscuits, which they are selling much below the regular price.

Eby, Blain & Co. have received 100 cases of finest French macaroni and a large shipment of Italian macaroni.

French peas are scarce and a good enquiry has developed for them.

Davidson & Hay have received a fresh shipment of Cross & Blackwell's goods.

Eby, Blain & Co. report the arrival of a large shipment of thistle brand of finnan haddie, exceptionally fine goods.

A new stock of thistle brand finnan haddie has been received by Davidson & Hay.

Smith & Keighley have received their first shipment of the famous May pick Japan tea.

J. W. Lang & Co. are showing good value in Oolong teas.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are offering a fine line of Ceylon tea at 28c.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are advertising some desirable lines of summer beverages in this issue.

T. Kinnear & Co. report the arrival of a new shipment of prunes which they are offering to the trade at reasonable prices.

Faulder's silver-pan marmalade and jams are rapidly increasing in consumption. Send in your orders to H. P. Eckardt & Co.

Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, made a large shipment of tomatoes to Chicago this week.

The Kingsville Canning Co. has settled at $700 the case preferred against it for selling soaked peas.

Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, state that the demand for their extra choice pale colored Mikado chop is increasing. These teas are packed in fine metal cases in bulk.

The Canadian mill is placing a new Japan rice on the market. It is known as "J," and sells at 3¼ to 3½c. This is the first time they have offered a low-priced Japan rice.

The Pure Gold M'fg Co., of Toronto, are putting up about 100 tons of lemon, orange and citron peel in 7-lb. boxes, for next fall's trade. The samples shown compare with the finest imported peels.

On page 33 of this issue will be found the advertisement of C. James & Co., pickles, etc. These goods are handled largely by all the leading grocers in the Maritime Provinces, and live dealers will do well to correspond with Mr. Eagar, Halifax, N.S., and take advantage of the inducements offered.

Regarding the conditions of the East India growths of coffee, the following in substance is the current story: "In mid-Java the coffee crop has been greatly marred by heavy and continuous rainfall; leaf-disease has also made considerable headway, and on most of the estates the yield is expected to shrink heavily this year.—N. Y. Bulletin.

O. & W. Thum & Co., manufacturers of Tanglefoot fly paper, Grand Rapids, Mich., are in receipt of a letter from C. Mealey, proprietor of Greenwich Pharmacy, in which he says: "This makes my seventh year that I have sold it, and have never lost a sheet during the whole time, and have kept it over winter.

M. F. Eager, Halifax, N.S., general agent for Canada for Christopher James & Co.'s, London, pickles, sauces and marmalades, is advertising for one jobber in each city to handle these goods. They are sold largely in the Maritime Provinces. In order to introduce this imperial pint bottle of pickles he is offering to sell them for the next three months to retailers at $2.40 per dozen.

The "Under two Flags" Japan, now offering by Lucas, Steele & Bristol, of Hamilton, is quite up to anything previously offered by them. They will be pleased to send samples of any teas.

The Sterling Soap Co. has adopted a unique way of advertising its goods. Posted on numerous hillsides are large signs in white letters which stand out in bold relief against the green background and can be seen and read at a considerable distance.

Advices received from T. Irvine & Co., Liverpool, by F. Dane of Toronto, state: The hay crop in England is attracting the serious attention of all concerned therein, for the country has never been so bare of stocks nor the consuming centers subjected to so tight a pinch before. To the unprecedented drought and the lateness of the rains is to be attributed the practical failure of the first crop, which may virtually be put down as nil. Prices for good hay have already advanced to 100s. per ton of 2,240 lbs., and higher prices are looked for, as too much cannot be expected from the second crop, although possibly it may be earlier than usual. It is therefore undoubtedly a most favorable opportunity for the exportation in pressed packed bales of good sound hay to this country, as in our opinion a substantial profit will accrue.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, June 8, 1893.
GROCERIES.

The week has not furnished anything special in actual business, but genuine surprise was the failure of Messrs. Regan, White & Co., who were a hard-working firm and whom everyone expected to go ahead. The close business and extensive financial resources of the older houses and the way they made use of this advantage is the only possible solution of this trouble. Most of the leading lines have been quiet and prices are being cut so close that the universal complaint is that profits are so infinitesimal that a microscope is a requisite in every counting room. Teas and coffees are quiet, but the latter is firm and spices are the same way, while sugar is strong in tone, and when the consumptive movement of the summer months sets in in earnest a general appreciation in price is anticipated, especially as the news from all points with regard to raw continues firm. Reports regarding molasses are very conflicting, and the market exhibits an irregular tone. The actual movement at the moment is small. Payments are reported as fair during the week.

SUGAR.

The sugar market continues firm in tone and the tenor of advices on raw indicate a further upward tendency if anything. A telegram to a local broker to-day stated that the price of granulated had been advanced another 1-16 in New York, and the trade here are expecting that this market will follow suit, only more so if anything, as the supply of raw material here for reasons already outlined in THE GROCER is not excessive, and the refiners no doubt will take full advantage of their opportunities. At present the actual movement is not very brisk, but consumption is expected to increase shortly, owing to the fruit season coming on and this will very likely have a stiffening effect on the price. Our quotations for spot business are nominally unchanged under the proviso above outlined, and we quoted 5¼c. for granulated and 4¼ to 4½c. for yellows according to grade.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There has been a little more doing in Canadian syrups at about 2 to 2½c. per lb. for choice qualities in the wood, while American sells slowly at 18½ to 20½c. per gallon.

Reports regarding the molasses market are conflicting especially in regard to first cost at the Islands. One dealer here claims that he can sell at 12c. first cost, while others scout the idea and say that 13c. is the very best figure possible. Spot business at the moment from second hands is small, and the combine stoutly assert that 33c. is the best figure they will give, but as we noted last week business in 25 and 50 puncheon lots, has it is claimed, been done for less money.

TEAS.

The failure of a wholesale grocery house who did a large business in teas has had little effect on the tea market here so far, and the position in its main features is essentially unchanged. No large transactions are reported, low grades and medium Japans receiving what attention there is to note. Blacks and greens are quiet and steady.

COFFEES AND SPICES.

The coffee market is quiet and steady. We quote Jamaica 19 to 20c., Maracaibo 20 to 22c., Rio 19 to 21c., Java 24 to 28c., and Mocha 25 to 28c.

Spices generally rule firm, with a moderate trade doing. Jamaica ginger selling at 16 to 18c., and finer stock 20 to 24c. Black pepper is 8 to 9c., pimento 6½c., and nutmegs 50 to 52½c. and $1 for round business in a wholesale way.

DRIED FRUIT.

There has been a moderate trade doing in dried fruits, several lots of Valencia raisins changing hands at 4c. for good sound off-stalk. Layers are scarce and quoted at 6 to 6½c. Currants are still very dull, with values about as quoted last week—namely, 5 to 6c. as to quality.

RICE.

A good distributive business is reported in rice at unchanged prices. We quote ordinary, $3.85 to $4; Japans, $4 to $5.50; and Patna and Carolinas, $4.50 to $5.50.

FRUIT.

In fruit the market has been of a steady jobbing character. Lemons have met a fair demand at rather easier prices, about $2 to $4 per case being the idea. Oranges have been much the same way, moving during the week at the following: Messina $3 to $3.50, and Sorrento $2.50 to $3. Pineapples are quiet at 10 to 20c.; bananas, 75c. to $2.50 per bunch; and figs moving freely at 9½c. per lb. in large boxes.

BEANS.

The market is moving quiet, a few lots of hand picked Western moving at $1.60 to $1.65, and $1.25 to $1.50 for ordinary to good. Some poor lots changed hands at $1 to $1.10.

HONEY.

Honey rules quiet and unchanged. Extracted sells at 6 to 8c. and comb stock 9 to 13c. according to quality.

HOPS.

The hop market continues very slow, and we quote choice 17 to 18½c., poorer qualities 14 to 16c. A few lots of old hops are knocking about the market at 6 to 10c.

POTATOES.

The market has turned a shade weaker during the week. Round lots of good to choice have sold at $1 to $1.10 per bag of 90 lbs., and choice Early Rose $1.10 to $1.15.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market has ruled dull and neglected, but prices are nominally unchanged. Canadian short cut, per brl., $21 to $22; mess pork, Western, new, per brl., $22.50 to $23; hams, city cured, per lb. 12½ to 13¼c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 12 to 12½c.; bacon, per lb., 11½ to 12½c.; lard, common refined, per lb., 10 to 10½c.

EGGS.

The egg market rules easy, but dealers are still gathering 11 to 11½c. for small to fair sized lots. Receipts continue heavy, and with the hot weather we are having a decline is bound to come.

CHEESE AND BUTTER.

The cheese market is rather quiet after the sailing of the London steamers, with little business to note. The tone was about the same and prices can be quoted: Finest colored 9½ to 9¾c., finest white 9¼ to 9½c., under grades 8½ to 8¾c.; cable 50s.

Butter remains about the same, with only a jobbing movement to note. It is anticipated that next week there will be offerings of creamery. Shippers proclaim that they don't care much about this unless the figure is a very reasonable one. It is probable in connection with these goods that present prices will ease off a trifle, as the factorymen, no doubt, will want to clear up this early make before they get into the June run. New creamery 18½ to 19½c., new townships 17 to 18c., Western dairy 15 to 16c., Western roll 13 to 14c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

New York advices state that granulated was put up on that market on Tuesday 1-16 of a cent, and dealers expect our market to follow suit.

The agent of a German firm, who is here at present, says that he can see no possible way in which a further and decided advance in the price of refined sugar is to be prevented.

The firm of Caverhill, Rose, Hughes & Co. has dissolved, and the business will now be carried on by Mr. John L. Caverhill and Mr. H. H. F. Hughes, under the name of Caverhill, Hughes & Co.

L. Chaput & Sons say that despite all talk about low offers and easier prices on Barbadoes molasses they are the owners of a thousand odd puncheons or so on the wharf, and don't feel at all anxious about their property.

George Childs & Son have about settled down thoroughly into their new premises on McGill street. This street is now a regular grocery centre, as over six of the big wholesale houses now have their warehouses within a few blocks of each other.

John C. Rose, late of Caverhill, Rose, Hughes & Co., has gone to England to complete arrangements for some British agencies for grocery specialties. Associated with him in his new venture will be W. L. Laflamme, who is also late of the firm of Caverhill, Rose, Hughes & Co. They already represent the following: Ram Lal's pure Indian tea, Bendorp's Royal Dutch Cocoa, Batger's jams, marmalades, and solidified jellies, Fould's wheat germ meal, McLaren's Imperial cheese, Cunningham De Fourier & Co.'s potted meats, Patterson's sauces and Essence of Coffee and Fruit Pudding.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

ST. JOHN, N. B., June 8, 1893.

Trade does not have the "go" to it that dealers would like to see. The cause of it seems to be the small amount of money in circulation. Sugar market is dull, though firm. Breadstuffs are somewhat easier. A fair trade is doing in tea. Provisions still keep high. In fish prices are advancing. Canned goods are being pushed, and some houses to effect sales are lowering prices.

Sugars.—The demand has been very light the past week, which gives buyers the opinion that prices should ease some, though the very firm quotations on raws would indicate a further advance as the probable outcome of present dullness. Quotations are as follows: Granulated 5.20 to 5.3-8c.; extra c., 4.1-2 to 4.3-4c.; yellows, 4.3-8 to 4.1-2c.

Molasses.—The market is dull. Barbadoes is quoted 32 to 33c.

Rice.—A fair demand. Prices some lower, at 3.1-2 to 3.3-4c.

Dried Fruit.—The market is well supplied, and prices are some easier. Off-stalk: Valencias, 5 to 5.1-2c.; Valencia layers, 6 to 6.1-2c.; currants, 5 to 6.1-2c.; prunes, 7 to 8c.; dates, 4.1-2 to 5c.

Dried Apples.—Are dull at 5.1-2 to 6c.; evaporated apples are selling at 10.1-2 to 11c.

Butter.—The market is well supplied. Prices have lowered some, and 18 to 20c. is quoted, which is hard to get unless quality is choice.

Cheese.—Old cheese is not in as good demand, and prices are at 10 to 10.1-2c. New is offering at 11 to 11.1-2c.

Eggs.—Very dull; market overstocked. Prices are 10 to 11c.

Onions.—About 1,000 crates of Bermudas have been landed this week ex Taymouth Castle; have not heard of any being sold. The last lot were sold at $1.50 to 1.60. Egyptian in bags, 2.1-2 to 3c. per lb.

Fish.—Market has been bare for some days and prices are higher. There are three small vessels discharging cargoes now, and prices quoted are: Large cod, $4.50 to $4.75 per cwt.; medium cod, $3.75 to $4 per cwt.; pollock, $2.10 to $2.25 per cwt.

PERSONAL MENTION.

J. Lockhart Watt and family returned from Great Britain Monday.

W. H. Rowley, manager of the E. B. Eddy Co., Hull, Que., paid a flying visit to Toronto last week.

A. F. Macharen, Windsor, manufacturer of the well known Imperial cheese, has been selected as one of the two judges from Canada on cheese at the World's Fair. The selection is a good one. Mr. Macharen thoroughly understands his business. He started at the proper end by milking the cow. He is now in Chicago attending to the duties of his appointment.

SHORT CREDITS, BY ALL MEANS.

As a friend of cash transaction it is natural for me to chose, in this instance, in favor of short credit, or "prompt and frequent settlements"; without better reason, perhaps, for my choice than that it is the nearer approach to my favorite cash system. Yet had I the good luck to be beginning business to-morrow, I would, so far as I could, adapt my business to the general policy of the community in which I lived, as the safest plan by which it might maintain itself profitably, at the same time eliminating as much as possible the feature of long-winded accounts.

When people once become accustomed to "prompt and frequent settlement," they approve of it. As a rule a long-standing account is no easier of collection than a shorter one. Four times in five the season for collecting it is ill-chosen. The custom of delaying collection makes one careless, and it is either permitted to run at the debtor's will, or payment is asked when business is quiet and money naturally scarce. The fact that the account has been permitted to run for months, because the customer is "good," is no consideration on pay day. Collection day should be timed so as to arrive at a convenient time for payment; a difference of thirty or sixty days matters but little to the man with plenty of money.

Short accounts are seldom disputed, while the reverse is frequently the case. People will forget, and it is difficult to recall the incidents of a trade after the lapse of months.

When "prompt settlements" is the advertised policy of the house, no offence can be taken, and objection is seldom offered. Most people are satisfied to be treated as well as their neighbors.

Slow people are the most unsatisfactory customers, as a demand at any time is apt to arouse a suspicion of haste, and if you are firm, then the case is only aggravated.

A sixty day credit is as much an expression of confidence as six months, and the customer who complains of one will find fault with the other.

If spot cash is the better plan, short credit is surely a good second.

Consider the jobber who offers you six per cent in lieu of four months net, just eighteen per cent per annum. It should be not only gilt edge custom but round profits which would satisfy its stead.

There are two classes of men who still cling to "long time." Their representatives are moss covered relics of those "good old days," when advertising was an unknown science, when the trade journal was still undeveloped and our nation yet in embryo; before the railroad, the telegraph and the daily paper—eliminating distance and delay—made the individual idea of to-day the common property of the world to-morrow, and opened up a thoroughfare for the dissemination of popular views.

To one of these classes belongs the country merchant, living in an agricultural community, dependent on the returns from the harvested crops, and finding it necessary to carry his neighbors account from season to season.

We also find, in cities, a store which extends a long-time accommodation, but the condition is the growth of years. The house does an almost exclusively "family trade," and they are acquainted with their patrons from "away back," and did business with the grandparents of the present generation. They are not hustlers, and don't aim to be. Their employees are plodders who have grown old in the service. There is no attempt at bargain days. They have loads of stuff that is "in style every seven years," and which they never expect to sell, unless to an insurance company. Like many other relics which have withstood the shocks of time and change, we admire their stability, perhaps, but as mercantile examples we have no use for them.

There is no doubt that the system of "prompt settlements" has developed as the prominent policy of to-day. This fact should be recommendation enough. Have your policy understood, state terms on billheads, then be consistent. No one will blame consistency. No sane man can take offense at good business methods. Never make an excuse for collecting promptly when bills are due. It is the settled policy of leading merchants of the land, and those who do not practice it, advise it.

The fact that it has supplanted the primitive plan of barter and almost endless credit, together with the fact that progressive men denounce "long time," that progress everywhere displaces it, and that it disappears before the approach of modern merchandising is convincing enough for me. Like many other matters, it must be taken more or less on faith, and although there may be some advantages we cannot fully explain or understand, yet we are not prepared to contradict what is accepted by the majority, especially as we have nothing better to offer instead.—J. J. Brady, in Dry Goods Chronicle.

HOW TO CURE BACON IN SUMMER.

The following is taken from the Grocers' Gazette, London:

In continuation of our purpose to place from time to time before our readers the best technical information of a useful and practical kind on various trade matters, we to-day devote a portion of our space to the subject of summer bacon curing. It is a mistake to suppose that when the warm weather sets in the ordinary curer of bacon must cease operations, and allow those of the more favored sort who possess powerful refrigerators to rule supreme. Undoubtedly there is great difficulty in handling pork during sultry weather. The risks, however, of spoiling it during the cure can be much minimized by attending to a few simple rules. Eight score to ten score pigs are most suitable for bacon, heavier pigs for hams and broad-cut sides. Before slaughtering it will be found necessary to rest the animals for about twelve or fourteen hours, more especially so if they have come a long journey. During this period of rest no food should be given them, as otherwise the digestive organs are set in full motion, and the animal heat produced is sure to make the cure impossible. The most humane method of slaughter is to knock down with a round-faced mallet, thus producing insensibility; then string the animal up to a sliding bar and let out the blood. The state of insensibility prevents the struggling, which in hot water is so much to be guarded against, as well as preventing the screams of the dying animal from becoming a nuisance. Among many appliances for use at this stage of the proceedings, none is more useful than the singeing furnace. It may be made of bricks and heated with coke, or of a simple gas arrangement. In either case the effect to be produced is to burn the hair of the animals into a black crust, and harden the rind; at the same time to produce that delicacy of flavor which is wanting in pigs that are only scalded. When the singeing is completed, throw some buckets of cold water all over the carcase, and immediately scrape off the back crust with a flat-faced scraper. From this stage onward to the cutting up into sections a copious supply of clean, fresh, cold water should be at hand and freely used. Open the carcase and remove the intestines, cut off the head, split down the back so as to separate out the vertebral column, and divide the two sides. It is best to allow of complete setting by permitting the sides to hang in a cool draft for some hours, say all night, and proceeding thereafter to trim and prepare for the cellar. Trimming the sides is a very simple process, and is more a question of practice than anything else. The sparerib should be cut out, the ribs cleaned, the blade bone removed and symmetry obtained. Be careful also to remove the large vein just beneath the sparerib, as the clotted blood, if left about, is exceedingly dangerous. The sides would now be ready for the cellar.

A cellar such as can be cheaply used for curing during warm weather may be constructed as follows: The basement of a shop or house is made perfectly airtight by lining the walls with cement, and the roof with feathered and grooved boarding. The floor is divided into sections, and right round the wall is erected, at a height of 2 feet from the floor, a table of stone or brick of a width of about 3 feet 6 inches, and gently sloping inward, so as to provide a channel for the brine. In the centre a table is erected of similar height (2 feet), and with a slope from both edges to the centre, so as to provide a brine channel. These tables should all gradually fall in the direction of the pickling tanks, which may be as numerous as circumstances will permit. A very convenient size for these vats is 4 feet deep by 3 feet 6 inches square, and they can be constructed of either slabs or slate or of Caithness flagstones cemented or bolted together. Caithness flagstones are also very often used for the tops of the tables already described. In a recess, if possible, just above the pickling vats, or at any rate at the end of the cellar furthest from the doorway, a box for receiving ice should be constructed. The size will depend on the space to be cooled: Thus for a cellar 30 feet by 20 feet a box holding half-a-ton of ice will be sufficient. It must be borne in mind, however, that the greater the quantity of ice present, the proportionate loss by waste will be the less. The ice box should have a false bottom and convenience for collecting the water produced, and the sides nearest the cellar should also be constructed of lattice pattern, so that the cold air will fall outwards freely. The cold air will fall downwards, so that it is necessary for the ice box to be as near the roof as possible. The place for filling the ice into this receptacle may be conveniently put immediately above it, and the entrance secured so as to prevent a large influx of air. It is necessary to allow of the entrance of a little air, as will be explained below, but the air capable of being drawn through a 2-inch tube is quite sufficient for almost any ordinary cellar. Near the doorway, and at the opposite end from the ice box, a small fan of about 12 or 18 inches diameter should be fixed in the wall and connected with a water motor or small gas engine of about two man power. As the fan will have to travel constantly, it is perhaps desirable to use a water motor as the more reliable and less dangerous of the two. When these arrangements are completed, the action to be produced is as follows: This fan causes a gentle current throughout the cellar and draws its supply of air through the ice box, which must be very cold, and thus disseminates all over the space an equal temperature of about 50 degrees Fahr. It may be easily reduced to 45 degrees by carefully proportioning the fan and the ice box to the cubic capacity of the cellar. From 45 degrees to 50 degrees Fahr. are the temperatures between which curing may be conducted successfully.

Having thus obtained the convenience required at a very moderate outlay, the fresh sides should be taken and laid on the table near the doorway and pumped—that is to say, brine of the following composition should be injected into all the lean or solid parts and along the sides of the bones of the hams: salt, 45 lbs.; food preservative (dry antiseptic), 4 lbs.; Egyptian or Barbadoes sugar, 3 lbs.; saltpetre, 1-2 lb.; salprunella, 1-2 lb. Make this up to 20 gallons with fresh cold water, and stir till all is dissolved. Should it prove to be thick and muddy, boil and skim till clear. Pump this brine by means of a brine pump or hand brine syringe into the bacon, as described, and thereafter dust the side with a little food preservative (dry antiseptic) and rub the inside well with fine salt to which has been added 5 per cent. of saltpetre. Lay a bed of salt on the table and cover up the sides with it. The same process is gone through with all the sides, and if there be not enough space to lay them out singly, pile one on the top of the other, always taking care to have plenty of salt between. At the end of the third day remove the salt and turn the sides, if piled, so that those at first at the bottom will be on top, and add fresh salt with a little rubbing. At the end of eight or ten days the cure will be complete, and the sides may then be removed altogether from salt, washed in cold water, and hung up to dry. Dust some food preservative into the "pockets," and sprinkle a little corn sharps, finely ground, over all the inside. If the bacon is required smoked, dust them all over with fine ground Canadian pea meal, and hang up in the smokehouse for about thirty-six hours. A much less time (about twelve hours) will do if there is a full volume of smoke. Oak sawdust is the best medium for smoking, producing the richest flavor. By the foregoing simple and economical plan, prime bacon, finely flavored and commanding high prices, can be produced. There are details in the construction which of course cannot be dealt with here, but the main idea will be easily grasped by our readers.

HINTS TO MEAT SMOKERS.

After a winter of extreme cold, such as that just past, the smoker cannot take the age of his meat as any sure criterion of the amount of cure it has received. It is a common occurrence, particularly where "green" meat has been shipped some distance, for it to become partially frozen en route, and on arrival be packed tightly in packages and placed in cold storage, where it may remain in that semi-frozen condition for a considerable time without absorbing salt or taking more than a merely surface cure; and while your meats, as far as age is concerned, ought to be fully cured, they may be in reality only partially cured and unsafe to smoke. In fact, the risks to the smoker are greater after an extremely cold winter than after a very mild one, as in the latter case greater precautions are taken to see that the joints are properly chilled or iced, while in the former the curer takes it for granted he is perfectly safe and uses no precautions against the opposite extreme. Pork products "cure" best at a temperature of 38° (temperature of the meat itself), and are not in good curing condition when it varies more than 4° either way from that. We would, therefore, advise smokers to carefully examine a few tierces of each date before soaking or smoking—first, by testing the strength of the pickle to find how much salt the meat has absorbed, and then by "plugging" the meat from the skin side in its thickest part as deep as possible in order to see how far the cure has penetrated.—National Provisioner.

For some years an agitation has been going on for an increase in the creamery capacity of the country. The primary object sought was a better and more uniform grade of butter, and one that would find more acceptance with the British consumer. But the wheels of reform move slowly; and that which had for its purpose a more desirable grade of butter was no exception to the rule. This spring, however, there has been a marked increase in the number of creameries, some of the factories which had hitherto confined themselves wholly to cheese making having turned their attention to butter making as well. As a result creamery butter is more plentiful and, what is natural, cheaper. Heretofore the great mass of consumers have been unable to enjoy the luxury of creamery butter owing to its high price compared with dairy butter, but now, to use a well-worn phrase, the price is getting within the reach of all. As this becomes more pronounced farmers will be either compelled to improve their methods for making butter or sell their milk to the creameries. In fact both results may be expected to follow, although it is pretty safe to conjecture that the greater tendency will be toward the latter alternative.

Public carriers like railway and steamboat lines have often much to contend with, but they are not always the grieved. On the contrary they are too often the aggrieved. Shippers know this to their sorrow. And the result arises—or at any rate appears to—from a misconception of the relation railway bear towards the public. From the lofty and arrogant air they too often assume it is evident they conceive themselves to be the masters instead of the servants of the public. Of course there are exceptions to every rule; but when these public carriers get off their perch it is usually to court a bonus, seek a right of way, or to solicit patronage when compelled by keenness of competition to do so.

A railway is just as much a business enterprise as is an ordinary mercantile venture, and its patrons are just as much entitled to courtesy and attention as are those of the other. But again and again incidents are brought to the light of public gaze demonstrating that this too often does not obtain. A few days ago a Toronto evening paper published an interview with a commercial traveler in which were adduced samples of the treatment recently accorded himself and other drummers by the Grand Trunk railway. Briefly stated, they told of flagrant baggage overcharges, inconveniences, insolence and incivility from employees responsible for the mistakes. The fruit of these grievances has in some instances already appeared in a transference of patronage where possible to a rival line. This is but a sample of what is occurring with more or less frequency from time to time on the G. T. R. Owing to the treatment they have received from that company in the past there are numbers of merchants and grain men who prefer to ship by any other line when possible. Some in fact do not mind going to a little inconvenience and even extra expense in order to avoid sending by it, such for instance as shipping merchandise to a town into which the G. T. R. only runs, over another road and teaming it from the nearest point on that road to its destination. In the face of such conditions it is not surprising that the annual and semi-annual reports of the Grand Trunk should show such poor results or that many of its shareholders should exhibit so much discontent.

• • •

The man who will thoughtfully look around will come to the conclusion that, compared with other countries, the financial condition of Canada is not bad after all. True the country is not growing as fast as it might or ought, but fortunately we are not experiencing a financial crisis like that of Australia, an unsettled and panicky feeling like our cousins across the border or the heavy depression of Great Britain. Canada is all right. The little indispositions that she now and then experiences are only temporary. Chronic diseases she has done. All that is wanted to build up a big, strong and prosperous country is confidence in our resources, the will to push and persevere, and the placing at the head of public affairs—federal, provincial and municipal—men endued with sound business principles and who place country before party. In the past the trouble has been a laxity in these essentials in all spheres of public life. And although Canada does not stand alone in this particular it is no reason why we should not strive to get more of the desired business element introduced into our halls of legislation. This, however, cannot be accomplished without united effort, and one naturally turns to boards of trade and business men's associations to move in the matter, but at the same time, in movements of this kind as much care as possible should be taken to prevent the idea going abroad that it is being made purely in the interests of one class.

THE WHOLESALE POSITION.

Evolution is steadily and persistently going on in the mercantile as well as in the natural world. Business men of twenty-five years ago would scarcely know "where they were at," were they again to step into the arena of active commercial life. Competition is keener, margin of profits smaller, methods more systematic and scientific. But one thing that doubtless would attract their attention is the conglomerate character of the average wholesale grocer's stock.

This peculiarity is the outcome of certain exigencies. Originally the manufacturer of such commodities as starch, soap, woodenware, biscuits, flour, candies and numerous other lines dealt directly with the retailer without the aid of any intermediary. Now the opposite obtains. Not only does the wholesale grocer carry all the lines coming strictly under the head of groceries, but to be found in his stock is nearly everything that the general storekeeper in the remotest part of the country needs. There are hams and bacon, brushes and brooms, lard and lardine, dried and evaporated apples, tubs and pails, washboards and mops, beans and peas, flour and feed, root beer, etc. And the list is ever increasing. Where it will end is a query; and he who would undertake to prognosticate would be rash.

It is evident that the old motto, "Keep to your trade," has been turned to the wall, and that henceforth the idea is to be that every merchant shall handle whatever he can get an honest penny out of, whether it come strictly within his particular line or not. Whatever may be one's opinion in regard to the wisdom of such tendency, one thing is evident: it diminishes the cost of doing business, and that, in view of the gradually narrowing of the profit margin, is the desideratum sought. Not only in the grocery trade, but in all trades there is the same increasing tendency to make the wholesaler the medium for the distribution of manufactured goods generally. By this means one traveller is made to do duty for two, thus not only enabling the manufacturer to make more money than he otherwise would, but the consumer is benefitted by getting cheaper goods.

THE NEW METHOD.

Every merchant should realize that letter orders are playing a great part in the mechanism of the dry goods trade of the present day, and what it is doing for the dry goods trade it seems possible for it to do for other mercantile branches. At least the matter is worth considering. Postage is cheap (although it might be cheaper), and people are utilizing this agent to secure their goods on short notice. This tendency to send in letter orders is simply a part of the tendency which is general among the retailers of the day, to make the wholesaler carry the stock. The retailer won't even order in advance from the traveller but waits until he is actually in need and then orders. He seems to reason, as many men do when lunch hour arrives, he says, "I am not hungry, nor will I eat until I am hungry." But the majority of people eat whether they are hungry or not, and often keep this up until their digestive organs make a failure. So with the merchant who buys too much in expectation; he loads, and loads until something falls, and then he wonders why the fall occurred. But the wise merchants will wait as a rule until the demand is almost upon them before they load too heavily; of course, some little variety must be carried at all times, but what is intended to be emphasized here is the tendency to overload in anticipation.

Letter orders until recently were not given much attention by wholesale dry goods men. The idea, that only travellers could sell goods, seemed to have had absolute possession of their brain, and they forgot or tried to forget the use of printers' ink. But during the past five years a change has been effected in this country. Most of the houses now have a special department for letter orders, and special men to look after them. The cost to the wholesaler of samples and postage is small, because the correspondence can be combined to a great extent, e. g., samples are often sent out in every envelope which contains an invoice. The cost of a traveller is enormous when compared with the cost of letter orders. Last year one house in Toronto sold goods to the value of $225,000 by means of letter orders, which was almost as much as was sold by any three of their travellers. The difference in the expense of selling this amount of goods in each of the two different ways can be readily seen.

The old way of handing a letter order for attention to the department in which the goods were to be found worked out some ludicrous results. Suppose there were five departments in the house, and a letter order contained the names of goods from each department, and each department was out of the particular line desired, the buyer would receive five letters, one from each department, telling him of this. This is of course an extreme case. Again, the order was filled by a man in each department, sometimes one clerk, sometimes another, and hence the business was never reduced to a system. But now all this is changed. One man controls all the letter orders, and personally chooses the goods. He becomes acquainted with the different classes of customers, learns their peculiarities and idiosyncrasies, their tastes and their indicated but unexpressed desires. This clerk who manages these letter orders is a man who studies people's characters by their writing and thus learns to know them and their wishes. He is never too busy to fill an order carefully and to send that which will best suit the trade. He understands whether it will be satisfactory to fill an order with "the nearest thing" or not, because he learns by long experience the man with whom he is dealing. He knows whether the customer is a cantankerous crank, or a buyer on whom he can impose.

Most of this trade is done by means of samples. Circulars are sent out by some firms, and in other cases extensive catalogues; but the drive trade is done by means of samples. These, if bulky, are sent out in separate covers; but very often sent out with the regular correspondence. If a special line comes in, samples are sent out to the live buyers, and these live men who use letters for ordering are often offered snaps which the dealer who buys only from a traveller never sees.

The class of people who use this way of getting goods are numerous and varied. The man who lives away from a station is liable to be passed by the best travellers, and he is compelled to use letter orders. Dealers in outlying districts, where travellers visit very seldom, find letter orders a necessity of trade. Dealers who do not care to run into the city for the one or two special lines they want on short notice, use the quick travelling mail-car. All dealers use them to a great extent. The wholesalers in Montreal and Toronto receive orders by letter from the remotest districts of the North-west Territories and British Columbia, as well as from the villages in Prince Edward Island, Newfoundland, and Cape Breton. The letter order department is an invention of this electrical age. Its mechanism and despatch is suited to the exigencies of modern trade, with its quickly moving fashions and freaks. It is a modern method for facilitating communication between buyers and seller and thus enlarging the economic market. Only those who have tested it thoroughly can fully estimate the advantages it possesses.

On account of the smallness of the expense to the wholesaler, it must, if generally adopted, gradually lower the margin of profit which the wholesaler would need. As expenses decrease, the competition among the wholesalers will naturally tend to reduce their margins, without injury to themselves, but with great benefit to the retailer.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"What's new? Nothing, nothing, only that we're going to have a big time at our annual excursion to Niagara Falls, July 19," said a member of the City Travelers' Association. "The Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association is, I understand, going the same day, and I guess that will induce a good many of our merchants here to go over. You can bet the welkin will ring. What'll you have? Nothing? Well, then, good-bye."

• • •

"How's Midland? Booming," said J. H. Devaney, Saturday. "A lot of vessels are coming in there now. There were five Chicago vessels in there last week, all loaded with corn for the east. When the new steamer City of Collingwood called there on her maiden trip she had one thousand people on board."

• • •

"I had a very conscientious customer in Peterboro," said a traveler to me the other day. "He came to the conclusion one day that it was wrong for him to sell tobacco, so he quit. Shortly afterwards he sold out his business and moved to Cobourg, where he again started into business. By this time he had come to the conclusion that it was not wrong to sell tobacco, so he placed an order for a lot. But, would you believe it, the very night of the day that the tobacco arrived burglars broke into his store and stole every blessed pound that he had. I think it is perfectly right that that man should not handle tobacco, don't you?" he added with a laugh.

• • •

"Devaney, of Eby, Blain & Co.'s, is quite a wit," said a friend of mine. "The other day he was at dinner at Bracebridge with a fellow-traveller. His companion ordered beef-steak. When it was served it was cold and covered with grease. The fellow stuck his fork into it, while a look of disgust overspread his features. 'Well, don't you have grave before meat,' remarked Devaney, as he jumped from his chair, narrowly escaping a vigorous kick aimed at him."

* * *

"No, this has not been a good season for the sale of plants taking it all through," said a retail grocer to me who handles a good many. "In the first place the season was backward and not so many were sold. But strange to say, even though the sale has been smaller most of the gardeners are sold out. I visited two or three green-houses to-day and couldn't get a plant in any of them, they either being sold completely out or had orders for all they had in stock. What is the reason? Well last season there were a good many plants carried over. In consequence of this last fall and winter they didn't put so many in, but they seem to have made an under estimate. At any rate plants are scarce this season."

Robert Barron, grocer, Yonge street, who returned a few weeks ago from a visit to England and Scotland was relating the other day to a small group down at McWilliams & Everest's a few of the incidents that had come under his notice while away. "The drunkenness in some parts of Scotland is terrible," I heard him say. "But all the same they seem to wake up next morning without a swelled head. They drink whisky, but its pure and that accounts for it. But talking about whisky reminds me of Canadian whisky in London. When I was there I hunted up three of my old schoolmates; and of course I wanted to show them what kind of whisky we made in Canada. After some enquiries I found a place where they had Canadian club. Do you know what they charged me? Why just one shilling a drink, and all told the bottle didn't go down that much," he explained, holding up his index finger. "I told him that I could get all I wanted in Canada at 2½d. a glass. The bar-tender said he couldn't help that, and said he would sell us a whole bottle for a crown, but of course I didn't want the bottle. All I wanted was to show my friends what Canadian whisky was like."

BYSTANDER.

A PLEASANT AFFAIR.

Pleasant, profitable and promising was the re-union of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association and its friends held Monday night in Oddfellows' hall. It was an informal affair, but was characterized by a continual round of enjoyment. The object was to introduce to the friends of the Association the new rooms and to promote social intercourse between the retail grocers of the city and the city travellers. And successful indeed was the effort.

For the entertainment of the guests a good program had been prepared. It consisted of vocal and instrumental music and readings, and those who contributed to it were J. H. Scott, piano soloist; James Owen, R. M. Corrie, C. Dimmock, S. Hustwitt, soloists; J. H. King, saxophone soloist; Robert Mills, reciter. A quartet composed of C. Dimmock, R. Gorrie, W. H. Adamson, and F. T. Verral contributed some exceedingly well rendered numbers.

Interesting as was the excellent and well-rendered program to all the guests, to one portion of them at least the greater interest was centred in something else. That portion was the city travelers, and the something that absorbed so much of their interest was the debate on this subject: "Resolved, that city travellers are a benefit to the trade." Among the travelers who were present to partake of the association's hospitality, and to watch the proceedings that were to decide their fate, were: S. Hustwitt, R. Maxwell, Ben Dack, J. Owen, Frank Gallow, J. H. King, —. Graham, F. J. Blackburn, John Anderson, James Mortimer, S. G. Martin, C. Dimmock, Charles Shields, and Smythe. They evidently had not much concern about the result, for among the jolliest of the jolly were the city travelers, and their presence contributed much to the success of the evening.

R. A. Donald championed the affirmative. When he said, "I simply place the discussion on the principle, what is good for the whole trade, and not what is good for ourselves alone," he got endorsement from travelers and grocers alike. He did not think it was necessary for a comparison to go back more than a dozen years. He could remember that city travelling was very different then from what it is now, and although they made good profits then, he did not think they were better than to-day. (Hear, hear.)

"I think," he continued amid demonstrative remarks of approval from the travellers, "that we have established a very important point when we say we have saved a good deal of valuable time by means of the city travellers." And then he went on to point out the time that would be lost were the grocers compelled to send clerks down to the wholesale houses to purchase goods.

"I hold that the travellers offer us a greater variety of goods and greater chances for securing bargains," was another point received with favor, particularly by the travellers.

He then dilated upon the traveller as a factor in the discovery of weak merchants. "You have got to test a man continually and keep your eye on his every movement. It would be a poor traveller indeed that would go into a store and sell a big bill of goods to a man and could not see what was going on." Under the old system he claimed this information regarding a man's financial standing could not be so easily gathered.

Next he spoke of the influence of a good traveller in the direction of cleanliness and improved methods of business.

The benefits derived from the travellers in the matter of purchasing tea was referred to, and he held that it was fallacious to think that teas could be bought as well under the present system as under the old. "To-day if you want to buy a line of tea all you have to do is to ask the travellers to leave samples. By this means you can get an independent judgment. It stands to reason that if you have a dozen samples you can get better results than you otherwise would. Compare this with the old system, when you would have a certain tea drawn. I hold that in this particular alone we have sufficient reason for retaining the present system in its entirety." Loudly did the travellers cheer this point, while marks of approval were not wanting from some of the grocers.

Robert Mills led in the attack. He paid a tribute to commercial travellers as a body, and held that while they were a necessity perhaps in the country they were not in the cities. His first point was to the effect that travellers were largely responsible for the shelves of some grocers being overstocked with goods, and it was greeted with "Hear, hear's" from some of his fellow-grocers and laughter by the travellers, while Stephen Hustwitt made a note of it. "All you in the grocery business know that I speak correctly when I say that these men induce you to buy goods largely in excess of your wants. They tell you that there is sure to be a rise or that there is only a little of this or that article left in stock, and that unless you buy now you will not be able to get it at all. I tell you in these days of the telephone and telegraph and rapid railway communication there is no need to buy largely. When you are taking stock you often find goods that you do not need to weigh, simply because they have been there for years and are well-known to you. You remember they were goods you were seduced into buying." (Laughter.)

Other reasons advanced were that travellers acquired a knowledge of a merchant's private business and then gave it away to his competitors; that the traveller tended to keep the wholesaler and retailer apart. "They now know nothing about each other. If you become better acquainted with the wholesalers you could do better with them than with the travellers."

He laid at the door of the travellers the responsibility for much of the competition of to-day, holding that they had induced green men with a few hundred dollars to go into business in order to create customers for themselves. He held that the formation of the combine was in an indirect way also traceable to the travellers. Were there no travellers, he claimed that the retailer would confine his business more to one wholesale house, which would enable him to more easily ascertain when his bills came due and thus save his discounts. It should also be remembered that the salaries of the travellers were in reality paid by the retailers. (Hear, hear.)

By visiting the wholesale houses more frequently, he said, the city retail man would become better acquainted with the goods that were on the market, and a good many bargains could be picked up that now go to the country dealer.

Mr. Mills then turned his attention to some of Mr. Donald's arguments. Referring to that regarding the drawing of teas, he held that the retailer could secure samples from the wholesale house and "draw them better than when we have so many travellers around bothering us."

In closing, he claimed that he had advanced the better arguments, and that, therefore, the decision would go in his favor. Sympathy for the traveller, he jocularly remarked, should not be allowed to interfere with a just decision, "for," said he, "you cannot hurt him. He is like a rubber ball. You squeeze him, but the moment you let go he fills up again—with wind."

Convulsive laughter followed this hit, during which Mr. Mills took his seat.

J. G. Gibson, vice-president of the Association, who presided, turned the gathering into a sort of experience meeting.

"I am not prepared to make any remarks," jocularly said John Butcher, "because I am not well acquainted with the travellers. I would like to hear the opinion of Mr. Scoley, or someone like him. I am only green." (Laughter.) R. Donald—"O, yes, you are very green."

E. K. Scoley—I must certainly say that the experience I have had with the city travellers has been to my advantage. I think Mr. Mills has made some good points, but they are like the Irishman's frying pan—without bottom. (Laughter.)

F. S. Roberts—I think the travellers do not give us much rest. When we have anything particular to do we have a call from a traveller. (Hear, hear.)

John Westren—I think travellers are a necessary evil. If they were to arrange the time better than they do they would be very well in their place. (Hear, hear, and laughter.)

A. R. Williamson—I think Mr. Mills made some very good points, and one was that if the travellers would allow us to go down town and get acquainted with the wholesale men it would be all the better for us. Another good point was in regard to the number of articles to be found on the shelves. In fact, taking it all round, I think Mr. Mills has the best of the argument.

A. G. Booth—I think the travellers are a lot of jolly good fellows. (Laughter.)

W. J. Sykes—I am about the youngest grocer in the room, but I have some goods on my shelves which put me in remembrance of the travellers. (Laughter.) I think the travellers are a necessary evil just as are the newspapers. They help us to push business. (Renewed Laughter.)

President Clarke—Some years ago we debated this question. Then I took the position Mr. Donald has here to-night. Since then I have had more experience, with the result that I believe the travellers are a detriment to the trade. Trade is largely overdone, and I believe the travellers are largely responsible for it.

A. White—With regard to goods on shelves, it must be remembered that there are just as good salesmen down at the wholesale houses and we would be induced to buy too much just as we now sometimes are. (Hear, hear.)

F. W. Johnston (jocularly)—I think they are all a blamed nuisance. (Laughter.)

Mr. Donald was next called upon to sum up. He claimed that overstocking was not so much the fault of the traveller as the desire of the grocer himself to make money by speculation. He also defended the travellers against the charge of revealing the secrets of one merchant to another. Nor did he believe they were responsible for the formation of the combine.

Mr. Mills followed, still maintaining that his contentions regarding increased competition and the formation of the combine were largely the fault of the travellers.

The entertainment committee thought it advisable not to take a vote on the question at issue and it was so decreed.

Short and impromptu speeches were made by these travellers: R. Maxwell, S. Hustwitt, Ben Daek, Francis Gallow, — Graham, James Mortimer. During his remarks Mr. Hustwitt suggested that the grocers fix a certain day in the week for receiving travellers, as was done in some parts of England.

Light refreshments were served during the evening, and there were pipes long and pipes short, and cigars galore. Card tables and checker boards there were in abundance, and when the meeting broke up at 11.45 p.m. everybody voted the reunion a big success, and expressed the hope that it would be repeated—the oftener the better.

THE WAY OF THE GROCER IS HARD.

The following is illustrative of some of the trials that afflict the grocer in this Queen City. The only merit in the story is that it is absolutely true, beyond that it reads as badly as a bit of fiction. If any body doubts its genuineness I can show him the very store.

It was years ago when I made more calls than now, I found myself in a corner store on a side street about 6 p.m. on a summer evening. The usual stream of small boys and girls were wanting something for the evening meal, and the affable young grocer was doing his best to serve all and keep none waiting, and at the same time look pleased and not in a hurry. I, meanwhile, stood first on one foot and then on the other, my native modesty preventing my interrupting trade. First it was "Half a pound of butter and be sure you give it good, and a small loaf, and don't give me bad butter. Mother says the last was horrid. Will you please change it and—, oh, I forgot the book; bother the book anyway," etc. The next was from a small boy with piping monotonous voice. "Gr' me a quart of coal oil," and when he had it in his bottle and had smelt it said: "This aint viginur, a' want a pint o' viginur."

"You asked for coal oil, Johnnie."

"No, a' didn't. Ma'll be mad if a' don't get viginur," and so on for about half an hour.

Seeing a lull in the rush I stepped forward to see if any of my wares were wanted when another customer entered. Immediately the grocer stood at "attention" and gave me no more heed.

This time it was a "lady." She had on a smart frock and appeared to be of the class who dress their parlor somewhat like a fancy goods store, the room being intended evidently not for comfort but rather for show.

She said: "Now I'm not going to give you any trouble. I only want a loaf of bread and I'll just take it with me; no, don't bother Charlie, he has plenty to do without this."

"Yes, what kind of bread would you like?"

"Oh, any kind as long as it's good."

"Yes mam," said Mr. S., and taking some paper began to fold it round a nice-looking large loaf.

"What kind is that you are giving me?"

"This is Tait's bread."

"Is this the only sort you've got?"

"Here is Webb's."

"Gracious," putting her finger into it "it's quite hot. Haint you got any other sort? I hate to give trouble, but he'll be so mad if I don't get it good."

"We have the home made."

"Yes, and as hard as a stone. I don't like yesterday's. Have you the cottage loaves?"

"Yes, ma'm; we have one left."

"It's too much done, if you had a lighter crust it would be nicer."

"Here is a large loaf of Brown's very nice crust, and not hot and not hard, how will that do?"

"Look here, it's not worth while making a fuss about a loaf; some people, Mr. S., are so tiresome that way. I think you might just give me a small cottage loaf and one of these new ones; I'll just take them along."

Looking pleased at the prospect of the trouble being over, Mr. S. wrapped up the loaves, while the lady began to look in her purse. Finally she found that she had no small change and was not going to break a bill for a loaf of bread, "would he please charge it?"

"Certainly. What next?"

"Oh, that's all to-night. I did not mean to get anything when I came out, but just remembered when passing that there was no bread in the house, and 'he'd' be sure to want a lunch about 11 p.m. Eh, would you mind putting them in separate parcels?"

"Not at all." And the parcel was unwrapped by Mr. S. and made into two smaller ones, he meanwhile wearing the looks of both martyr and murderer.

"Would you mind putting another paper on the new loaf, I'd like to keep it warm?"

The new loaf was wrapped in enough paper and string to tie up a blanket. Then the question was asked, "Anything else?"

"No, thank you. But, oh, have you any nice ham? If it was real nice, 'he' likes a bit in the morning."

"Yes, here is some very fine."

"How much is it?"

"Sixteen cents."

"Six-teen cents! Ain't that high?"

"Not for very fine ham like that, and cut too. If you took the whole piece—"

"Oh my goodness, we wouldn't use that much in ever so long. No, I won't mind the hour. I am putting you to too much bother. I may be in one of these days and get a lot of stuff, but you know Mr. S.——when we were over in——street, Mr.——the grocer, used to call, get our order for everything and you know Mr. S.——, he is so nice and obliging, you couldn't go back on him at once so you see, it just takes me all my time to give everybody a little deal and do the decent thing like; oh yes, I knowed I'd forget something, I ain't going right home. I have to call in for a minute to see Mrs. Smith, if you wouldn't mind sending."

"Certainly. Charlie, take this bread over to number 10 right away."

"Oh no, not at once for I'd be out and there'd be no body to take it in."

"Well, we can send it at 7 o'clock, how will that do?"

"I don't think I'll be in then, for I've got to call in at Brown's, could you send it any time?"

"Any time, if it will only suit you. How would 9 o'clock do?"

"Oh my, I'll be upstairs then."

"Well, if you will only say when we'll——"

"Look here, you let Charlie come over about half past eight and if he comes to the side door I would like it better. He can just ring and, if I don't come right away, if he'll only wait a few minutes, I'll be along. Yes, that's all thanks. I do hate to give you any bother." And the only 'lady' who had called that evening sailed off, skirt grasped in left hand with gloves, and purse in the other, and a benevolent smile on her 'culchad' countenance

CANNED GOODS GOSSIP.

It is reported from the Pacific Coast that the price of fresh salmon has been raised to 5½c. per pound through active bidding by Packer Cook, who, to all accounts, is pursuing the aggressive policy threatened at the beginning of the season.

About 2,000 cases of California canned tomatoes, in 2½ pound tins, have been sold here recently at $1.20 per dozen. In all, about 3,000 cases have thus far been attracted from the Pacific Coast by the comparatively high prices ruling in the East.—N. Y. Bulletin.

The majority of canpers of peas have their new pack July peas upon the market. That is to say, the samples are on display, the opening prices have been made, and the work of securing orders is under way. In the latter connections the results thus far have been decidedly variable. Some canners and local representatives state that their sales exceed those made up to the corresponding period last year. Others, by far the majority, relate a different experience. In fact, some are frank enough to state that initial orders are rather disappointing, and the remark may be ventured that if the plain, simple truth was told there would be more general reflection of disappointment. The best results have been with standard goods of attractive quality, on which moderate prices were fixed. Next to that the better class of "seconds" has had the call. Sifted and extra sifted stock seems to have been given the cold shoulder in a certain degree, despite the shortage of the French pack and chances for fine American peas being used to some extent in place of the foreign article later on. The one particular drawback at the present time is the more general tendency on the part of jobbers to contract for only such quantities of goods as they feel safe of having an outlet for in the immediate future. Canners are, in fact, left to take the chances of carrying the bulk of the pack and the uncertainties connected therewith.—N. Y.—Bulletin.

PEDLARS IN LONDON.

A London correspondent writes: "Toronto's loss is London's gain, but certainly not to the grocers. The fruit pedlars who were driven out of Toronto have settled in London. We have a license, but only a few pay it. The Italians especially object to paying the fee. Out of eighteen members in the council four or grocers, but railway and electric matters take up so much of their time that they can't think of everything so trifling as pedlars, although there fruit trade is being ruined, especially in bananas, oranges and lemons."

A CONNOISSEUR ON COFFEE.

A travelled Englishman, in discussing coffee the other day, said that the poorest coffee that he had ever drunk was in New York, and the best was among the French and Belgian peasantry. For his own gratification he had investigated the subject, and found that the sooner the coffee was used after it was parched the better the coffee. Even a very poor quality of the berry, ground and used while it was still warm from the oven, would make surprisingly good coffee to drink. Among the French and Belgian peasantry the coffee is only parched as it is to be used. The housekeeper gets up early in the morning, and with a little cylinder-shaped machine, with a handle to turn and keep the coffee stirred up, and a little brazier with a few live charcoals in it underneath made for this purpose, she sits out in her doorway, and parches her breakfast coffee. She makes drip coffee in a way which is peculiarly native, and which some claim to be superior to any other. The following is the method; Have a saucepan of boiling water, as much as is needed, of course; put in the ground coffee; let it stand on the back of the range to keep hot, but not cook, for ten minutes; then settle it with a dash of cold water. This, it is claimed, preserves all the aroma, and extracts all the strength from the grounds. Never, on any condition, boil the coffee.

BULKING AND MARKING OF INDIAN TEA.

After firing of the tea, the object of which is not to effect change in the leaf, but simply to drive off the moisture, the tea is ready for packing. The boxes are, to a large extent, made in Rangoon, the teak of that district, with facilities for cutting, making it the centre of trade in that line.

Before packing bulking is sometimes done on the estate, the amount of bulking depending on the quantity cured of a similar character, in regard to both make and flavor. Bulking is simply mixing of various lots, where the separate lots are small. Where there is a large estate with many gardens, the sifting of Pekoe from Souchong, of orange Pekoe from Pekoe, would result in more work in boxing, marking, weighing and listing. By mixing the same grade from several gardens a good deal of work is saved, besides which some of the lots might suffer in the curing to such an extent as to lower their market value, but when mixed with other lots of better flavor the whole stock may sell for a fair price. It is the custom to mark the goods so treated "Bulked on estate," so that it is all above board and fair. Many concerns do not bulk their tea, yet we in America get very little Indian tea that has not been so treated. London is the place where bulking is reduced to a science, though a rough one. Tea is there treated to a dump on the floor of an open shed, with as little care as we would treat hay. The bulking is sometimes done by machinery, but much of it is done by hand and even by foot, the packers putting a piece of canvas in the box and tramping it down with their feet. When tea is bulked in London there is no attempt to close the lead of the package, so that we get the tea here, as anyone may notice, with lead torn and battered out of all shape.

All the concerns in both India and Ceylon use a trade brand to distinguish their goods from others, thus L M X B K would mean that it was the property of the Land Mortgage Bank, the K being added for the initial of the local manager of the garden. I would strongly recommend every dealer to purchase a book with a full catalogue of these marks both in India and Ceylon. It may be said that the dealer who knows his business buys the tea and not the marks, and, if the quality suits him, need not care where the tea comes from. So far, good, but a case that came under my notice a few days ago leads to the conclusion that a proper trade mark on a tea package is as necessary as on a flour barrel or on a web of cotton.

Happening into a retail and jobbing concern on Wellington street I found a purchase had been made of what purported to be a Dargeeling tea, but the brand was not put on as the packers in India use it. The name in question being "Selimboug," the name of a garden in India from which has come some very fine tea. In this case the word "Selimboug" was written diagonally across the side of the chest, while the genuine mark is written straight over a triangle with the base uppermost, and within the triangle the letters B. D. C., being the initials of the proprietors of the garden. Now this was without doubt fraud on the purchaser as well as forgery on the growers, because we have the best evidence that the tea was not a Dargeeling at all, because every tea estate has a trade mark. If the tea was a Dargeeling it is fair to presume that the genuine mark would not be removed, so that it was some other sort substituted for the kind wanted—possibly a Ceylon, Assam, or may be a blend of both.

Any person is liable to set some store on a tea bearing a good name, but if they were in possession of an index to all the trade marks then a complete forgery of the entire mark would be necessary to mislead the buyer. This would be awkward for the guilty party, as a conviction would entitle them to a prolonged stay at Kingston at the public charge.

There are few retailers who have not, some time or other, come across a small package of tea in a bag or paper, rammed carelessly down in the top of a chest and usually of a very poor quality, often so poor as to be practically worthless. This is one of the beauties of having tea come through London, where officialdom permits its servants to take out large samples if only the proper weight is maintained. The custom house also have a stupid regulation that if a tare is an ounce over the lb. that the next lb. buyer shall be counted the proper tare, while if the net weight is an ounce short of the lb., then the next below shall be the proper net weight. The result of this is, that the London broker gets nearly 2 lbs. gain in weight over and at the expense of the Indian shipper. When the tea is sold here and a gain in weight appears the general opinion is that the importer gets a special advantage, or that the retailer pays for more tea than he gets; a trial of the tare will soon convince the buyer that he really gets all the tea he pays for; the advantage being wholly with the London dealer.

SOUTH CAROLINA MELON CROP.

Reports from the water melon region of South Carolina are most favorable. They indicate that not only has a large acreage been planted by the farmers this season, but it is stated in addition that the prospects of an unusually large yield of melons this season are good. The major portion of the water melon growing territory of South Carolina lies in Aiken, Barnwell, Hampton and Orangeburg counties. The farmers in that section have always found the cultivation of the crop profitable, and have annually testified their appreciation in the result of their experiments by entering more and more largely into the business. This season's crop will not, of course, be marketed for some weeks yet, but enough is already known to justify the belief that unless something unforeseen and out of the usual run happens the crop will be one of the finest that has been grown in years. The Georgia crop of melons is also said to be very fine this season.—Charleston News and Courier.

NOTORIETY VS. KNOWLEDGE.

Many disbelievers in the fact that "knowledge is power" and that "a man of knowledge increaseth strength," entertain the notion that notoriety and noise lead to success. To talk and be talked about is to them the one aim of life. They scheme for place and for public notice, and push themselves anywhere and everywhere so long as they can be seen and heard. Superficiality, buncombe, cant, hypocrisy, self-assertion and unlimited cheek are their chief characteristics. They do not believe with a noted orator that "greatness is of slow growth"; that mushrooms come up in a night, and so do mush-heads."

The old notion is not entertained that "patient continuance in well doing," steady attention to detail, honesty, hard work, reliability, and a thorough knowledge of all that enters into a man's special calling, are requisites if permanency and a competency are to be gained. The applause of the crowd, the flattery of associates are mistaken as evidences of popularity and success.

This class of men are everywhere, even in the newspaper profession and are occasionally found in the grocery trade. They are like comets, which come suddenly, dazzle by evanescent brilliancy, and disappear. As an example of this we have the cutter, with his glaring store front, bombastic advertising and low prices.

He is always offering the "Greatest Bargains on earth," "Immense stock at a sacrifice," "Below the cost of importation," "A bankrupt stock at slaughter prices." Such dealer cannot comprehend how a reputation for perfect service, strict business methods, courtesy, unobtrusiveness, fair dealing, win customers and invite prosperity. Braggadocio bombast, glitter, show, noise, notoriety, constant posing in public, are the factors looked upon as leading to popularity and success.

The world has a fashion of burying the wrecks of trade and commerce as speedily and effectually as old ocean covers with sand the wrecks along the shore, and so the way marks are infrequent, and men not heeding the past, but regarding all men mortal but themselves, push recklessly ahead along a road which invites success but ends in disaster.—American Grocer.

RE MERCHANTS SELLING OUT.

DEAR GROCER,—Your article in today's issue auent the law being lax in allowing a merchant to sell his stock, pocket the proceeds, and hurry to shake the dust of his late abode from off his feet is among your best. It is just what I have been advocating for some time, and if I was not certain you never heard it from me I would be inclined to think you had fobbed my powder. We have been mouruers at several of these financial funerals, but in some cases have succeeded in tracing the crooks and getting our money. One man in this city sold his business, got the money in his pocket, and then went around among his creditors, and, I think, offered 25 cents on the dollar. Some accepted the offer, but many refused, to their sorrow, for he left shortly afterwards for the land of the screeching eagle, wherè I presume he is in business, laughing at the easy manner in which he was able to get together enough of the needful to allow him to conform to the custom prevailing in the United States of doing business on a cash basis. To use one of your mottoes. "Keeping everlastingly at it brings success," I hope you will not lose sight of it or that you will have cause to think otherwise of your motto.

Yours, etc., H.C.F.

ANOTHER WORD FOR JAVA TEA.

DEAR GROCER,—Permit me to correct a statement made by your correspondent signing himself "D. S. Macorquodale, 35-37 Front street east," in referring to Java tea in his closing remarks on his "Flushings, Picking and Curing of Teas." He admits he has to stray away from his subject, and states that "no retailer will sell Java tea but to his hurt," a statement quite uncalled for. He should never have made such a statement. I know of many retailers in this city who have been and are now selling these teas with much satisfaction, and there are many country dealers who prefer Java tea for their trade, if they can rely upon their wholesale house's good judgment in selecting and supplying them with these teas uniform and regular, than being at the mercy of every Tom, Dick and Harry who may offer India and Ceylon teas without having a particle of knowledge of their peculiarities or qualities and adaptability for blending purposes, and it is very doubtful in many cases if even the salesman can tell a fine Java tea from a Ceylon. I have before me the latest reports of the London tea market, and it shows that Java tea is the only one which has held its own during the last month, it remaining firm, while all other teas had a downward tendency, and some India and Ceylon teas fell far below the expectations. Couple this with the fact that some choice Java teas brought 2s. 3d. per lb., and doesn't it seem ridiculous for some persons to waste their time trying to tell business men which way the cat jumps? The inference which your correspondent supplies in his remarks to those offering those teas to the wholesale trade I must leave for them to deal with, either to refute or admit, just as they feel responsible, and on such usages among (the wholesale trade with your permission, dear GROCER, I may have something to say in a later communication.

Yours, etc.,

STEPHEN HUSTWITT.

THE JAVA TEA TROUBLE.

DEAR GROCER,—In saying in reference to Java teas, that "no retailer will sell them but to his hurt," it appears to have so exercised the mentality of "A Yonge Street Grocer" that he charges me with transgression, because he sells it, has done so for seven or eight years, because it is his highest priced tea, and because his customers comprise some of the best people in the city.

Let us get along amicably. I meant not to offend, and, had I known of this sooner I might have left it out of my correspondence. The die is cast. I cannot unsay what has been said. I can only add, that I believe all that "A Yonge Street Grocer" says about what tea he sells, and the price he gets for it, am pleased to note the moral excellence of his customers, and will look for his advertisement over his own name in THE GROCER or some other reputable paper, that Java tea is the best tea he sells. He is right in his surmise that I have not learned the quality of tea from looking at the plant, but from reading, noting, and tasting. I must close by saying that I have yet to meet a tea broker who would think a cup of Java tea desirable. Yours, etc.,

D. S. MACORQUODALE.

P. S.—In your issue of June 9th "matty" should read "malty," in reference to the liquor of highly fermented teas.—D.S.

Jeweller (to grocer)—"I beg your pardon, but didn't I see you put two or three finger rings and a scarf pin in your pocket?"

Grocer—"Certainly. When you come into my place aren't you always picking up things and putting them in your mouth?"

MAKING MARMALADE.

When the bitter orange from Seville comes into the factory it is unrolled from its paper capsule and carefully inspected to see that it is perfectly sound. It is then put into a box, which finds its way to another department, where the small black spot is removed. If perfectly clean it is dropped into one basket; if dirty, into another, which goes to a new department to be washed. It then comes under the care of a girl whose sole occupation is to cut it in half and drop it in a basket, which is placed before a woman who sits in front of a little wooden cupboard, in which spins, at the rate of 1,500 revolutions a minute, a wooden rose. A large red arm is put out, the half orange is put against the rose, and in a second the pulp and juice have disappeared, and nothing but a clean cap of peel remains in the operator's hand. This is put in a basket with hundreds of others. They are folded in fours, so as to resemble a half-blown india-rubber ball, and thrust into a hopper in another machine, where sharp circular knives spin round and cut them into innumerable rings, which drop into a drawer beneath. While this is going on the pulp and juice have been put into another machine which throws off the pips and pulp and sends the boiled juice into a large vat. The thin slit rings of peel are then steam boiled in tubs, and added with sugar to the syrup, which is wheeled off to the boiling room, and in some seven minutes a ton and a half of marmalade is being emptied by strong arms and big cans into thousands of pots, tumblers, teapots, custard-glasses, butter-dishes, jelly-moulds, and some fifty other fancy forms in which the middle-class housekeeper likes to be served. These are fitted into trays, which are piled on luries and are sent by lift to the next floor, where they are finished—that is to say, have the little brandy-dipped heading put into the neck, the vegetable parchment cover tied round the top, and the labels stuck on.—Grocers' Review.

A West-side grocer, in discussing the department stores selling groceries, according to a New York contemporary, said: "I have made it a rule to meet Macy's prices every time. I find that O'Neil is selling canned goods, the quality of which I can beat for the price any time. I have bought a sample of each kind of these goods so that I can use them for comparison when a customer wants to see the difference in quality. The method adopted at O'Neil's is, to say the least, unfair and misleading. The girls in charge will say: 'Try our canned peas, only 11 cents a can, your grocer charges you 18 cents.' The canned peas are only seconds, and such as any grocer can offer for the money. Any live grocer can fight these department stores and hold his own without much trouble if he will but take the matter in hand determined not to be beaten."

J. W. McCulloch, grocer, of Church street, Toronto, is extending and improving his store. An addition is being put on the back and the store is being refitted with new shelving.

According to the new post-office timetable a mail has been added at Hamilton for Toronto, closing at 10.30 a. m., which the Herald says will be much appreciated by business men.

All law firms in the city of Brandon will close their offices at 1 p.m. on Saturday afternoon during the months of June, July, August, September, and will observe said afternoons as half holidays.

Hugh Wilson, general merchant, of Canington, lost a 11-year-old daughter last week. Diphtheria was the cause of death. Mr. Wilson feels his loss keenly, and a good deal of sympathy is being extended to him.

The city merchants and householders want to have the Dominion Day celebration here on Monday instead of Saturday. They talk of getting up a petition. The difficulty is that it is a statutory holiday and the banks could not close on Monday.

The Wednesday afternoon closing movement among the grocers is doing better than anticipated. Nearly all the grocers in Queen street, both east and west, and in Yonge street, close, but there is yet a good deal of missionary work to be done in the back streets.

Edward Honor, grocer, Port Hope, died suddenly last week. The funeral was a large one. "He was a good living fellow and tried to do all the good he could," was the brief and touching reference made to his memory by a commercial traveller on Saturday.

Suspended in Perkins, Ince & Co.'s sample room is a large and gaily painted Japanese banner. It is a World's Fair souvenir and was issued by Hellegger & Co., of Japan. On the top is shown the tea preparing premises of this firm. In the centre are views of Hiogo Bay and Apekohama Bay, while at the bottom of the banner are shown the Japanese buildings at the World's Fair. A banner is suspended on either side of the banner referred to, representing respectively in fancy needlework the Moon Chop and Sailor Bay Chop Japan teas. The effect is unique and pleasing.

A negro down in Tennessee swallowed a lemon which is alleged to have sprouted and grown to such an extent as to cause the death of the man. This story is yet a long distance behind the nursery rhyme which tells of the plum tree that grew on the nose of an old woman.

A St. John N.B., despatch says: Over thirty thousand dollars worth of mackerel and lobsters have been shipped from Yarmouth to Boston in the last few days. The catch is enormous, and special trips are made by steamers to carry them to the market. In the bay near St. John and in the harbor there are large catches of salmon, shad and gaspereaux.

The Wolfville Fruit Land Improvement Co. has completed the planting of 10,000 fruit trees in their grounds, and great expectations for the success of the venture are held. The company opened its park to the public this week, and very beautiful it looked. The apple trees are just bursting into bloom, and Wolfville presents a scene of beauty not to be excelled outside of the garden of Nova Scotia.—Critic.

The annual statement of the Merchants' Bank of Canada has been issued. The net profits of the year, after payment of interest and charges and deducting appropriations for doubtful debts, amounted to $604,395, as against $530,247 last year. There were carried forward to profit and loss account $13,961, as against $3,733 last year. The profits this year amounted to about 10 1-16 per cent. on the capital.

A new way to dispose of grocery stores met our eyes as we passed along one of the main avenues in Brooklyn. A large placard hung up in the window of a wet grocery establishment called attention to a "Raffle for a Grocery Store; One Dollar a Ticket." The stock in store was valued at $300. This is certainly a novel way of getting rid of stores which cannot find purchasers in the ordinary way—Retail Grocers' Advocate.

Several Montreal druggists have been served with notices from the Department of Inland Revenue calling upon them to pay the cost of analysing for certain samples of tinctures sold by them to the Inspector of Food for the Province, which on examination were found to be adulterated within the meaning of the Adulteration Act. The costs in each case amounts to $12.

A St. John, N.B., despatch says that among the cargo of the steamer Taymouth Castle, for the West Indies, were one hundred barrels of biscuits, two cars of flour, one car of cured meats, some hay, dry and smoked fish, patent medicines, Chinese goods, shingles, onion box shooks, sawdust, etc. The Duart Castle, now at the islands, cannot bring up all the freight that offers.

The most disastrous European panics were those of 1793, on account of the great French war of 1797, because of the Irish rebellion, when the 3 per cents went down to 44; of 1825, when 770 banks failed in Great Britain alone; of 1847, through the American failures; of 1859, from fear of a general war in Europe; of 1866, through over-speculation in limited liability companies and of 1870, at the beginning of the Franco-Prussian war.

The drummer from Chicago was rattling off the merits of his goods in a way which at last caused the good old merchant to look at him doubtfully. "Oh, I'm telling you the straight truth," said the drummer, catching on to the mild insinuation in the old gentleman's face. "It would hurt me to tell a lie." "Yes," responded the old gentleman quietly, "I knew it would. There was a Chicago man to see me yesterday, and he said the same thing, but I noticed that he went right on suffering as long as he stayed here.—Ex.

The first move made by the sugar planters of Louisiana to combat the effect of the agitation in the North and West against the sugar bounty was made last week, when, in response to a call by John T. White, President of the Sugar and Rice Planters' Protective Association, planters from all over the State assembled at New Iberia, La. A motion was adopted that the chair appoint a central committee, composed of one member from each sugar-growing parish of the State, each to be chairman of a parish committee to be chosen by himself, for the purpose of gathering complete statistics as to the amount of machinery, coal, oil, meat, flour, and other products purchased and absolutely necessary in the manufacture of sugar, and that these statistics be embodied in a general report to be presented to Congress at the September session. It was also decided to call an Inter-State sugar growers' convention in Chicago on August 16 next, and that Louisiana send twenty-five delegates. Representative Blanchard made a long speech, promising to do what he could in Congress for the planters.

SPICE FROM JAMAICA.

The Island of Jamaica, according to a contemporary, produces about all the allspice that is used. It is known also as pimento or Jamaica pepper. The tree on which the berries grow is evergreen and the flowers grow in dense clusters; these develop into small green aromatic berries, the size of black pepper. If allowed to ripen they become pulpy and lose some of their pungency. For commercial purposes the berries are gathered when green, carefully dried in the sun, and afterwards packed in bags holding 160 to 180 pounds, and shipped. Pimento trees grow in many parts of tropical America, but nowhere do they thrive as in Jamaica. The trees are never planted by man, and receive no culture worthy of the name. The seeds are dropped by the birds, and the rains and the tropical sun do the rest. Surplus trees are cut down and become walking sticks and umbrella handles.

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKET.

The Dry Goods Review has the following report this week:—During the past few weeks there has been quite an influx of buyers from near-by points to the city, who have been making purchases in a sorting-up way and paying up arrears. The trade consider this latter fact one of the most favorable points of the situation, as it is an indication that some buyers at least feel that they want goods.

Travellers are now returning in detachments for the purpose of getting their lines of fall samples. The various houses expect to get to work on these in the course of a week, by which time they will have wound up their stock-taking.

It is a little too early yet to speak in regard to prospects for fall trade, but reports from some sections are encouraging. It is said that stocks of fall and winter goods in dealers' hands are low, as the long cold winter and unfavorable spring helped to materially reduce them. This is quite possible, but for all that the disposition generally noted is to pursue a conservative policy until the future crop prospects and other conditions can be gauged more definitely.

Remittances have fluctuated from good to bad from week to week. On the whole, however, they are unfavorable, and this is especially the case in the Northwest and Manitoba, where it seems absolutely impossible to get any money out of customers.

The travellers for the various clothing houses here have finished up their work on account of fall orders in Manitoba, the Northwest and the Maritime Provinces. During April and the early portion of May their trip was anything but encouraging, but since that time business pulled up wonderfully, and the average of orders from these three sections is now about on a par with last year's trade. The men are now starting out to work up Ontario and Quebec for clothing orders on fall account.

The tenor of recent advices from primary markets indicate that all imported woollens will be higher in price during the ensuing fall and winter.

Messrs. Gault Bros. & Co. are at present engaged on opening up some of their stock of fall tweeds. Quiet shades promise to be the fashion in this connection for men's wear during the coming fall and winter.

Greene, Sons & Co. have been filling a few orders for their lines of cellular shirts and underwear. Blazers and light flannel jackets have also called for considerable attention on their part.

Mr. White, one of the buyers for Caverhill, Kissock & Co. has left for England to look up and keep posted on the late fall millinery novelties.

Mr. H. Shorey, jr., complains that the payments from British Columbia fail entirely in showing any improvement.

Messrs. Greenshields, Son & Co. have just opened up a line of tweeds which promise to make some handsome tartan and chequered suits this year. The designs are all in quiet shades.

Messrs. J. G. Mackenzie & Co. report an excellent trade in such goods as surahs, bengalines, new tartan surahs and all wool challies.

Mr. McIntyre who buys the dry and fancy goods for Hodgson, Summer & Co. will be back at his old post during this week.

Jas. Johnston & Co. have turned over several large lines of silks, hosiery and muslins during the past few weeks.

According to Mr. Howell, of Brophy, Cains & Co., the aggregate business for the latter part of May and first of June will be much in excess of the entire turnover for the whole month of April and the first half of May.

Jas. Linton & Co. note a satisfactory increase in the demand for silks, hosiery and woollen dress fabrics.

Thouret, Fitzgibbon & Co. report some encouraging orders for general fancy goods and also for their Jammet Freres gloves from west of Toronto.

Wm. Agnew & Co. are opening up some handsome fall lines of cashmeres and fine dress goods.

TORONTO MARKETS.

The two Canadian manufacturers of sewing silks have, owing to the advance in raw material, reduced their discounts to four per cent. Belding, Paul & Co. (Ltd.) give notice that in future they will put up Belding's 50 and 100 yard blacks, in all sizes except A, as follows:—B, C, D, E will be stamped 1 16 oz. in place of 50 yds.; B, C, D, E will be stamped 1/2 oz. in place of 100 yards. Both of these will be sold at list prices same as colors 50 yds. and 100 yd. They say they are forced to this action by the continued advance in silk and the constantly growing demand in Canada for the coarser sizes, which materially enhances the cost of the goods. With this change they reduce the price of this brand, "Belding's Spool Silks," to 50c. per dozen for 50 yards and 1-16 oz.; $1 per dozen for 100 yards and 1/2 oz.

On January 12th of the present year there was an advance in Bengal grey cottons. Prices have dropped to their old level, due no doubt to the lowering in price of raw cotton, and perhaps to the limited demand for these lines. The changes in wholesale prices will be somewhat as follows:

No.	Old Price	New Price
45..	6 1/2	5 1/2
50..	6 1/2	6
60..	7 1/4	6 3/4
70..	7 3/4	7 1/4
A.D	7 3/4	7 1/2
80..	8 1/4	7 3/4

Payments during the past two weeks have been a huge improvement over the previous six weeks. Since the farmers have finished seeding, rural trade has improved and money has come in more freely from the quarter where it was scarcest. From the Maritime Provinces payments have been, comparatively, above the average, showing that the trade there must be in a strong condition.

Failures in all trades for the past month are as follows:—

Fall underwear is coming in already to the wholesalers. Early deliveries of these goods are the best, because when there comes a big rush at the last to fill all orders the goods generally deteriorate in many points. Retailers should consider this important feature of the trade.

On the first of June domestic adamantine pins took a drop, and now the discount is away down, quotations being made as low as 40, 10, 10 and 10 per cent. It seems that the National Pin Co., of Detroit, has been gaining a foothold in the Canadian trade, and are determined to maintain what they have won. The domestic manufacturers resent this, and the consequence is the market is falling, and the manufacturers have given up their profits for the sake of their Irish love of a fight.

The following prices give the approximate values of raw skins on the Toronto market. The quality determines the price to a large extent and hence the distance between the lowest and the highest price is extensive. Dealers here refuse to take very poor skins.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing a special shipment of vests in drill and cashmere. These vests can be retailed at $1.25 to $1.50. These goods are one-third below regular value.

W. R. Brock & Co. have a job line of trouserings just passed into stock. This includes light and medium colors in small line stripes. Samples on application.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have lately secured two special lines of art muslins, choice paterings and colorings, and are offering them at 25 per cent. less than regular value. These deserve inspection.

John Macdonald & Co. have a job line of top shirts. Quantity limited. These can be retailed at 50 cents. Also, 500 dozen job four-in-hand ties, to retail at 10 cents. Both lines are extra value.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are offering some plums in Verona cords, challies, prints, satens, and other summer goods. They also show a nice range of new cretons, art furniture cloths, and muslins.

John Macdonald & Co. have a line of 28-inch satin checked apron muslins which they are offering at 20 per cent. less than regular prices. These are fine quality goods. A new line of 30-inch art silks in new fancy colors and designs at specially low prices. These are handsome goods.

Job Victoria lawns have always been a special feature of Gordon, Mackay & Co.'s muslin department, and they are this season offering better value than ever. The last shipment of 2,500 pieces is attracting the attention of close buyers.

The travellers for A. A. Allan & Co. are still on the road taking sorting and fall orders, except in the Northwest and in the Maritime Provinces, where their travellers have finished. They report a satisfactory season's trade.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling are showing an excellent range of athletic jerseys, made of both cotton and worsted yarns, in solid colors, including navy, royal, cardinal, white and black; also 1-inch stripes of various popular combinations, all of which are made in both long and half-sleeves.

The demand for black chantilly flouncings (which were revived last year) has this season considerably increased, and during the summer they promise to be as popular as of old. A very extensive range of patterns is shown by Gordon, Mackay & Co.

W. R. Brock & Co. have received their initial shipments of grey navy and military flannels. Their travellers are now taking orders for these goods, and these are now being filled in order. During the wool season there is always a considerable demand for these goods.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have just opened out another choice lot of cotton neckwear, in derbys, bows and puffs, of muslin material, in pin spots, hair-line stripes and other neat patterns; also plain white pique in fine and eavy cords. Their assortment of these goods is very attractive.

In Gordon, Mackay & Co.'s haberdashery department a very handsome embroidery silk cabinet has recently been placed which is so constructed that when open customers are greatly facilitated in their selection of colors, as they are enabled to see at a glance the whole extensive range. This trade has grown to great proportions with G. M. & Co. owing partly no doubt to a new feature entitling customers to counter case with first purchase of a certain quantity.

HIS LAST MATCH.

The way was long, the wind was cold,
The traveller's buggy onward rolled;
The traveller on his lonely ride
Thought it high time a pipe was tried.

The pipe was filled, on jogged the mare
Regardless of her driver's care,
For he can to his sorrow find
One only match of unknown kind.

With anxious care he strikes the match,
With joy he sees the sulphur catch;
The glow grows bright, the flame appears,
And soon in smoke he calms his fears.

The way was long, the wind was cold,
The smoke in fragrant clouds outrolled;
The traveller spoke: "Whoa! mare, go steady!
"I'll bet that match was made by Eddy."

WRITE FOR PRICES.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, June 15, 1893.
GROCERIES.

Practically all the interest that there has been in the market the past week has been centered around sugar. Twice since our last review have the refiners advanced prices 1-16c. a pound, and the market here is fractionally higher in consequence, prices being firm at $5\frac{1}{2}$ to $5\frac{5}{8}$ c. for granulated, while $\frac{4}{8}$ c. is the lowest priced yellows with most houses. The demand, although a little better probably than a week ago, is still lighter than is usual at this season. Otherwise prices would be probably higher than they are at the moment. The general trade, as regards volume, continues unsatisfactory, but travellers' orders exhibit some slight improvement. There are no large lots moving in any one line, merchants pursuing the same conservative hand to mouth policy that has characterised them for some time. Wholesalers seem about reconciled to this state of things, now seemingly expecting nothing else. Canned goods are not attracting much attention, and no material change has taken place during the week either as regards prices or business. There has been nothing eventful in coffee, and dried fruits remain much as before. New season's Japan teas are now in stock and there is a little movement in these, but the tea market continues as quiet as ever.

COFFEE.

Demand for coffee continues limited, just a bag or two moving here and there, principally Rios. Outside markets have ruled steady. Prices are unchanged. We quote: Rio, $19\frac{1}{2}$ to $21\frac{1}{2}$ c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c. Mocha 26 to 27c.

DRIED FRUIT.

Nothing materially new has developed in this market during the week. Valencia raisins if anything are occupying a stronger position. The New York market is almost bare, and holders here expect to make a good profit before the new crop arrives. The idea for off-stalk is still 4 to $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. a pound for seconds, $5\frac{1}{4}$ to 6c. for fine; layers, ordinary selects, $6\frac{3}{4}$ c.; fancy selects, 7 to $7\frac{1}{2}$ c. according to quality. The market is steady on currants and prices are unchanged, 6 to $6\frac{1}{4}$ c. being the ruling prices for good and $5\frac{1}{2}$ to 6c. for ordinary fruit. Prunes are in limited demand at $7\frac{1}{2}$ to 9c. in cases. Dates remain dull and unchanged at 5 to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. a pound.

RICE AND SPICES.

There is the usual seasonable demand for rice at prices ranging from \$3.65 to $3\frac{3}{4}$ c.

Quiet and unchanged is the spice market. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c.; pure white pepper at 20 to 28c., and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

What the sugar market lacks in the matter of actual business it makes up, in part at least, in the attention it is receiving regarding prices. On three occasions since the last week's review have been prices advanced 1-16c. a pound, and another fractional gain would not cause as much of surprise. In New York on Tuesday granulated advanced 1-16c., and raws of 96 test sold there at $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. Granulated is now held here firm at $5\frac{1}{2}$ to $5\frac{5}{8}$ c. A dark yellow can be got as low as $4\frac{3}{8}$ c., but for ordinary yellows $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. is the idea. There is a little better business doing in sugars, but demand is not yet up to former years, or anything like it.

Willett & Gray, New York, in their Weekly Statistical say: Raws unchanged. Refined advanced $\frac{1}{8}$ c. Receipts, 41,536 tons. Meltings, 30,000 tons. Total stock in four ports, 91,200 tons, against 79,763 tons last week, and 150,774 tons last year. By cable: Stock in Havana and Matanzas, 142,000 tons, against 140,000 tons last week, and 180,924 tons last year. Total stock in all the principal countries, 1,133,089 tons, against 1,468,179 tons at the same dates last year. Afloats to the United States from all countries estimated, 50,000 tons, against 60,000 tons last year.

RAWS—The situation is entirely in the hands of speculators, and those located in Europe are now apparently waiting for America to catch up to their parity and then make a further advance. There seems to be some kind of a system or tacit understanding between the speculators here and in Cuba and Europe to press their advantage to the utmost before the inevitable final collapse comes. They are stimulating each other with strong cables as to their views, and selling nothing but storing everything, 20,000 tons having gone into store this week in the United States, which could probably all have been sold at $\frac{1}{8}$ c. advance over last sales. After storing there will be nothing gained in selling at $\frac{1}{8}$ c. over last sales, and so many cables giving storing instructions place 5c. on the sugars as the objective point for centrifugals. This is a phenomenal year for sugars, in relation to supply and demand, but still more phenomenal in the speculative grip now on all the markets of the world, and unless something unexpected happens the course of prices will prove more phenomenal yet. Refiners are disposed to fight the advance to the best of their ability, but it is growing more evident every day that they will be unable to save consumers from a very considerable advance from the present quotations before the next crops are available to relieve the situation. A check can now be made on the estimates of the Cuba crop, and the figures at hand this week showing the visible production to date make it necessary to advance our figures to 786,000 tons. Of course the present prices will stimulate the saving and selling of every ton possible to be made, even after the crop is virtually finished. It is plain that production of refined cannot increase while the supplies of raw sugar are held with an iron hand, and not parted with even to the extent of half the weekly requirements except at an advance of $\frac{1}{4}$ c. per lb. between sales.

Refined—A small advance of 1-16c. was made early this week, followed by a second advance of 1-16c., which seems almost absurd, in view of the situation of the raw sugar market as already given; $\frac{1}{4}$ c. per lb. would have been much more appropriate to the situation, and such an advance cannot be much longer delayed. It is also within the possibilities of the coming months that orders for refined will be cut down by refiners pro rata, to a reduced production. Under such contingencies we cannot recommend too strongly the carrying of as large stocks as practicable.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Both syrups and molasses are dull and unchanged, the idea for the latter being 28 to 35c. and for the former 2 to $3\frac{1}{4}$ c. per lb.

NUTS.

Market quiet and unchanged. We quote Brazil nuts 11 to $11\frac{1}{2}$ c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; unshelled, 16 to 17c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to $12\frac{1}{2}$ c. for green; cocoa nuts, \$5 to \$5.50 per sack.

TEAS.

New seasons Japans are in stock and there is the usual movement in half-chest lots that characterizes the opening of the trade here in new Japan teas; high grades sell at 38 to 40c. and nothing of the new crop can be obtained lower than 28c. Generally speaking the demand for tea is light. No large orders are coming in, the buying being of a hand to mouth character, although in the bulk showing fairly well. We quote Japans (old)—Low grade and common, 13 to 14c. Medium $17\frac{1}{2}$ to 19c.; fine to finest, 28 to 35c. Blacks—Low grades congous, $14\frac{1}{2}$ to $16\frac{1}{2}$ c.; medium, 18 to 23c.; fine, 30 to 45c.; fancy 60 to 70c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

While there is not the same sharp downward tendency in the butter market as at time of last review prices are not by any means steady, and are compared with a week ago fractionally lower. Receipts of both dairy and creamery continue liberal and in excess of demand. Packing operations are now going on and no large dairy rolls are coming in in consequence, but tubs and pound prints are plentiful. We quote dairy tubs at 13 to 14c. and pound prints at 14 to 15c. Creamery butter is rather neglected, owing to the low price of dairy butter. Values are about 2c. per lb. lower, 19 to 20c. being quoted for tubs and 19 to 21c. for lb. prints.

In cheese the feeling is weaker and prices lower. As is usual at this season there is some anxiety to get rid of the May make, it not being possessed of good keeping qualities. The jobbing price is $\frac{1}{4}$ c. lower at 9 $\frac{3}{4}$ to 10c. It is likely that the production will be large this year.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Demand fair for the season. Jobbers are paying $1.30 to $1.35 and selling at $1.35 to $1.45.

DELHI CANNING CO.

MARKETS—Continued.

DRIED APPLES—Inactive; a few small lots are going out at $4\frac{1}{2}$ to $4\frac{3}{4}$ c., and jobbers would not pay more than 4c.

EVAPORATED APPLES—Stocks are light and prices steady at 9c. No lots are being offered to jobbers, but they would pay $7\frac{1}{2}$ to 8c.

EGGS—There is at the moment a little scarcity and prices are steady at $11\frac{1}{2}$ to 12c. Eggs are still being pickled, and more are being put down than it was expected there would be.

HONEY—Dull, at 7 to 8c. for extracted white and 5c. for dark.

POULTRY—Spring chickens are wanted, according to size, at 60 to 90c., and spring ducks would fetch the same price.

POTATOES—The market is a little easier, car lots selling on track at 90 to 95c.; bags are selling out of store at $1.05 to $1.10.

ONIONS—There is no change, Egyptians selling at $2.50 to $2.75 per bag and Bermudas at $2.50 per crate.

HOPS—Quiet and unsettled, at 15 to 16c. for Canadian and 16 to 17 for British Columbians.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The warm weather has naturally affected the market for dressed hogs, and while there is not much doing prices are higher at $7.50 to $7.75. Sales of smoked meats are a little freer, but no large lots are moving. Demand for lard is good. Prices remain without material change.

BACON—Long clear, $10\frac{1}{2}$ to 11c. Smoked backs $12\frac{1}{2}$ c., bellies, $13\frac{1}{2}$ to 14c. rolls $10\frac{1}{2}$ to $10\frac{3}{4}$ c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to $13\frac{1}{2}$ c. for smoked.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13c. in tubs, $13\frac{1}{4}$ c. in pails and $12\frac{3}{4}$ c. in tierces. Compound 10 to $10\frac{1}{2}$ c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $21, Canadian short cut $22.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are $4\frac{1}{4}$ to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c., hindquarters 6 to $8\frac{1}{2}$ c., veal 8 to $7\frac{1}{2}$ c., lamb $8\frac{1}{2}$ to 9 $\frac{1}{2}$ c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade is brisk and what change there has been is in the direction of higher prices. Oranges are coming in with a good deal of waste, and owing to this, together with a good demand, prices are 25 to 50c. higher. Lemons are beginning to move more freely as the weather gets warmer, but there is no change in prices. The ordinary Cuba pineapples are about out of the market, and the sugar loaf, which sells at 16 to 17c., is taking its place. There is an improved demand for bananas and prices are steady. Strawberries are a little higher, costing more in Baltimore. Strawberries of Canadian growth will probably be on the market early next week. Demand is brisker for apples and prices are 50 to 75c. per barrel higher. The market is taking all at the advance. We quote:

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

No particularly new features have developed during the week. Business is fair and prices unchanged. In regard to tomatoes the situation is much about the same as a week ago. The lowest price is 80c., but some holders say that as it is but a matter of a very few weeks before the new pack will be on the market they are not going to refuse an order if a little shading will secure it. There does not however seem to be many who are as anxious as this to sell, as stocks, although they may be larger than anticipated, are not by any means heavy. Some of the cheap lines of both tomatoes and peas that were held on this market are nearly cleaned out. A fair trade is doing in peas at from 80 to 90c. Corn is scarce, firm and in good demand at from 85c. up. Peaches remain much as before at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and $3.25 to $3.75 for 3's. Plumbs are in fair demand and unchanged at $1.45 to $1.55. Apples scarce and in demand at 85c. to $1 for 3's and $2 to $2.25 for gallons. There is a good business doing in canned salmon at unchanged prices, the better grades selling at $1.50 to $1.55 for talls and $1.70 to $1.80 for flats. A fair trade is being done in lobsters $1.90 to $2.10 for talls and $2.50 to $2.70 for flats.

Oranges—Messinas, \$4 to \$4.25 per box for 200's, \$3.75 to \$4.00 per box for 160's, \$2.25 to \$2.50 for 80's and \$2.25 for 100's, \$2.50 for bloods, half box; lemons, \$3 to \$4.50; bananas, \$1.25 to \$2; pineapples, extras, 17c., No. 1 15c., No. 2 $12\frac{1}{2}$ c., No. 3 10c.; California apricots, 20c. per lb. 25-lb. boxes; apples, \$2.00 to \$2.50 for ordinary stock and \$3.00 to \$4.00 for choice to fancy; strawberries, 13 to 16c.; tomatoes \$2.25 to \$2.50 per crate; peas, \$1.75 per basket; cucumbers, \$3 per basket; beans, \$2.75 per crate; cabbage, \$2.50 to \$2.75 per crate.

MAPLE PRODUCTS.

There is no special feature to note, and prices remain as before. We quote syrup at 75 to 80c. per wine gallon in tall tins and 70 to 75c. per wine gallon in flat tins. Maple sugar is unchanged at 8 to 10c.

FISH.

Trade is light this week. Lake Erie herrings are coming in plentifully and they sell at \$2 per 100. Dealers are also getting quite a few Lake Ontario white fish, which are in fair demand at 8 to 10c. per pound. Fresh sea salmon is lower. We quote:—Fresh sea salmon, 15c.; skinned and boned codfish, $6\frac{1}{2}$ c.; Labrador herring, \$3 per half bbl.; shore herring, \$2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to $12\frac{1}{2}$ c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; pike, 5 to 6c.; ciscoes, \$1.35 per 100; perch, \$2 to \$3 per 100 as to size; blue back herring, \$2 to \$3 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c.

a lb.; shad, $3 a dozen; halibut, 15c. a lb.; salmon trout and white fish, 7 to 7½c.; eels, 8 to 10c. a lb.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—No change, carlots selling as before at 5¼c. for good selects.

SKINS—Calfskins dull; jobbers are paying 8c. as before, but there are no sales. Season is about over for wool skins, only an occasional one coming in. A good many lamb skins are offering and price is unchanged at 30c.

TALLOW—Supply and demand light and prices steady; dealers are paying 5½c. for rendered and selling at 6c.

WOOL—There is a good deal coming in on the street, for which 17 to 18c is being paid for good selections of washed merchantable wool; 10 to 11c. is paid for unwashed and 13 to 14c. for rejections.

PETROLEUM.

The Petrolia Advertiser, in its weekly report, says: "The backwardness of the season, the tariff agitation and the unsettled influences upon commercial affairs pertaining to petroleum are given as reasons for the continued dullness. On the whole, however, the tone of the market is maintained on a steady basis." Petrolia crude is quoted at $1.07 per barrel in tanks or $1.10 delivered.

On the Toronto market business continues quiet and unchanged in burning oils and fairly good in lubricating oils. We quote: Canada refined oil, 13 to 13½c.; carbon safety, 17½ to 18c.; Canada water white, 19c.; American water white, 21 to 22c.; photogene, 25c.

MARKET NOTES.

A good grocery business, well situated, is offered for sale by Eli Hutchings, of Carleton Place.

Smith & Keighley report large sales of new season's pack of salmon to arrive.

Eby, Blain & Co. this week received their first arrival of choicest May picking Japan tea. This tea is stronger in body than it has been for some seasons.

Davidson & Hay are in receipt of a shipment of Arguimbau off-stalk Valencia raisins which they are selling at 4½c. a pound.

Eby, Blain & Co. are in receipt of some exceedingly high grade Ceylon teas, for which they have had enquiries lately. The grade is said to be higher than is usually brought to this market.

Davidson & Hay have their new shipment of Japan tea in stock.

J. W. Lang & Co. received orders this week from Hamilton, at full prices, for horse-shoe salmon.

Dawson & Co. received a car of strawberries Saturday containing 145 cases and another on Monday containing 130 cases. These are believed to be the two largest carloads of strawberries ever brought into this market from the States. The average number of cases to a car is about 110.

D. Gunn, Flavell & Co. have received a number of answers to their circulars sent out regarding the buying and packing of butter, "which indicates," said a member of the firm, "that there is a large make of dairy butter this spring."

Lipton, the English packet ten man is making arrangements to push his trade in Canada.

The new May picked Japan teas, "Mikado chop," offered by W. H. Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, are very fine in the cup and attractive in appearance.

People are now getting on to the fact that selected fruit is best to handle, instead of cheap trashy stuff, James Turner & Co. report a fine trade in Vostizza and selected Valencias.

Retailers requiring tomatoes should refer to W. H. Gillard & Co.'s advertisement. The price they are quoting for limited quantities is much below the market.

Hillwattee is now a household word in many sections of Ontario. The grocer has no trouble to sell this reliable brand of blended tea. The agents, Lucas, Steele & Bristol of Hamilton, will mail samples on application.

Steel, Hayter & Co., growers and importers of Indian teas, report the arrival of large consignments of Indian Pekoe Souchongs. These teas come direct from their gardens in India. They are unopened in London and are in fine condition. The prices range from 18 to 20c.

Epps & Co., the well-known English cocoa manufacturers, in a letter to C. E. Colson, of Montreal, their special agent for the Dominion, say: "We are pleased to notice that up to date your orders are largely in excess of last year."

Gillard & Co. are in receipt of Morton's fresh herrings and preserved bloaters. These lines are delicious summer-goods and the demand is increasing amongst consumers.

The old reliable Stowers' lime juice and cordial is again to the fore with the hot weather. Lucas, Steele & Bristol have just received a consignment. This firm offer another pure lime juice, also put up one dozen pints in cases to sell at $2. It makes a handy 25c. bottle.

The firm name of "The Cowan Cocoa and Chocolate Co. (Ltd.)," has been changed to "The Cowan Co. (Ltd.)," for the sake of brevity. Owing to their increasing trade they have found it necessary to obtain larger premises, Nos. 468, 470, 472 and 474 King street west, which are being enlarged and refitted, and to which they remove about 1st July.

Canned haddies of the well-known "Thistle" brand are now in the market, the first shipment of new pack having arrived this week. The packers of these fish always seem to be alive, and the "Thistle" brand has won a reputation that it well deserves. Twelve years ago the first shipment to this market of these fish was made to Eby, Blain & Co., and this firm have never ceased to keep them. Mr. Robert Austin, who is the manager of the "Thistle" Canning Company and a man of great experience, succeeded his father many years ago, and has well kept up the reputation that had been earned for all haddies packed under the name of "Thistle."

A. Sneath & Son, general merchants, Penetanguishene, have sold out to Ross & Rourke. Mr. Ross was formerly bookkeeper and store manager of the New Keene Lumber Co. and Mr. Rourke was head pusher in the grocery department of W. M. Thompson. W. W. Sneath leaves for California about July 15. "We would say when retiring from business," write the firm, "that we consider your paper the paper of Canada."

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, June 15, 1893.
GROCERIES.

The grocery market is quiet on the whole, and nothing new has arisen during the week except in the case of sugar, which has given an example of further firmness. This product seems as though it was never going to stop its upward march. On Thursday last one of the refiners here gave notification of an advance in price, and finally on Saturday the advanced quotations recorded below were established by the refiners, who state that even at the higher basis they will only take moderate orders and refuse to look ahead to any large extent. In other branches the movement has been of a fairish character, the warm weather increasing the overturn in some respects, but there are no special features to note. Tea is quiet, with buyers holding off more or less, while the situation of syrups is unchanged. In Barbados molasses, despite all predictions to the contrary on the part of interested people, prices are down at the Islands to a 12c. basis. Dried fruit has shown a somewhat better enquiry, rice is steady and canned goods do not furnish anything new in addition to the phases of the situation in regard to salmon and tomatoes, on which we have already dwelt specially.

SUGAR.

The sugar market holds very strong and since our last there has been an advance of a fraction or so in the prices both of yellows and granulated. In our last we referred to an advance in New York and said that one was anticipated here and it has been fulfilled. In addition to this firmness, it is just now the season when the demand commences to make itself felt on preserving account, and everyone is looking therefore for a strong and more active sugar market. Refiners however will only operate very cautiously in the matter of accepting orders. On Thursday they advanced prices to 5 5-16 to 5 5-8c. on granulated and 4 5-16 to 4 5-8c. on yellows, and finally on Saturday they marked them up still higher, their quotations now standing 4 5-16 to 5c. for yellows and 5 5-8c. for granulated. Advances on raw give no indication of any easier influence and it would not be surprising to some if even higher prices were to result.

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

The flour market is dull and weak, with prices lower. Oatmeal is firmer and millfeed is lower.

FLOUR.—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.20 to $4.25; strong bakers' $3.75 to $3.90; white wheat patents, $3.50 to $3.90; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.20, low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25; Ontario family $3.15 to $3.40.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.05 to $4.25; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.80 to $3.90; Ontario patents, $3.50 to $3.60; straight roller, $2.85 to $3.10; extra, $2.65 to $2.70; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25.

MEAL—Oatmeal is $4.10. to $4.30 Cornmeal is $3.25 to $3.50.

FEED—Bran (ton lots) $13.00, do (on track) $11.50 to $12.00, shorts (ton lots) $15, ditto (on track) $12.50 to $13; mixed feed $20 to $22, feeding corn 57 to 58c., oats 38c. on track.

HAY—Baled timothy is not much wanted owing to freer street receipts. We quote $10 to $10.50. There have been sales for export equal to these prices.

STRAW—Demand poor and prices unchanged at $5.50 to $6.

MONTREAL.

The flour market furnishes no very interesting feature, and some demand is noted on export account and cables are somewhat better, but the local market is as quiet as ever and the demand unsatisfactory. The call is largely for cheap grades and outside lots. We quote:—Winter wheat, $3.90 to $4.10; Manitoba patents, best brands, $4.20 to $4.30; straight rollers, $3.40 to $3.55; extra, $3 to $3.15; superfine, $2.60 to $2.90; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.65 to $3.80; Manitoba strong bakers', best brands $3.90 to $3.95.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

The demand for breadstuffs is not up to what it should be. Stocks are heavy and prices unchanged, as dealers claim that to lower quotations would be selling below cost. Manitoba is selling at $5 to $5.15, Ontario high grade $4.15 to $4.25, medium patents $4 to $4.10.

Oatmeal—Firm at advance with indications for higher prices; $4.40 to $4.50 is present rates for selling.

Cornmeal—No change in values; $2.70 to $2.75 is the idea.

has moved at 2 to 2½c. and American at 18 to 20½c per gallon.

Despite the strenuous efforts of the combine and those holding large lots of molasses to discredit the fact of the 12c. figure at the Islands, it has been repeated here this week for Barbadoes molasses. Still the combine holds its price steady here at 33 to 34c., but there is no strong inclination to go into any further investments at present. It is claimed also that business, as we have noted previously, has been done in outside lots for less money, and the statement was repeated this week and there is good ground for believing it to be true.

TEA.

The tea market is decidedly quiet, buyers preferring to wait until the new crop is arriving more freely before placing orders for any round quantities. There have been some stock of 1892 left over, but there is no anxiety about it. Sales of round lots of Japan are noted at the following:—Low grades, 13 to 14c.; medium to good, 15 to 18c.; fine, 19 to 21½c.; finest, 23 to 31c.

COFFEES, ETC.

Coffee remains much the same with nothing special to note this week.

Spices continue firm and unchanged also.

RICE.

There is a good steady movement in rice at unchanged prices. We quote: Ordinary $3 85 to $4. Japans $4 to $4 50, Patnas and Carolinas $4.50 to $5.50.

DRIED FRUIT.

There has been a better enquiry for dried fruit during the week, and further round lots of Valencias have been moved at 3½c. for good common and 4c. for better grade off-stalk raisins, while some choice parcels have fetched 5c. Layers are firm at 6c. Currents remain dull and easy at 5 to 6c. as to package.

GREEN FRUIT.

There has been a good saleable demand for green fruit during the week, the warm weather having an appreciable effect, especially on the call for oranges and lemons. Oranges in half boxes have been selling at $1.75 to $2 and in boxes at $2.75 to $3.50. Lemons moved with quite a degree of freedom at $3 to $4 per case. Pineapples have ruled plentiful but steady at 4 to 12c. as to size. There are more bananas than the demand can accommodate, and we quote prices easy at 50 to 75c. and $1 per bunch according to quality.

APPLES.

Apples have furnished some jobbing sale during the week on the basis of $2 to $3 25 per bbl. according to quality.

BEANS.

Beans rule steady, single lots of Western hand picked moving during the week at $1.60 to $1.65. Ordinary grades are a slower sale at $1.25 to $1.50 and inferior $1.50 to $1.10.

HONEY.

There is no change in honey which rules quiet and featureless. Comb stock sold at 9 to 13c. and extracted 6 to 8c. during the week.

HOPS.

The same dullness prevails and in the absence of business prices are more or less nominal. We quote choice 17 to 18c., poorer qualities 14 to 16c. and old hops 8 to 10c.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market is quiet, with prices much the same. The following are the quotations: Canadian short cut, per brl., $21 to $22; mess pork, Western, new, per brl., $22 50 to $23; hams, city cured, per lb. 12½ to 13¼c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 12 to 12½c.; bacon, per lb., 11½ to 12½c.; lard, common refined, per lb., 10 to 10½c.

EGGS.

Receipts of eggs continue heavy, but there is no change in prices, which remain at 11 to 11½c, single cases of candled stock fetching 12c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The cheese market was soft in tone as expected, and the decline intimated probable has been practically established. There was not much business to note; good round orders for Ontario white could be filled at 9c. if buyers were willing to pay that figure, but they generally stipulate for the concession of a fraction on that figure. At the wharf this week 3,344 boxes were offered, mostly white, and they were all sold at 8¾c. Some 2,000 which came in by rail also went for the same figure. We repeat the quotations which we marked last week, with the stipulation that it is more a question of the inside than the outside figure. Finest colored, 9¼ to 9¾c.; finest white, 8½ to 9c.; under grades, 8½ to 8¾c.; cable, 48s.

Butter fails to show any particular activity. There has been dealing in small parcels of creamery—25 box lots on the basis of 18½c.—by exporters, and this is an outside price for the article. Other grades are quiet, and we do not hear of anything doing except in a jobbing way on local account. New creamery, 18 to 18½c.; new Townships, 16 to 17c.; western dairy, 14 to 16c.

MONTREAL TRADE NOTES.

The warm weather has led to a somewhat better demand for lemons.

N. Quiatal & Fils still offer their low priced line of tomatoes to the trade.

Bananas are a perfect glut here, and sales at 50c. and under in some cases are reported.

Further large orders of canned salmon have been booked here at inside figures at the coast.

L. Chaput, Fils & Cie. are offering Greenbank's lyes and concentrated soda, etc., this week.

Further low offers of molasses at the Islands are reported, 12c. now being recognized despite persistent attempts to discredit it.

Some round lots of 1892 Japau teas have been moved during the week. There is still quite a stock remaining, but holders manifest no anxiety.

C. Alfred Chouillou, the agent for Menier's Chocolate, has been pushing the article freely this spring and summer, and says the sales are encouraging.

Stewart, Munn & Co. have been receiving quite a lot of supplies of their various descriptions of Newfoundland sea food during the past week or so.

Four cargoes of Barbadoes arrived here this week, and, as we have noted before, still more are on the way. The market begins to feel the influence of the load.

Lightbound, Ralston & Co. offer their new specialty, Schweitzer's Cocotaine, for which they are the sole Canadian agents, in nice handy sized tins to the trade.

With sugar on the up move housewives are beginning to get anxious about their preserving. Buyers show more disposition to order, therefore, but refiners are very cautious.

We understand that Messrs. Frank Magor & Co., 16 St. John street, Montreal, are handling the well-known jams and jellies of Messrs. Chas. Southwell & Co., London, Eng. The high quality of these should make them quick sellers, and Messrs. Magor & Co. are preparing for a good season's business.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

ST. JOHN, N.B., June 15, 1893.

Business is only fair. The markets are steady in all lines.

Flour is in only moderate demand. Sugars show very little life. Provisions are more enquired after at regular prices.

Sugars—Market still very dull, though prices are strong and likely to advance. We quote: Granulated, 5¼ to 5¾c.; extra C, 4½ to 4¾c.; yellows, 4¼ to 4½c.

Molasses—Barbadoes is quoted at 32 to 33c.; Antigua, 30 to 31c., with small enquiry.

PERSONAL MENTION.

E. B. Nixon, Winnipeg, buyer for the Hudson Bay Co., was in Toronto and Montreal last week on a special trip.

James Playfair, lumber dealer and general merchant, Sturgeon Bay, intends going to the World's Fair in a unique way. He will board his private yacht at Sturgeon Bay and sail right through to Chicago. He expects it will take about four weeks to reach the White City.

F. J. Gillespie, merchant and deputy-reeve of Uptergrove, was in Whitby last week attending the County Council.

J. D. Arguimbau of Denia, was in Toronto last week on his way to the World's Fair. He says prospects indicate a Valencia raisin crop much about the same as last year as far as quantity is concerned but that the quality will of course depend on the weather experienced between now and the scalding period.

Early Sunday morning burglars entered the store of Charles A. Wenino, grocer, Sarnia, by a coal hatch, and got into the furnace room, and prying open the door leading up to the store. They secured about $12 in silver. No clue as yet.

Sheriff's Bailiff Stewart, of Hamilton, Tuesday arrested James Mitchell on a capias issued at the instance of The Tuckett & Son Company. Mitchell, who used to keep a grocery store at the corner of King and Queen streets, Hamilton, sold out on Friday last to Fred Dodman. In the affidavit, on which the capias was issued, it is alleged that Mitchell made away with his property to defraud his creditors. He owes the Tuckett company $137.

THE PRUNE SITUATION.

Contrary to all expectations entertained by the trade last fall, the stock of prunes has continued ample to this time, and there is every reason to believe that the quantity remaining will prove sufficient to meet the wants of consumers until the several new crops can be placed upon the market from the various producing sections. The Turkish and Bohemian crops last year were considerably less than the average of those sections, and the yield of the French orchards also showed a deficiency, while in our own country the crop of California fell off fully fifty per cent in comparison with that obtained in '91. When it became evident that the several crops were likely to prove short, growers' ideas suddenly became inflated, and the trade were confronted with extreme views for deliveries when the goods became available for shipment. Buyers were at first inclined to caution, but as the season progressed and the prospects failed to improve, importers exhibited more disposition to consider offerings of the several foreign crops, and operations were carried on upon a more liberal scale in the growing sections of the Pacific Coast. With several months of a moderately active demand the fruit rapidly changed from the hands of growers to speculators and the trade, thus throwing the responsibility upon the two latter classes of finding sale for the goods and at remunerative prices. During the progress of transferring the several crops to second hands, prices were urged constantly forward, the demand being stimulated by "ringing the changes" on the short supply that would soon become manifest in the markets of the world. To load up at high prices is a very easy matter, but to get out with a profit upon the venture is an entirely different affair. When the big prune deal was engineered several years ago, the syndicate figured out to their own satisfaction the exact amount of each individual's consumption. They had it planned that the total quantity was "so much" that prices would be raised by gradual stages until 10 cents per lb. would become the price for Turkish, after which time the market would take care of itself. The thought of checking the consumption was not seriously entertained, but the pool found in the end that had they made some calculation upon this point they would have been saved considerable capital. Prunes to-day are considerably above the normal value, and as such has been the case since last fall, and even beyond that time, the demand from the "bone and sinew" of the country has been lessened materially, the fruit being no longer included among the food staples of the poorer classes. It is all very well to talk of educating the tastes of the masses up to a higher grade of goods, but when the pocket does not permit of indulging in the improved quality at a higher cost, naturally the consumption receives a check. Going back previous to the prune syndicate period, 31-2 to 4c. was quite common as a value for cash prunes from Bosnia and Servia, or what are generally known as Turkish. At that time the ordinary grocer purchased a cask or a barrel and made the price of four or five pounds for a quarter. Then it was that the fruit was within the reach of the lower classes, and naturally the sale was heavy to all sections. Cask fruit in those days was of a much better standard than the fruit of to-day in similar packages. During the past three or four years the industry of grading and boxing has steadily increased, and only the very smallest sizes are now to be found in the weighty casks, whereas formerly the fruit as cured was packed regardless of size in this one style of package. As sorting the fruit has assisted in raising the standard of the goods coming from the Bosnia and Servia districts, and it has also served to raise the value; but on the other hand the lowering of the standard of the fruit in casks has not served to lower the price for that style of packing, but, on the contrary, the prices obtained are considerably higher than under the old system. The full prices of the past two years may, however, be attributed to the unfavorable crop results, and also to an increased European demand. Reports from Europe the past season have indicated an unusually heavy sale for not only the Turkish and Bohemian, but also the French, and though prices to-day are regarded as full, there are no offers making from primary sources for shipment hither, the quantities remaining there being so small that the holders regard their stocks as barely sufficient to piece out the season among their own consumers. The stock of Turkish in this market is considerably less than the quantity usually held at this season of the year, but the limited demand experienced during the past three months and the lack of spirit to the enquiry to-day have led to a weak and unsettled feeling, with ruling values showing a constant loss to those who are carrying the goods. Regarding our California product, the stock held here is extremely small, the Western markets have no surplus, and from all accounts no large quantities are held upon the coast; but in the face of this statistical position buyers have had the advantage for some time past, and the values quoted as acceptable to-day show a heavy loss to the holders. Latest reports from the Pacific are of a very favorable character regarding next crop. The trees are weighted with fruit, and after making liberal allowances for droppings, reliable authorities count upon a yield fully as great as that gathered in '91, or say a quantity approaching 22,000,000 to 24,000,000 lbs. of dried fruit.—N. Y. Bulletin.

WHOLESALE AS AUTOMATONS.

The following article, by Jacob Furth, president of the Associated Wholesale Grocers, St. Louis, recently appeared in The Interstate Grocer :

It is a sad but uncontrovertible fact that the profits of the wholesale grocer are smaller than the profits of any other jobber. The gross profits of the average wholesale grocer of to-day do not reach in percentage what it costs the dry goods, clothing, boot and shoe, millinery, or other jobber to do his business. The grocer does more work in poorer quarters, takes greater risks, and must economize more than the jobber in any other line of business; why is it then that he does not get that remuneration for his services that is freely and willingly accorded to other jobbers? Why is it that he cannot get a fair percentage of profit on his sales? And why is it that he is not allowed to enjoy those comforts and pleasures that others enjoy who are engaged in other lines? There seems to be an unwritten law, respected and executed to a remarkable degree, that the grocer must sell a portion of his goods at or below cost, another large portion on a basis of profit not at all in keeping with what it costs to do his business, and that the balance must be sold on a percentage of profit which the closest staples bring in many other lines. Why is this so? And what causes have led to this peculiar and unfortunate state of affairs?

This question is now puzzling the brightest minds in the profession, and how to improve the condition of affairs is certainly a matter of vital interest to all, and deserving of their closest scrutiny and best intellectual power. Let us bring out, if possible, the causes which have led to this; let us interchange opinions, and see whether or not an improvement can be brought about, and the grocers' lines be thereby made to fall into more pleasant places.

I think that among the many causes that have contributed to bring about the present condition of affairs, the sale the distribution of "popular goods" and "popular brands" should be examined into, and considered as worthy of our attention. It has been my experience, and I think my brother grocers have shared this experience with me, that less money is being made, and can possibly be made, on the so-called popular brands of goods than on any others in the line.

As a matter of fact, everybody knows the cost and selling prices of these "popular goods," and as they virtually sell themselves, we must not wonder when the majority of our salesmen make their first and grandest efforts on these goods. Has it ever occurred to the thinking salesman and the intelligent employer that every case and every car of these "popular brands" that goes into and out of the house strengthens the hold that these goods have on the trade, and furnish the manufacturer and packer with greater power and more opportunity to dictate to the jobber?

There is not a new salesman who does not make it his business to prove to the buyer that he is the veritable Cheap John: that he is the apostle of low prices; that he is the poor man's (retailer's) friend, and there is no better way for him to prove his sincerity than by naming prices on "popular goods" and cutting their very life out. The question of quality don't come into consideration; his Star tobacco is as good as the other man's; his Eagle milk is as good as the next man's; his Baker's chocolate, his Royal baking powder, his Arbuckle's coffees are all genuine, and if he is lower than his competitor no further questions are asked, he sells the goods.

The number of salesmen being large and on the increase, each being desirous of convincing the buyer on some one article, it can readily be seen that our entire list is worked in its length and breadth, and that the demoralization incidental to such methods must ultimately attack the very vitals of the business and bring wreck and ruin where prosperity and happiness should prevail. Where is the house that will dare cry, "Hold, enough?" In our business I have for years made it a point to avoid as much as possible the handling of goods over which I could exercise no control; whereof I was the slave and subject to being dictated to by everybody everywhere. I claim that much of the popularity of the most popular goods is due to the efforts of the jobber (quality of course considered) and as the jobber in his ramifications and through his own efforts pushes these goods, puts them on the shelves of the retailer, scatters them in every nook and corner of the land, makes the packer rich, he, the jobber, should be entitled to recognition for these services, and should receive at the hands of the manufacturer such treatment and such protection as his services entitle him to. But is not the opposite the case? Do we not find that with success comes arrogance, with arrogance the big head, and instead of assisting the jobber in his efforts to get a living profit for handling the goods, a legitimate return for his services and outlay, he receives at the hands of the detactor treatment not in keeping with his deserts. While the manufacturer is amassing colossal fortunes the jobber is laying awake at night breaking his head over the difficult problem of making a living for himself and family.

Not alone to jobbers is the sale of "popular goods" an important factor, but the retail grocer is subject to the same annoyance, is forced to bear the same sacrifice of profit as the jobber. What the poor salesman and the cutting jobber accomplishes in the one case, the Cheap John corner grocer does in the other; what the retailer deals out to the jobber the intelligent consumer gives to the retailer.

Is it policy for the jobber to help make this tyranny more unbearable and is it in accordance with good sense and judgment to continue handling goods that pay no profit and which he must sell at the most ridiculous price if such be put on it by second-class salesmen or Cheap John employers? First-class salesmen and first-class merchants do not need to live and thrive on the reputation of the packers. They sell goods on their merits.

What chance or opportunity is there to improve on goods if jobbers will continue to handle one and the same thing regardless of any improvements made by packers who happen to begin business a little later? Must we continue to handle goods because forsooth our fathers or grandfathers handled these same brands before us? What does the average retailer or consumer know or care for the packer? It is the jobber who stands the brunt of the battle; he it is who stands in the breach when anything does wrong, and the jobber therefore, as much as the packer, is justly entitled to a remuneration for the successful introduction of the goods, and for important and valuable services faithfully rendered. I am not going to single out goods because of any ill-feeling I have against them or against the manufacturers thereof, but I am going to illustrate my proposition by taking from our price list some "popular goods," and showing the profit we get for handling them. The question might arise why do we sell goods on such a margin of profit? The answer is simple, because someone else has set the pace for me and I could not ask any responsible dealer to pay me more for goods than the same goods can be bought for from other houses. That is what I mean by saying that I have no control over the goods, and that I am at the mercy of everyone who handles them, be he responsible or irresponsible, be he a first-class salesman of a first-class house, or a scallawag.

To illustrate: Eagle milk is sold in this market on a profit of 10 cents per case or less than 2 per cent. Arbuckle coffee and other package coffees are sold on a profit of 50 cents per case, or about 2 per cent. Royal baking powder is sold either at cost or with a profit of about 1 per cent. Lea & Perrins' sauce either sells at cost or with a profit of 5 cents per dozen. Cross & Blackwell pickles bring about 10 cents per dozen, not counting breakage, or a profit of about 3 per cent. Baker's chocolate sells with a profit of 1-2 to 1 per cent., which nets from 1 to 2 per cent. Popular brands of canned goods such as Moun-tail corn, sell in this market at a profit of 5 cents per case, including cartage all over this large city. Bullhead oysters sell here usually to retailers at about Baltimore prices. Star tobacco and many other plug tobaccos bring a profit of 1 cent per pound, unless the manufacturers see fit to make a charity distribution once in a while of another cent.

I could increase this list very largely, but I do not wish to be understood as singling out items, for I have no enemies to punish and no friends to advertise, but this I think will be sufficient to warrant the assertion that after a careful selection and culling it will be found that 75 per cent. in volume of the grocery business goes out of every jobbing house with a smaller percentage of profit than it costs to do business.

Where then is the chance for the jobber to make any money out of his business, unless through gambling he makes money on advances? If what I have here depicted is true, have we as grocers the moral courage to stand for a system of reform and progress, or shall we wait until the inevitable comes and carries down to ruin the work of our lives, and engulfs in its wreck the happiness not only of ourselves but of those that are tied to us by the strongest bonds of blood and friendship?

I know that there is more thought being given to the grocery business at this time than has ever been the case before in the history of our times, and I sincerely wish some might give expression to their opinions, and bring out one by one the weak spots in the body of our business, and thus, by publicly discussing its objectionable features, bring about that improvement in business which always follows a rational discussion among intelligent men. Let us have experience meetings in the columns of the trade papers; let us be honest with each other, and give to the public the benefit of our experience and observations, and let us remember that unless we do this and get at the root of evils, the time may come when a cure will be impossible. With the immortal Milton, I say to my brother grocers: "Awake, arise, or be forever fallen."

HANDLING THE PINEAPPLE.

The pineapple is even more difficult to handle in transit than the banana, and any bunching, packing or flattening in loading will result in a loss of fully one-third of the cargo. At times, if the weather is extremely warm, fully one-third of the vessel's load is found in a soft or decaying condition when it arrives here, and, through the sweating and rotting of the fruit, much that is not actually decayed, and might have proved marketable, is spoiled by contact with the other. When the schooner is made fast to her dock, and the usual formula of signing papers by the parties to whom the fruit is consigned is carried out, the hatches are removed, and experienced pickers, or sorters, and counters, are stationed at the hatchways to receive, sort, count, and deliver to the purchasing parties such quantities that may be called for on orders received.

There is a man who sits beside the counters, and his duty is to score all counts and render a total to the consignee. As fast as the baskets filled with pines are handed over the guard of the hatchway, the sorters grasp them, and, discarding any fruit spotted or rotting, count in pairs until their baskets are filled, or they have reached fifty, when "tab" is called, and the scorer marks 100 upon his slip. When out-of-town orders are being filled, the "pines" are carried rapidly to a row of cars upon a float near at hand, and after "excelsior" has been spread upon their floors the cars are loaded with fruit designed for shipment. Arabs and commission merchants, or order men, come to the vessel and buy such lots as they may desire.—Baltimore American.

SOME POINTS ABOUT COFFEE.

In view of the extremely conservative lines upon which jobbers' purchases of nearly everything in the grocery trade have been conducted of late, and the general aversion to carrying operations beyond limits not justified by well defined wants, upon reference to back records, that, annoying as it may be in respects, the conservatism is not only without redeeming feature, but possessed of some results leading to hope that, when the pressure of financial depression shall have been lifted, the strong features of the market will come more boldly to the front as a factor in shaping the course of values. The contrast in experience with goods that are in unenviable statistical positions, and those that have not has been conspicuous during the past sixty days. As also, where the statistical position was strong values have advanced more or less in the face of extremely conservative buying, as illustrated in the instance of a few lines of canned food products. On the other hand there has been more or less depression in goods that were not as strongly situated statistically or lacked speculative support. Upon the failure of a prominent French speculator in coffees, prices broke sharply, No. 7 selling at as low as 14c. from first hands. Since then there has been a gradual advance to about 17c., and a reasonable inference is that the reaction was due to confidence in advices tending to show that, while speculators may have been indiscreet in the matter of timing their operations, and inconvenienced by the reserve of jobbers, the relation of supply and demand, free from speculative manipulation, has brought about a change and raised values to a point that which the speculative fraternity could reach by their particular methods. The result is not difficult to explain. The speculators wanted too much in a short time, and burdened themselves with a heavier load than they could carry. Naturally liquidation came about in due time, and the inevitable collapse in values occurred. At the lower level a great deal of coffee passed into distributors' hands, and quickly moved into the final channels of distribution. Of itself that was a strong feature, and, in connection with the falling off in visible supply, did much to restore values. But there is another support to the market in the shape of unfavorable prospects for the coming crop. This may be summed up in a repetition of former reports of adverse weather conditions in Brazil and other sources of supply that naturally tend to shorten the yield, and the indolence of recently emancipated slaves who have fallen into the rut of taking three days' leisure out of every week greatly retards the harvesting of the crop. Latest popular estimates are that the coming Brazil crop will be 1,000,000 bags short of that of last season; that Java will fall about 750,000 packages behind also, and that, allowing for a falling off in consumption due to high price, a shortage of 750,000 bags or more will have to be contended against ultimately.—N. Y. Bulletin.

FOOD PRICES IN EUROPEAN CITIES.

A commercial return has just been issued showing the average retail price per pound avoirdupois of various articles of domestic consumption, medium qualities, in some of the principal cities of Europe during the year. The cities selected are: Paris, Lille, Berlin, Frankfurt-on-the-Main, Hamburg, Vienna, Buda-Pesth, Prague, Rome, Florence and Brussels. The prices of prime beef varied very much. In Prague it could be obtained for 7d. a pound, in Vienna for 8d., in Rome and Buda-Pesth for 8 1-2d., while in Paris the price fluctuated between 1s. and 1s. 4d., and in Lille as much as 1s. 5 3-8d. had to be paid. Flour ranged from 11-10d. in Buda-Pesth to 21-2d. in Paris, Frankfurt and Florence. It is curious to notice that, while in Lille flour can be purchased for 21-4d. a pound and white household bread cost 13-4d. in Berlin, this was exactly reversed, bread costing 21-4d. and flour being 1-2d. cheaper. Potatoes were under 1d. a pound in all the cities except Hamburg. Rice ranged from 13-4d. (in Brussels) to 5d.; sugar "good white lump, cracked or sawed," from 33-4d. to 71-2d. (in Rome and Florence), and coffee (Brazil or plantation, roasted and ground, without chicory or other coffee substitute), from 1s. 4 3-4d. in Berlin to 2s. 6d. (fresh roasted) in Paris. In Brussels coffee from the Dutch colonies can be obtained for 1s. 23-8d. a pound.—London Times.

IDLE RICE FIELDS IN THE SOUTH.

The principal cause of the abandonment of so much rice land in South Carolina is, according to the Boston Herald, the lack of capital, due to heavy losses sustained during the late war. They were left without working capital and the means to employ labor, and freshets had broken the dikes and filled up the canals and ditches, so that it would have required a considerable outlay of money to have put the rice plantations in their former condition. There is no lack of the best rice lands in the State, with good water facilities which can be purchased for merely a nominal sum. Another reason why so much of the rice land has been abandoned is the scarcity and inefficiency of the negro labor, the good labor having been drawn away by other industries which afford better pay. There is every opportunity for the introduction of improved machinery, which would do away with much of the inefficient labor in the building up and repairing of dikes, canals, etc., and machinery could also be used in the preparation of the land and the cultivation and harvesting of the crop. It is not unusual to find plantations of 10,000 acres, with perhaps half of this amount of land available for rice culture, in a narrow strip along the river front from a half mile to a mile in width, and it is quite possible for anyone starting in with sufficient capital to secure the finest rice lands at a very low price, and by the introduction of improved methods, and especially by the introduction of improved machinery, to be largely independent of the scarcity and inefficiency of the labor. The cultivation of rice is a very expensive undertaking, and as a rule it can be carried on as much more economically on a large scale than on a small one, and probably for the production of no other purely agricultural crop are capital and strict business methods so necessary as for the production of rice by the method of water culture, of which there is an abundant supply, which comes down laden with the most fertile portions of the soil of the up country. The Herald is of opinion that here is a fine field for the employment of dormant northern capital, which, if rightly applied, would bring in large returns.

MAKING A RAISE.

There's a certain business man in Chicago who is as cranky as he can well be, and is at the same time very careless in his business affairs. But he is very rich, and has a big establishment, and not an employee likes him. About a year ago one of his clerks, getting $1,000 a year, approached him on the subject of an increase of salary. The old man got hot in a minute.

"How much are you getting now?" he asked.

The clerk was about to tell when a happy thought struck him.

"Two thousand a year," he replied firmly.

"Um um," he said, "you are a good clerk, and I'll see what can be done for you."

Then he dismissed the clerk and called in the manager.

"Make Jones' salary $1,800 a year," he said.

The manager was about to offer an explanation.

"Do as I tell you," said the old man. "I'll teach the young upstart to come in here dictating to me how much money to pay my people."

By this time the manager had comprehended the situation, and he forthwith put Jones on the $1,800 list, and six months later, when the old man found how he had been worked, he called Jones in, and told him he would restore him to the $2,000 list, and Jones was shrewd enough to take the twinkle in the old man's eye in good faith and say nothing.

'DEM WATERMELONS.

The watermelon season is rapidly approaching, and advices from growing sections report a large crop of fine quality, which is nearly ready to market. The first car load received last year came in June 11th from Florida, and the following day a carload arrived from Georgia, and by the first of July 285 car loads had been received. The first car load arrivals for the three previous years came in between June 10th and 15th, but this season the fruit seems to be more advanced, and receivers are looking for a car or two this week. A despatch from Jacksonville was received last week stating that the first car of watermelons to leave the State this season had been shipped by B. R. Price from Grand Island, Flo., to Cincinnati. A good many melons are received here from Florida, but the bulk of the supply comes from Georgia and South Carolina, and later in the season large quantities are received from New Jersey. The production of Southern melons is decreasing, as the transportation companies charge such high rates that they are practically driving many growers out of the business, and hundreds of farmers have turned their attention to early vegetables and truck instead of melons. There is still a large production, however, especially in Georgia, the acreage last year being placed at 28,540 acres. Of this crop the growers are reported to have realized $489,000, and the transportation companies $1,000,000. The Florida and Georgia crops both come in together, and as the Georgia product is usually of better quality than the Florida melons, they have a strong preference with buyers, and command higher prices, resulting in smaller profits for Florida shippers who send to this market, and when Jersey commence to arrive freely more Southerly stock has to be stopped or turned in other directions except fancy large Georgia, which are able to hold their own against the smaller Jersey melons. The first arrivals from Jersey usually appear about the middle of August. The receipts last year from the time first Southern arrived until September 1st, when the season was about over, were 1,832 car loads, against 2,247 car loads the previous year, and 1,826 car loads in 1890. A car will average one thousand melons. When the melons run large seven or eight hundred fill a car, but when small as many as thirteen or fourteen hundred arrive in a car. When the season is at its height as many as forty or fifty cars arrive a day, and one day last season (July 23rd), the receipts were seventy-two car loads. The arrivals so far this season have been confined to small lots, received in barrels or large crates, and receivers have peddled them out at from 75c. to $1.25 each, or occasionally $1.50 for a large ripe melon. The first car load lots which are received sell usually from $25 to $35 per 100, but as a rule when the season first opens the fruit is too green to be of much actual value for consumptive purposes.—N. Y. Bulletin.

The trade prospects of the country are good. Fairly good crops are assured and a large yield of fruits, particularly the smaller varieties, is almost beyond peradventure. From the foundation to the ridge the trade superstructure is in at least fairly good condition, and taken on the whole, probably as good as in any other country. In some respects it is better. There are its weak spots no doubt. To maintain anything else would be absurd, for they are apparent to every one. But as long as no heavy strains are put upon it there is no danger. And at the moment no sensible man is inclined to play loose. On the contrary business is being done on a conservative basis. In fact more so than probably ever before. And it is well that it should be. All around us—in the United States, in Australia, in Great Britain—depression is heavy, failures many and, as a consequence, stringency rules in the money market. The worst feature of the situation here is the matter of payments, although it is doubtful whether they are much slower than is usual at this time of the year. Farmers have not as a rule much money in the early summer months, and as long as the circulation is slow at the fountain head it cannot be expected to be active anywhere else. All that is wanted is confidence, patience to wait and the exercise of energy to hasten along the "better times a-coming."

The trade and commerce of the world are passing through a marked evolutionary period. Modern methods are cheapening production and modern inventions are making oceans rivers, and continents narrow tracts of land. As a consequence competition is becoming keener and profits smaller. Never probably in the history of the world was it more a case of the survival of the fittest. In the manufacturing, in the mercantile and in the financial world the tendency is towards concentration; manufacturers are amalgamating their interests, the wholesale trade is gradually falling into fewer hands, retailers are building mammoth stores where they sell everything from a needle to an anchor and from food for the stomach to clothing for the back. The merchants who to-day find themselves being outstripped in the race by these class of competitors may just as well come to the conclusion that they must conform to their ways or get out of business. If they do not it is only probably a matter of time before they will be compelled to accept the latter alternative. It is folly trying to row a race in a tub against a competitor equipped with a modern-made boat. In these days merchants must get out and hustle. They need to buy cautiously, give credit sparingly, advertise judiciously and stick to business eternally.

Want of courage is the cause of many bad debts. Every merchant should make an effort to get at least a rough idea of the capability of every one of his credit customers to pay. Then he should place a limit on each one. But the great difficulty is to say "No" when that limit has been reached. Competition is so keen and the desire to retain custom so strong that most merchants are afraid that by refusing further credit they will lose a customer and their competitor gain one. If the thing is done in a courteous manner it is seldom that a customer is lost. And he who would take umbrage at being politely told that his account has reached the limit which the merchant can afford to allow it to run is well worth losing. In fact if he did not go then he would probably later on, leaving an extensive account unpaid. A merchant never ought to be afraid to ask for his own or to refuse to give away what he already possesses. Too often the ambition to do a big business runs away with the common sense, and the desideratum is obtained at the expense of the profits. It is better to do a small business with good profits than a large one with little or no profits. Another mistake is often made in credit being granted to strangers. Credit should be given to no one regarding whom nothing is known. The credit system is risky enough at the best without any unnecessary danger being run. Anyhow it is a pretty old stager that would ask credit from a merchant with whom he has had previously no dealing, and nine times to one it is better to be without than with the custom of such an one. The merchant who quietly and firmly says "No" when his judgment tells him it is the better way may not have so many customers for a while as his more careless competitor, but he will make more money and will be in business when the other fellows is forced out. If more noes were said in business than there are less clamoring for amendments to the law regarding the collection of accounts would be heard and far fewer failures would be chronicled.

repeated. To continue in business without being insured is neither just to the merchant himself nor to his creditors. The amount a business man shall carry on his stock should be determined by circumstances. Sixty per cent. of the value of the stock is urged by some wholesale men, but of course the merchant who has plenty of capital and is not much concerned about himself need not bother about carrying that proportion so long as he has enough to liquidate his liabilities; but the credit of such an one would be enhanced were it known that he was fairly well insured. For the merchant whose circumstances are merely ordinary to be lax in this respect, it is little short of criminal. He knows that if fire consumed his stock he would have little or nothing wherewith to pay his creditors, let alone to resume business with. And yet either through procrastination or hope that fire will never encroach upon his premises, he fails to protect himself not at all or only to a very small extent. If the truth was known, procrastination is the chief cause of so many finding themselves without a risk on their stock and buildings when fire has licked up their effects and left them, often penniless, on the world. Our advice is, insure your stock, insure it to at least 60 per cent. of its value, and insure it to-day.

* * *

THE GROCER has had occasion more than once to point out the strength of the currant market and the possibility of further appreciation of values owing to the damage to the crop in Greece by earthquakes and the peronosperos. How well these predictions were founded is demonstrated by cable advices just received by P. L. Mason & Co. from London. These in effect say that large orders have forced up the market and that there is a good consumptive demand owing to the reported serious damage to the new crop. They furthermore state that prospects for the crop are poor and that damage to it is worse than supposed at first.

Many schemes have been suggested for easing the stringency on the New York money market, but the latest and the one which seems to find most favor is that not only advanced but put into practice by the clearing house of that city, namely the issuing of clearing house certificates. The object is to increase the stock of money available for loans and to tide the country over till the Sherman law shall be repealed, when it is expected confidence will again be restored. The Philadelphia clearing house has also followed the example of the New York association. The issuing of these certificates is receiving the endorsement of the Comptroller of the Currency, the banks, and financial men generally throughout the country, and as a result confidence is being restored. Whether it will have the effect of averting the financial crisis that nearly everyone has been predicting, remains to be seen. At any rate the movement is tending to alleviate the panicky feeling, which is after all an important step in the desired direction. An idea of how gold has been flowing out of the United States may be gathered from the fact that during the twelve months ending May the exports of the precious metal were $123,095,453, an excess of $102,436,728 over the amount imported, compared with $48,888,224 exported and $49,488,334 imported during the same period the year before.

BUSINESS MEN AS LEGISLATORS.

We have not a sufficient number of business men in our halls of legislation. There is no doubt about it; and the fruits of it are seen in so many laws that are detrimental to the business interests of the country and in so few that are beneficial to these interests. In the Dominion Parliament, out of a total membership of 215, purely business men—that is merchants—do not number one-fourth. Too often the good that these might do is minimized by their being divided into rival political camps in which they usually remain when questions of commercial interest are being weighed, and when independent action might be expected of them. In the Ontario Legislature the comparison of business men is more favorable, out of a membership of over ninety, about one-third are business men, but among this proportion are included lumbermen, millmen, miners, etc., so, after all, it is doubtful whether the interests of the merchants of the province are looked after any better in the Ontario Legislature than are those of the country at large in the Dominion Parliament. Certainly the obnoxious Pharmacy bill was given its quietus, but even in that instance the results might have been different were it not that a hue and cry was raised against the bill all over the province.

What is wanted in our legislatures is more business and less politics. At present the opposite obtains. Nine-tenths or more of the time of every session is taken up in discussing questions which, resolved down to a fine point, is merely the "outs" trying to get the "ins" out and the latter trying to keep in. Politics and partyism there have been and politics and partyism there always will be as long as men do not think and feel alike. And after all we do not know but that it is best that it should be so. A strong opposition is as essential to good government as is a strong administration. But the trouble comes in when every interest is made subservient to partyism. And just as long as our representatives are men whose profession is politics, and whose ambition is the advancement of the cause of their respective parties, just so long will the debates so seldom touch upon business matters, or shall we find so rarely enacted measures in furtherance of the trade and commerce of the country or province.

The duty of business men in the premises is to try and elect to the Dominion Parliament and Provincial legislatures men who have been successful as merchants. It is not necessary that a business man's party should be formed. In fact that could scarcely be accomplished if attempted; and even if such were possible it would hardly be advisable. Class legislation is not to be recommended any more than is legislation in behalf of any religious sect. Nor is it necessary that merchants should forsake their respective parties or that they should take less interest in the party caucus, in order to secure the desideratum. On the contrary, as far at least as the party caucus is concerned, it is desirable that they should take a more active interest, for there it is, we conceive, that they can do the most good by either proposing or supporting as the standard-bearers of their respective parties the desired class of men. Already in the Province of Ontario party candidates are being nominated for the next general election. A good many have already been selected, but there are still constituencies where one or both of the parties have not yet nominated their champions; and the merchants in these constituencies should not lose a moment in getting to work, for if they will it so it is yet possible to give a much better business complexion to the next legislature. At any rate they can be "getting their hand in" for the Federal elections. And what applies to Ontario applies to a more or less extent to the other provinces.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

By substituting a "v" for a "c" the compositor last week spoilt J. H. Devaney's little joke. When his companion stuck his fork into his cold grease-covered steak and held it up for Mr. Devaney's inspection what the latter did say was: "Well, don't you have grace (not grave) before meat?" The compositor is now in his grave.

* * *

"It is all nonsense about the crops not being satisfactory," said one of Davidson & Hay's travellers Saturday. "In all my experience I never saw them more promising. Up in Middlesex county a few days ago I saw some heads of wheat shot out, and the quality was excellent. Now there's some news for you! The small fruits," he added as he gently stroked a sample of sugar, "are fine; raspberries, plums, cherries, strawberries, both wild and cultivated, all promising well. All of which," he concluded with a smile, "means a good demand for sugars."

* * *

I met Alex. Taylor, general merchant, Dromore, in Sloan & Crowther's Saturday. He was en route for the Reform convention at Ottawa, so I was informed, but while here he made some extensive purchases, particularly sugar. "Prospects up our way are looking well," he remarked in reply to a query of mine as he took off his spectacles and swung them around in his hand, "and business is going to be good." And then he hurried away to look at some samples and complete his purchases."

* * *

"A friend of mine," said a city traveller, "found himself some time ago loaded up with a lot of bran which he could not sell and which was getting heated in the elevator. To try and effect a sale he offered it below the regular market figure, but still it remained on his hands. Learning the situation, the manager of one of the largest flour and grain firms in the city remarked to him one day: 'Why, man dear, raise the price couple of dollars a ton. She'll go then.' My friend did as he was bid, and, sure enough, she did go, for in a few days he had sold every ton of bran he had in his possession. There's tricks in all trades but ours, isn't there?" he concluded as he stroked his mustache and grasped his grip.

"When I went into the grocery business," said a retailer to me the other day, "I had not much capital, and I determined to save my cash discounts every time, even if by so doing I was only able to do a small business. That rule I have carried out, and what I get from my discounts just about pays rent. Another thing I decided upon was to refuse to give long terms of credit, and this too I have carried out. Of course a fellow sometimes hardly knows what to do. By refusing to give a customer any more credit until he has paid up may mean the losing of the whole account, as well as the customer, and a fellow has to use a little tact now and then, but as a rule I stand firm and I find it pays. Well, the fact of the matter is that if I didn't I wouldn't be in business very long, for not having a big bank account, I could not stand many losses. As it is now, I am doing a nice little business and am making at least a decent living."

BYSTANDER.

JAVA TEA AGAIN.

DEAR GROCER,—It is said that when children of tender years are restless at nights that they are troubled with worms. Now your correspondent, D. S. Macquordale, may not be so troubled, but his wandering remarks and seemingly restlessness of spirit in rebuking and admonishing me to be amicable and not offend, is at least an indication of some disease and before it becomes deadly let me advise him to restrain lest he wanders so far from his subject and should get lost.

I shall not be thought arrogant, I trust, in saying that perhaps I have more respect for my customers' judgment on teas than he appears to have for his! And I am also in business to please my customers and not to abuse them by forcing all of my ideas or whimsical notions down their throats contrary to their wishes, and if I find that my customers prefer to buy Java tea from me than any other tea, I am bound to respect their desires and tastes without prejudice, and I should be worse than an ass to drive them from my store by telling them that Java tea was not fit to drink, because a certain person operating on Front street and styling himself a tea broker said so.

My reasons for not seeking a cheap advertisement in publishing my name and full business address is that my fellow competitors in teas all around me would at once know why some of their customers had left them for tea and were getting better suited elsewhere, they having got tired of using "tarry Moning-Congous, and sour Kangras, and bitter Indian teas of such pronounced characters." They much rather prefer a sweet mellow Java tea, with a little addition of something known to a

AUSTRALIAN FRUIT AT WINNIPEG.

A telegram from Winnipeg says: "The first importation of Australian fruit ever made to this country was received on Saturday. The trip took only 21 days from Sydney to Vancouver, and consequently it reached here in first-class condition. Oranges are of two or three varieties, and resemble very closely the California article, with probably a slightly tougher skin, but decidedly more juicy. Lemons are very acid and will stand comparison with the best imported to Manitoba from the south. The shipment received is only a sample one, which, if it proves satisfactory, will mean that an extensive trade will be opened with the antipodes. The Canadian Pacific Railway Co. have promised that a competitive rate will be given if the trade is extended."

NEW ORLEANS RICE SITUATION.

The rice men in New Orleans are greatly pleased over the action of the Southern Pacific Railroad in granting the reduction asked in the rate to San Francisco. The road has not given as much as was asked, having limited the time to one month and placing the rate at 50 cents per 100 pounds in carload lots of 30,000 pounds or more. This will enable the merchants to place rice on the Pacific Coast at a lower price than Chinese or Japanese rice. These latter now sell in San Francisco for 3½ cents per pound, whereas under the new freight rate Louisiana rice can be laid down at from 2½ to 2¾ cents per pound. Of late the Eastern markets—New York, Boston and others—have been buying their rice from Charleston, and consequently large stocks have been accumulating in New Orleans. This, it is expected, will be rapidly reduced, with the Western market now opened. Strong competition is expected with Hawaiian rice, as brokers in this article have already cut the price to nearly meet the Louisiana product. —Manchester Record.

THE MELON CROPS.

Georgia melons have started north. The first car was shipped from Albany, Ga., to Cincinnati, and they will be going by the train load in a few days to points all along the way from Boston to St. Paul. Melon growers say the crop will be unusually large and that the melons will be of good quality. About 10,000 acres are planted to melons in south-west Georgia alone. An idea of the size of the shipments can be gained when it is stated that the Georgia Central Railroad Company expects to ship 3,000 carloads. The Chicago demand will be very large, and the growers anticipate realizing good prices for the fruit. Reports from the water melon region of South Carolina show that not only is there an unusually large acreage planted in watermelons this season, but the prospects for a very large yield are excellent, the major portion of the watermelon-growing territory of South Carolina lies in Aiken, Barnwell, Hampton and Orangeburg counties. The farmers in that section have always found the cultivation of the crop profitable and have annually entered more largely into the business. This season's crop will not be marketed for some weeks yet, but the railroads are now making preparations for handling it.—Manufacturers' Record.

BULKING, MARKING AND WEIGHTS OF INDIAN TEA.

Owing to some typographical errors and to some haste in writing, allow me to repeat some remarks anent this subject made in the last issue of THE GROCER. A stupid regulation of the English Custom House is to take the lower figure in the gross weight of a chest of tea and the higher figure in the tare. Thus: If a chest shows a gross weight of one hundred and ten pounds, fourteen oz., and the tare is twenty-five pounds, four oz., the tea and tare will be set down as follows:

	Lbs.
One hundred weight and ten pounds...	122
Less tare.....	26

Net pounds of tea..... 96
Making the tea less by the 14 ozs. dropped on the gross, plus the 10 ozs. added to the tare, or in all 1½ lbs. less tea than the chest contains. This is lost to the Indian exporter unless the London importer is also the owner in India, which sometimes is the case, in which instance it will be to his gain in a saving of duty where the tea is entered for consumption in Britain.

This is called in Canada the gain in weight, as the invoice calls for the weight "scribed" on the chest by the Custom House officials of London. Yet it is no gain to the Canadian importer, as the tea is sold so much closer than it otherwise would be, the advantage being transferred to the retailer, who no doubt passes it on to the consumer, the loss being passed through several hands beginning with the Indian shipper and only becoming a gain on the consumption of the tea.

It might be worth while to enquire why the Indian shipper would not be careful to have tares and net weights exact pounds so as to avoid this loss, but when we consider the low price of tea, the difficulty in getting wooden boxes of uniform weight on account of knots and other differences in timber, and the difficulty in getting the tea to pack equally close in all cases, it is evident that the loss of time and labor involved would more than balance the loss in weight.

In talking about some recent bogus marking of tea chests that had come to my notice lately, a city buyer and dealer (wholesale) said: "I would not care what mark a man put on his tea or if it was marked at all. I would buy from the sample." The dealer is a man with a large experience and of good judgment and would in most cases get along very well and make few mistakes, but let us suppose that he carry out the idea that marks are of no consequence in relation to canned goods, flour, biscuits, soap, or, in fact, any goods that are put up in packages and that do differ ever so slightly in quality. Will any wholesale dealer say that granulated sugar, for instance, coming from one factory may fairly be offered to him bearing the brand of another factory with a presumably better reputation? I have had an experience of Indian and Ceylon teas for a number of years, being a close student and doing a large share of sampling, yet I would not feel sure of my taste and smell detecting the substitution of one sort of tea for another. I have seen Assam tea offered for Dargeeling; Ceylon for Dargeeling; Madras for Ceylon; Java for Kangra (it was a cheap Kangra was enquired for), and in each case a good deal of time wasted in sampling would have been saved, if the samples in question had been offered for what they were. I would strongly advise every retailer to get a complete catalogue of factory marks up to date, for every tea and coffee estate in both India and Ceylon, for, while it would be no guarantee that the goods were "straight," yet it would have a restraining tendency on those who might otherwise be tempted to make a tea with a brush and stencil, rather than buy one.

When tea is bulked in London it sometimes happens that the tea when put back in the chests is heavier than formerly—that is before the sorts were mixed—with the result that as much as 5 lbs. over the "scribe" weight has been found in a chest. This is not satisfactory to the buyer even when he actually gets the tea, as it savors of some crookedness. In many cases such tea packages are much defaced, having nearly everything scraped off and bearing the cheering legend, "Bulked in London."

A persistent demand by the retail trade for clean sound packages, each package bearing plainly the place of growth and factory marks, would have a tendency to make the London dealer give more attention and fairness to export trade, resulting to us in really better tea. So long as we accept anything they like to send us, so long will they treat us and look on us as veritable colonial chumps, which, as far the tea trade is concerned, we are in comparison to them.

I will follow this with a few statistics regarding Ceylon tea, acreage, capital, employed, season, rain fall, etc. I had intended to look up the Java tea trade, but it may be disposed of by saying that the production has fallen off until it is almost nil and that as a beverage, while some of the tea is bad, it is not uniformly so, what of it is not bad, is worse. It is safe to say that no retailer with a good trade for black tea can afford to use it at all.

TURNING THE LEDGER.

Some men receive very large salaries for turning the pages of ledgers in use. It seems an easy and almost useless occupation to the novice, but in reality it is the detective office of the firm. The ledger-handler is an expert in credits, who, by frequent inspections of the accounts of the firm's creditors, keeps an eye on just what they are doing. We imagine if dealers were aware of the close attention given by some firms to the history of every customer's account, that there would be a great improvement in some of the records. Step into one of the large jobbing houses, and ask the credit clerk if the firm sells Mr. A—, and if he is regarded worthy of credit. Instead of an immediate answer, you will be taken to a room full of filing boxes, alphabetically arranged. A box marked "A" will be removed, and in a few seconds the record of Mr. A— will be before you. At a glance you will have the date his account was opened, the record of every purchase, the date each bill was settled, besides his personal statement as to his worth and that of the various mercantile agencies. If there has been any trouble with Mr. A— or he has been delinquent, the facts will be on record.

Credit is getting to be an exact science with the larger houses. A first-class credit clerk must have tact, perfect self-command, shrewdness in asking and answering questions, keen perceptive faculties, thorough knowledge of the laws of trade and commerce, be quick to read character and swift to make a decision. Said one of the most expert credit clerks in the city: "Any man that is honest, and is industrious, can get a credit with us, if he has not much capital. We are simply allowing a thoroughly trustworthy man to hold our goods and save us the insurance and cost of storage. There is little risk in trusting merchandise to that sort of men."

The right sort of character is quite as good a recommendation for credit as money. When both are combined, the risk is beyond question. And rest assured those granting credits keep perfectly posted about their creditors, even to the relation of personal habits and personal expenditures to business career.—American Grocer.

THINKING IS GOOD.

When a young man does a wrong thing he is apt to excuse himself by saying he didn't think. More is the pity. Given a young man of honest intentions and intelligent mind and he will not go far wrong if he thinks before he acts. He will not commit a murder, or forge cheques, or run away with a woman or money that does not belong to him. It is presumed that every thinking person thinks it is a good thing to think.

An eminent teacher has said: "To call anyone thoughtful is almost the same as saying he is kind; his life is occupied, not in following out selfish inclinations, which come into one's mind without effort or praise, but in forcing them to submit to the test of thought, and to reveal how by energy here or abstinence there he may more truly live for others—thereby living more truly for himself!" The man who thinks broadly will get away from himself and from narrow creeds. He will love the whole world and give all who are in it, so far as may be, a living chance to act upon either better thoughts, and so make the world better.—Ex

DOES FLOUR IMPROVE WITH AGE?

Flour fresh from the mill is in its best state. Flour left for weeks or months in bins or barrels may take on new scents and other new attributes, but these are not improvements. They are the result of partial decomposition, of absorption from surroundings and of changes that necessarily carry the flour away from the normal. Flour may be "aged" exactly as cheese is "aged," but flour that is "high" from the absorption of moisture, from the decomposition of starch, from the weakening of its gluten and from the growth of bacteria is certainly not improved. Bakers tell me that flour is more easily handled and makes the best and longest-keeping bread when it is newest. I have never yet heard a first-class baker say that flour is improved by keeping it until it has changed perceptibly in color and odor. Buckwheat flour, rye flour and corn meal are familiar examples of what takes place with "aging," and in wheat flour the deterioration is simply less marked. Much that is called improvement is simply a matter of taste in the consumer. One likes fresh butter and new cheese, while another prefers rancid butter and "high" cheese. The latter claims that "age improves butter and cheese." Just the same way age "improves" flour by changes that introduce new features. But is it improvement?—Milling World.

THE CAMPHOR OF COMMERCE.

The camphor of commerce is a kind of resinous gum obtained by a process of distillation from the camphor tree, a species of laurel which is found to flourish most luxuriously in the southern part of Japan, where large groves are owned by the government, the wood being considered very desirable for ship building and other purposes, explains a contemporary. The districts in which the trees are mostly found are mountains. The camphor is obtained by a rude process of distilling the roots and branches of the tree. Work is done by peasants who make a precarious living by the occupation. The gum is exported in tubs of a capacity of about six and a half cubic feet. A good many tricks are practised by the wily Japs to add weight to their product, and dealers find it very difficult to obtain an absolutely pure article. Nearly all the camphor of commerce is obtained from Japan. Some of the trees attain an enormous size. There are numbers of them in the vicinity of Nagasaki having a diameter of twelve feet. There is an old temple situated in a grove of grand old camphor trees of great age and size, all of which are still vigorous. Some of these are reported to have a diameter of twenty feet. In appearance the tree is an evergreen and very handsomely proportioned. The trunk usually runs up about twenty feet and then branches out in all directions. The seeds or berries grow in clusters and look like black currants. The wood of the camphor tree is said to be particularly beautiful for fine cabinet work. We are told that there is a law which compels every destroyer of a camphor tree to plant another in its stead. The process of manufacturing camphor, while very primitive, is very interesting. The tree, after being chopped down, is cut into small pieces, which are put into a big wooden tub, which is closely fitted to the top of a big iron kettle. The bottom of the tub is perforated so as to allow the steam to pass through to the chips. A steam-tight cover is fitted to the top. From this tub a bamboo pipe leads to another tub, through which the steam is generated and through which the camphor and oil flow. This contrivance is connected with a third tub, divided into two compartments, the dividing floor being perforated, which allows the oil to run into the lower apartment. A layer of straw in the upper compartment catches the camphor, which crystalizes as it cools. When a certain quantity is accumulated the cover is removed and the camphor is separated from the straw and packed for the market. The oil, which runs into the lower compartment, is subsequently separated from the water, and is largely used in Japan for illuminating purposes.

RETAIL GROCERS' ADVERTISING.

John S. Gray says in Printers' Ink: "It remains now to show how a retail store in the same line can be made attractive through the mighty medium of printers' ink."

In the beginning I would say that, in my opinion—which I believe in this particular case to be largely shared by humanity—the most alluring advertisement a grocery store can have is a constantly clean, fresh and neat appearance. And, on the other hand, no amount of newspaper or other advertising can atone for lack of care and diligence in the preservation of absolute cleanliness in the store.

In groceries, as I have said about other businesses, I believe in pushing prominently one article at a time; you may mention others, of course, in the advertisement, but I would advise holding them subservient in all cases to the leader that you wish to boom.

Suppose, for instance, that you wish to feature tea in this way:

TEA IS TEA

of course, whatever its quality. Gold is gold whether it be 18-karat or 22. But, somehow, people prefer the 22. In like manner they prefer the best quality of tea when they can get it, especially when the price is reasonable.

Our Fine Family Tea, at 60 cents a pound is pure, rich and full flavored, and has no equal in the city. A single trial convinces.

 A full line of best groceries.

Now, supposing we take another leading article—coffee, which is perhaps much more popular than tea in this country. In this, as in all other announcements, you want a bold eye-catcher as headline:

ARE YOU SATISFIED

with the coffee you have been using? Perhaps it lacks fragrance and flavor, the two chief properties which comprise excellence. Try a cup of the aromatic and delicious berry, our Household Coffee. You will admit its superiority to all others.

There are a great many articles which can be taken for special mention in grocery advertisements, but yet there are several acknowledged leaders which are always prominently noticed. One of these, of course, is butter:

APPETIZING!

It is a one-word definition of our fine, creamery butter—the kind you want more of after once trying—the kind that everybody likes and wants. At 30 cents a pound we have placed it in reach of all lovers of good butter.

Dairy Produce a Specialty.

Another leading line in all grocery stores is the diversified article known under the general name of canned goods. These include fruits, jellies, meats, fish and vegetables, and are nearly always in season—one or other of them. Here is a suggestion in this connection:

BUY OUR FRUIT,

and by our fruits you shall know that we keep only the best of Canned Pears, Peaches, Apricots and Cherries. The freshest and ripest fruit only is used in the preserving. We have all the leading brands both in Fruits and other Canned Goods, such as Salmon, Lobster, Tongue, Beef, Corn, Peas, Tomatoes, Beans, etc. All at easy reachable prices and all guaranteed as to quality.

Flour is another staple article which can be well featured. Hams and bacon another, and so on ad libitum."

GREEN AND BLACK TEA.

Generally speaking, all teas are divided into two colors—green and black. Japan is the only country which produces green tea only, while China is the only land where both colors are prepared. In India, Ceylon and Java send forth black teas alone, on the principle—at least in India—that adulteration of green tea is too easy. It is worthy of mention in this connection, also, that until within a few years all the teas of Japan have been black, and this was the case when, in 1856, the first importation of fifty half-chests reached this country. The venture was immediately successful. The flavor of Japan tea pleased the American palate; it was spoken of as "a black tea with a green tea flavor," and as the leaf was dried in the natural color, it was believed that it must be free from adulteration. The importation for the second year was 400 half-chests and in the third year the amount rose to 1100; but it did not by any means stop there, rising rapidly till the yearly total reached the wonderful amount of 20,000,000.—Good Housekeeping.

OUTLOOK FOR THE TOBACCO CROP.

A special report upon the area and prospect of this year's tobacco crop, as compared with that of 1892 has been prepared by the "New England Homestead." Statements from 100 correspondents indicate but little change in the area or number of growers in Vermont as compared with last year. The 1892 crop is mostly sold, and the outlook considered promising. In Massachusetts about half of last year's crop is still unsold. There is not likely to be any great increase in area this year throughout Massachusetts, and the prospects for a good crop are considered favorable, notwithstanding that the season is backward. Lower down the Connecticut Valley the opinion prevails that there will be no increase in area this year, but in some districts a decrease. It is thought that extra good leaf may bring remunerative prices, but otherwise the Connecticut farmers hold a gloomy view of the outlook for the market. Young plants are generally small and late, but appear strong and in good condition. Prices obtained for the '92 crop range generally from 16c. to 25c., some few choice lots bringing a higher price. There is a much larger proportion of last year's crop held by growers throughout New York State, probably nearly one-half. On the whole it is possible that the area throughout New York State will be less this year. The season has been wet and cold, and planting is backward. There will be less tobacco set out in Oswego and Steuben counties, but probably just about the same area and number of growers throughout Cayuga, Chemung, Wayne, Onondaga, Tioga, and Dutchess County sections. Elsewhere it appears that the season is late. In Northern Pennsylvania there may be a slightly smaller area, with quite a reduction in Lancaster county, where the prices of last year's seed leaf ranged from four to eight cents, fillers about two cents, and Havana wrappers about 20 cents. The Florida tobacco crop was all sold out for prices ranging from 35c. to $2.35 a pound, and there will be three growers this year to every one grower last year, with the area four times larger. Harvesting is expected to begin next week, and the crop is expected to be 50 per cent. better than any ever grown. The Louisiana crop also brought good prices, and there will be 25 per cent. more growers this year because the outlook is considered better. In Ohio the area does not change much from year to year. Plants are small this season and not good. Prices for the 1892 crop were eight to nine cents for Havana, six to seven cents for Dutch and four to five cents for seed leaf in Montgomery county. In Wisconsin many farmers are inclined to give up growing tobacco, the

PROSPEROUS AND HAPPY PACKERS

The fifth annual session of the National Canned Goods Association of the United States was held in Chicago June 7 and 8.

During the course of his address President Bunting said: "I believe we have all had a reasonably prosperous year since we last met. A shortage in crop output prevented our reaping the reward that comes of an extensive pack, but prices, through such shortage were more easily maintained, and the market at present is the more grasping in consequence. What is still better, the packers of this country have been uncompromisingly posted concerning these points, and have therefore been able to ward off mischievous misrepresentations from some buyers, who bull the markets when they are full and bear them when empty. The various canned goods associations have trained the packer into a more systematic business man, and they have made him confident by backing him with facts and figures.

"The season at hand cannot well be otherwise than a prosperous one, if nature smiles upon the yeomanry of the soil and the crop is abundant.

"A more perfect system of crop reports will prove of incalculable advantage to the packer. While the more distrustful are now enabled by discounting the honesty of those reporting to arrive at an approximate summary of the output, figures nevertheless do lie when tortured under the self-interest of the packer making them. The packer has more to lose than to gain by suppressing such facts. The day has passed when a smart manipulator can expect other than ultimate disaster from deception in any line. The canned goods industry can now afford to stand on its own merits before the country. The ill effects on the sale of our products in having it known that acreage and the pack are both excessive during any season is promptly offset by the gain to the trade which is the sure result of such figures, viz., the deterring of a horde of new packers into a crowded field."

Judging from the remarks of the president in another part of his address he must have the honor of presiding over a rather happy family. "We note as one of the blessings of associations among packers," he said, "that misrepresentations, malicious insinuations, braggadocio swells, underhand leaker lies, and hermetically sealed piracy are being rejected and consigned to the dump heap of the past. No longer is the packer from the East found asserting that no canned goods worthy the tables of the respectable are packed beyond the Mississippi, or that Iowa canneries process more vines than products, more cob than corn. No longer is it retorted by the Westerner that the Eastern canners invented all the frauds which crop out in the stock-filled cans, the pretentious claim to superiority in the mental processes of the trade, or that New York is the Empire dead beat on international canned goods statistics, or the venerable fraud whose crop reports won't harmonize with facts. No longer do the East and West join in a chorus of denunciation concerning the South, whom they used to assert was the father of the twins, "the canned-goods business and the cannibal." No longer is it asserted by these Northern brothers that Baltimore packs pumpkin for squash, and steals a Northern trade-mark to float the imposition. All these things have changed. In the kennel of this association the Western lion and the Southern lamb lie together, and a cupid of purity from the East leads them."

The output of canned goods this year is estimated at 50,000,000 cases. Computed on the basis of the usual average of varieties, such as peas, corn, tomatoes, etc., the weight would average 50 pounds per case, or a total weight in shipments of 2,500,000,000, which, on a basis of 10 tons or 20,000 pounds per car, would show that 125,000 car loads were shipped.

CIGARS AND TOBACCO.

At the present time, every well regulated grocery store has its cigar and tobacco department. They are not "side lines"; they are as much a part of a grocer's stock in trade as teas, sugars or anything else, and ought to receive equal attention. There isn't a town in which these two articles cannot be made a source of profit. In the majority of stores, however, no attempt is made to render the cigar and tobacco department attractive. Cigars are permitted to dry up and become broken, while the bags, or papers of tobacco, are jumbled together on some out-of-sight shelf, where they are permitted to lie, like a lot of refuse under the counter, dust covered and unattractive as neglect can make them. They should be given a prominent position. The cigars should be kept in a neat case, and the case should be supplied with sufficient moisture to keep the goods from becoming dry and stale. Keep the surplus stock in a tight, dark cupboard. The tobacco ought to be back of the cigars and in plain sight. Let the packages be arranged neatly and conspicuously, and see that the labels are neither torn nor dusty. Whatever grade of goods one's trade justifies, one should keep the best qualities of each grade.—Commercial Tribune.

CANADIAN CHEESE IS KING.

Canada is to-day jubilant over the success of her cheese at the World's Fair. And well she might be, for superior by far over all competitors has her make proved itself to be. The facts are that of the total number of some 135 exhibits which won medals in the factory classes no less than 126 were from Canada. Another strong point in honor of Canada was brought out in the fact that 31 exhibits of Canadian cheese scored higher than the highest United States cheese. The medals go to the several provinces in such a way as to show that Canadian cheese everywhere are now being made of excellent quality. Of the exhibits which won the honor 69 came from Ontario, 52 from Quebec, 1 from New Brunswick, 2 from Nova Scotia, and 2 from Prince Edward Island. Of the cheese of the make of the present season (1893) 20 lots from Quebec won medals, as against one from Ontario. This is unquestionably the greatest triumph for dairying in Canada which has ever been achieved, and the dairymen of Quebec particularly are to be congratulated upon the way in which they have come to the very fore front.

FRUIT EVAPORATING.

The process of evaporating fruit is thus described in the June number of American Gardening by A. J. Rice :

About the year 1870 the Alden evaporator was invented, and the importance of greater care, cleanliness and the use of a high degree of heat was brought to public notice. By placing the fruit as soon as pared and sliced in the evaporator and subjecting it to highly heated air all fermentation was arrested, and we no longer had the flavor of sun-dried apples, but a new product almost equal to the fresh fruit, and the name "evaporated" apples was first used. The invention of the Alden evaporator was followed by many imitations, but the business did not increase much until after the process of bleaching the fruit was introduced. This prevented the fruit from discoloring ; apples could be prepared during the day, and the evaporators be run at night as well as during the day. Also, the small driers would make fruit that looked well and was nearly as good as that prepared in the large evaporators. Great inventions are often the result of accident, and it was so in regard to the bleaching of fruit before drying. The process had been used in hop-drying for a long time, and by chance a few apples were placed in a hop-kiln with hops, and without thought the usual amount of sulphur was used. Much to the astonishment of the man, he had the nicest dried fruit he ever saw ; yet he was afraid to make any more until he had taken it to a large dealer in Canandaigua, who looked at it, tasted and smelled of it, and then told the man to go back home and make more of the same kind. Great improvements have been made in the process of bleaching. At first we had outdoor cupboard-like places, where the fruit was put in and subjected to the fumes of the sulphur ; this made a great deal of work. Now we have more or less automatic bleachers that can be used in the work-rooms and have all the sulphur fumes carried off in the chimney. In a large evaporator at Sodus they have one that is run by an engine with carrying belts, so that the apples, as soon as they drop from the hands of the trimmers, are carried to the bleacher above the work-room, then through it on a slowly-moving belt, all the apples being subjected to the process for about forty minutes. In this establishment they have a small engine and boiler and run their paring and coring machines as well as their slicer by power.

The application of steam is a great advance in fruit drying, and it has only been done successfully for the last four or five years. Steam was first used in the Alden tower evaporator as a coil in the bottom, but was not successful. William J. Baldwin, one of the best authorities on the use of steam, says that the same amount of steam pipe placed around and between the articles to be dried will dry in one-half the time it would if placed at the bottom. There must be sufficient ventilation to carry off the moisture from the fruit, and maintain as high a degree of heat as possible and not burn the fruit.

An evaporator must be fire-proof ; so a very large number of people having need of an evaporator to dry a few thousand bushels of apples in a season have built brick towers, four feet square on the inside, and extending from the basement up, and surmounted by a ventilator at the top of the house. A large furnace is placed in the bottom of the tower, and the basement makes a convenient storage for coal. Above the furnace are the trays, so arranged with a lifting device that all the trays can be put in on the first floor of the building and taken out on the floor above, where the evaporated fruit can be stored. This tower, if properly constructed, will be fireproof ; that is, the wood inside of the tower will burn without setting fire to the building, and it will use fifty bushels of apples per day of twenty-four hours, drying the slices and the skins and cores, producing 300 to 400 pounds of white apples and 150 to 200 pounds of dried skins and cores.

There has been a continual improvement in the machines used and the methods practiced in the preparation of the fruit for the evaporators. The people used the small parers and a hand corer until 1880, when the first successful corer and parer was made. The amount of work that can be done on these machines by skillful operators is wonderful. Many boys and girls will average fifty bushels per day for weeks ; others sixty and seventy bushels, while occasionally one will pare and core from 100 to 110 bushels in ten hours. The methods of slicing the apples have changed with the use of other improvements. Quartered apples would not dry fast enough in the evaporators, so we began to slice about the core in pieces about one-fourth of an inch thick ; then we cored the apples first and sliced across the apples, making ring fruit. In 1879 the first successful machine slicer was made, and the slicers have improved, until now we have almost perfect machines that will slice by hand, foot and steam power.

It may be of interest to know something of the extent of the evaporating business in our country the past year. So far as I have been able to find out, 400 cars of white apples of twelve and one-half tons each—equal to 10,000,000 pounds—have been produced and sold, at an average price of seven cents per pound, for a sum of $700,000. There has also been produced about 5,000,000 pounds of waste and chops, at one and one-half cents per pound, for the sum of $75,000, together with 750,000 pounds of raspberries at 18 cents per pound, or $135,000, making a grand total of $910,000, or almost $1,000,000. This money has been divided up among all classes of people. I presume the growers of the fruit received one-half, and of the other half, half of it was divided between the men and women and the boys and girls who did the work ; then we have the large number of dealers who bought the fruit, the box makers, who furnished the packages, and the army of people they employ. The fruit is packed in boxes, weighed, and the cover pressed down by a hand-power press.

The Cleveland Press says that several capitalists there think of establishing a steamship service between Cleveland and Port Stanley with a capital of $2,000,000. They purpose running two fine passenger and freight boats and building offices at Port Stanley. Nothing could be done this season, however.

WHERE THE MATCHES GO.

"It is said," remarked Henry G. Sexton, who is at the Laclede, "that every man, woman and child in the country uses on an average five matches a day, and under these conditions it is not perhaps surprising that such a very poor grade of matches is turned out. The matches in common use in the United States to-day are very similar to those which were discarded in most European countries, except in the poorest neighborhood ten or fifteen years ago, and it is strange that some of the better grades which have superseded them have not acquired any foothold in this country.

"Wax matches, which are considered aristocratic in Europe, are not much liked here, but a good trial has never been given some of the best grades of safety matches sold every day by the thousand in European countries. The two kinds generally on sale here are either so loaded with sulphur as to be quite unpleasant, or so explosive in character as to be almost dangerous, and both grades are manufactured with little regard to finish and appearance, whereas in France particularly they have matches of all kinds neatly finished and pleasant to use. As a smoker I certainly think the European idea is the best. Matches are specially made for smokers, and they are absolutely without smell of any kind, or at any rate the better grades of them are. Many a first-class cigar is spoiled by the sulphur fumes from an ordinary match, and until a man gets used to it, the idea is anything but pleasant. Trust or no trust there is big money to be made by importing and selling a higher grade of match than that generally regarded as sufficient."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKET.

The present time is usually a dull period with the dry goods trade, so that although there are some disappointed ones the trade generally report business as being in a normal condition and quite up to the average of that for the corresponding period of last year. Travellers were in last week getting out their fall samples and are now all out on the road. There have been some orders placed for fall delivery induced by the firmer tendency of the market for cloakings and woollen fabrics. In a sorting-up way also the demand for all-wool challies has been maintained, several letter orders being reported in this connection. Another favorable feature is the revival in the demand noted by some of the houses for prints, business in which has been rather sluggish. Another good point also is the patent fact that the goods are evidently wanted, for there is no desire to load up heavily without knowing what the possibilities of the future are. This is made evident by the conservative course that buyers are following in relation to their purchases on fall account. There is nothing so pernicious as the habit of injudicious buying abroad, as it detracts attention from goods actually in stock to goods that will not be wanted for months. In this connection the anticipation seems to be for a good fall trade as soon as the crop prospects are more definitely known. Remittances are on the slow side.

NOTES.

There is talk of the erection of a new cotton mill at Sorel, but the scheme is very hazy at present.

Mr. Thomas Brophy, of Brophy, Cains & Co., is back from his English trip. The firm will have some taking lines of skirtings this fall to suit the new fashionable bell skirt.

Greene Sons & Co. report further business in a sorting way in the shape of letter orders for flannel shirts, lounging coats, etc.

Mr. McIntyre of Hodgson, Summer & Co. has not yet returned from England. He sailed on the 10th however and will be home in the course of a week.

Mr. Leslie Gault, of Gault Bros., says that there is a feeling that checks will be a go this fall, but whether it will last or not is difficult to say. The firm have, however, cleared out several lines, which is an indication in a certain sense.

Jas. Johnston & Co. had on view last week samples of some handsome lines of fall trimmings. Among the more sterling lines which will be fashionable were the long silky fleece of the Angola goat in the popular shades; also narrow strips of natural fur, mink, lynx, seal, etc.

The expectation is that the new bell skirt will have an appreciable effect on the style of skirtings that will be worn this fall. In this connection S. Greenshields & Son are expecting some showing and taking lines in moreens, fancy stripes, checks and natural colors.

J. G. McKenzie & Co. have been turning over some good lines of Batistes during the past fortnight. They were showing also a new trimming in the shape of a braid military design which is expected to be in great favor this fall.

Gault Bros. report indications of a satisfactory demand for cashmeres, both in colors and blacks. In fact they have been obliged to place several repeat orders for some round lines of this class of goods. The advancing tendency in the values of these goods is no doubt the incentive with buyers prices being from 10 to 12½ c. per cent higher in France.

TORONTO MARKET.

The hot weather has induced a brisk demand for summer weight goods of various classes and descriptions. Everybody has wants of some kind, and when buyers do not appear in person, their numerous letters show that the increased retail trade is quite general and important. The overturn during the past ten days has been very good, and if there does not come a period of extreme heat the trade will continue for some time. But extreme weather is always detrimental to trade. Most of the departments are especially busy tending buyers and filling orders, and little attention is being given to fall stock.

Canadian staples, which have been somewhat stagnant during April and May, have now revived, and are in constant demand. Shirtings, tickings, etc., are moving, showing that retailers have broken their stocks of this class of goods. The rural trade has taken on new life, and the city trade has sustained itself.

The letter order departments are scenes of activity, and the overworked clerks in these departments show plainly the state of trade and the tendency of orders.

Some orders for fall delivery are being placed; but some of the houses do not give fall dating until July 1st, and until then the fall orders will not show full volume. Some of the weaker houses of course started fall dating in April and May—a very foolish proceeding. —There is one class of goods which cannot be sold on fall dating until July 1st, and that is spool cotton. Orders are slow at present, as buyers are holding off until July 1st, after which the trade will be much brisker. Retailers should watch such points as this very carefully.

Black point lace is scarce in Toronto, and the houses are without stock. Low price black silk mitts are also in good demand, and stocks are depleted. The end of the week will see repeats in these goods coming to hand. Cotton hosiery is selling extra well, but stocks were very heavy when the season opened, and consequently there can be no depletion in this case.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing a line of new shot brocade silks in all the new shades of heliotrope, creams, browns, greys and navys. They have a shipment of one-line stripe silks in black brocade grounds with colored satin stripes. A new line of printed spot and broche pongees in all the leading colors is also in stock. New fancy frillings in white, cream, coral, sky and gold in new designs and at low prices are to hand. A shipment of low priced colored silk surahs is also to hand; these goods are scarce, and their sale will be rapid. Black silk surahs in all qualities have just been received.

Alexander & Anderson are clearing lines of summer goods in prints, dress goods, hosiery, gloves, parasols, etc. Odds and ends are shown in the different departments and some excellent values are offered.

Alexander & Anderson's travellers will be on the road in a few days with a full line of fall samples. Their range of autumn dress goods is especially attractive and embraces all the newest and latest productions of the best British and continental manufacturers.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling report an extra demand for light summer prints, challies, satines, and cretons. They make a specialty of these goods and carry such a large assortment at this season that they are able to fill all sorting orders. The active demand for prints show that their popularity is not waning, but rather increasing. Orders for towellings and all classes of linens are coming in freely; they have a stock large enough to withstand all probable demands.

W. R. Brock & Co. report an active demand for navy serges for suitings. They carry a full range of these goods, and show excellent value. Halifax tweeds are also moving freely in both plains and fancies. They are busy receiving their domestic woollens for the fall trade.

John Macdonald & Co. are getting in their stock of table and floor oilcloths for the fall trade. Their range will be larger than ever, and the patterns show an improvement over previous years. Small shipments of carpets are coming forward and this will continue for some time.

Bed quilts are now shown in full range by John Macdonald & Co. These include the well-known Boudoir, Berkshire, and other varieties. Their stock has been replenished by a large shipment this week.

John Macdonald & Co. are showing a large line of boys' and men's bathing suits and trunks. These are active goods at present. Harvest mitts and overalls are in good demand these days, and in the former they carry sizes 10, 12, 14 and 16 inch, and in the latter, cottonades, ducks, denims, drills and mole-skins. Negligee shirts in flannelettes, Ceylons, zephyrs and silks are shown in full range and in great qualities. Their overturn of the vests, which have been much talked of during the past few weeks, has been very great, and the stock is much reduced, although they have still a full range of sizes. They announce the arrival of a shipment of new neckwear in styles suitable for the coming national holiday trade. Dress shields are restocked this week in J.M.D., Q.C., Standards, New York, Bon Ton, and Bell.

"Amazon" velvet binding is to hand, and back orders will be filled this week.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have just passed into stock a large repeat of the three lines of summer underwear, natural balbriggan, brown balbriggan and natural wool in all sizes. The two former are made in both long and half sleeves. Summer vests in cashmere and linen are now in good demand with this house, and their stock is still well assorted.

Cream pointe laces are shown in excellent variety by Wyld, Grasett & Darling. The demand for this is unprecedented, and they have received several repeats of late, and still find difficulty in satisfying their customers. They report good sorting in hosiery, gloves, undervests, ribbons, laces and frillings.

In Gordon, Mackay & Co.'s furnishing department the clearing out of summer goods is the order of the day. Top shirts, underwear, belts, braces, etc., are being offered at prices sure to suit purchasers.

Noticeable amongst the "plums" in Gordon, Mackay & Co.'s dress goods department is a range of 23-inch Beiges marked 111-2c., and well worth from 171-2 to 181-2c. They have also a number of other lines which they are selling at clearing prices so as to make room for new goods.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. are advertising a range of Swiss and cambric flouncings in 27 and 45 inch, also a special line of fast blacks, with self and colored embroidery, which they are selling at less than manufacturers' cost.

IT HAS NO EQUAL AS A BREAKFAST FOOD.

Pettijohn California Breakfast Food, which has so rapidly grown in popularity in the States, is now being introduced in the Dominion by Wright & Copp of Toronto, who are sole selling agents for the manufacturers in the Dominion. They are receiving it in carload lots, and are prepared to supply the trade promptly.

Every grocer should handle Pettijohn California Breakfast Food. It sells quickly and gives perfect satisfaction and is something people do not tire of using.

It is nourishing, palatable, delicate. It has no equal as a breakfast food. It is particularly well adapted for spring and summer use. It is recommended by the leading medical experts as the most nourishing food ever offered to the public. It is far more delicious and wholesome than oatmeal. Children fed on this favorite food have bright eyes, rosy cheeks and clear heads. Wheat is the natural food for man. Oats is the natural food for horses and mules. Kate Field says: "It is the most delicate, and toothsome preparation of wheat I have ever eaten."

Pettijohn California Breakfast Food is manufactured only by the Pettijohn California Breakfast Food Co., at Minneapolis, Minn. It is made from the best California white wheat, and is a perfect food, pleasant, palatable, and readily assimilated by the system. It contains nourishment for every part of the body. It is the cheapest of all farinaceous food, because it contains the smallest amount of waste material. One pound contains as much available nutriment as three pounds of beef and at a fraction of the cost.—[Adv't.]

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, June 22, 1893.
GROCERIES.

The feature of the trade since our last review has continued to be the strength of the sugar market. Saturday last the refiners advanced prices 1-16c., making a gain of $\frac{1}{8}$ c. in about three days. The demand continues good for sugar, and more so than is usual at this season. Trade outside sugars is of the usual June character, although if anything better than a year ago. The little that is doing in coffees is of a hand-to-mouth character, and teas are decidedly dull. In dried fruits, a fair trade is being done in raisins and currants, but outside these, business in this particular line is quiet and uninteresting. A fair business is being done in rice for the season, but spices are about at a standstill. The usual summer's quietude characterizes the market for syrups and molasses. There is a fairly good movement in canned goods in a small way, and in tomatoes there is if anything a rather better feeling. According to travelers' reports trade in the country is gradually improving, and merchants as well as travellers anticipate a fairly good spring and summer's trade. Payments are still slow, but this is not unusual at this time of the year. They are, however, improving.

COFFEE.

No material change has taken place during the week. Locally business is only middling and of a hand-to-mouth character. Spot coffee in New York declined fractionally on account of the dullness bred of the financial situation. We quote as before: Rio, $19\frac{1}{2}$ to $21\frac{1}{2}$ c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha 26 to 27c.

DRIED FRUIT.

Trade has fallen off somewhat in Valencia raisins, but prices remain as before. The idea for off-stalk is still 4 to $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. a pound for seconds, $5\frac{1}{4}$ to 6c. for fine; layers, ordinary selects, $6\frac{3}{4}$ c.; fancy selects, 7 to $7\frac{1}{2}$ c. according to quality. Advices state that owing to the advanced state of the vines in Denia the raisin crop is expected to be about ten days earlier than usual. There is not much demand for currants. Prices outside are a little firmer, but here $5\frac{1}{2}$ to 6c. is the idea for ordinary fruit and 6 to $6\frac{1}{4}$ c. for good. Prunes are in light demand and unchanged at $7\frac{1}{2}$ to 9c. in cases. Demand for dates is unusually poor, and we quote the ruling price as before at 5 to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. There is a light demand for cooking figs, but there is little or nothing doing in any other kind.

RICE AND SPICES.

Rice is in fair demand at \$3 65 to $3\frac{3}{8}$ c. Carolina and Louisiana rice have been very low in the States, but an improvement is now noted.

Spices continue to rule quiet and unchanged. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c.; pure white pepper at 20 to 28c., and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

Strength, activity and excitement have been the features of the sugar market during the past week. The refiners advanced all sugars 1-16c. on Saturday, and while since then there has been no further advance the local market has gradually become firmer as the sugars which could be sold a little cheaper got cleaned out. The range for granulated is now $5\frac{1}{8}$ c. to $5\frac{3}{4}$ c., although the inside figure is exceptional; a dark yellow can be got as low as $4\frac{1}{2}$ c., but with most houses $4\frac{3}{8}$ c. is the lowest figure. The movement during the past week has been rather above the average, and a good many are of the opinion that present prices will be at least maintained till after the regular sugar season. Havana advices under date of June 17 state: "The long struggle of the sugar refinery company to keep prices for Cuban sugar from advancing has been given up, and on Friday, the 9th inst., over 100,000 sacks changed hands at full prices at from $8\frac{1}{4}$ and 9 reals the arroba of 25 pounds, equal to $4\frac{3}{8}$ to $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. per pound. Since the day of the great sale prices have been maintained with still higher expectations, and many predict that 10 reals, or 5c., will be obtained before another crop can be placed upon the market."

Willet & Gray, New York, in their weekly statistical say: The Week—Raw advanced $\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{4}$ c.; refined advanced 1-16c. Total stock in all the principal countries, 1,125,614 tons, against 1,435,846 tons at same dates last year. Afloats to the United States from all countries estimated, 70,000 tons, against 60,000 tons last year.

Raw—Keeping in mind our report of last week the notable event of the present week is the success of holders of sugars in obtaining $\frac{1}{4}$ c. per lb. advance between sales of centrifugals. They were sold on 2nd instant at $4\frac{1}{4}$ c. for 96° polarisation, and the next sales were made on the 13th at $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. Muscovados also advanced $\frac{1}{8}$ c. per lb. (6d. per cwt.) between sales. This fact shows what different conditions prevail in the United States from any other country, and what course a decline will take from extreme high prices when the time comes for a retrograde movement. But such a movement appears now to be somewhat distant. Only a few cargoes of centrifugals were to be had in our local markets, but supplies are supposed to have been added to by purchases of some 20,000 tons in Cuba, and a considerable amount also in Demerara. Muscovados were secured to extent of some 12,000 tons locally and afloat, with further purchases made in Barbados and other West India Islands. European markets were left alone by our refiners, and hence did not receive the expected further stimulus of the American demand, and are consequently inclined to decline a little from the highest point touched for beet sugars, although cane sugars retain their highest quotations.

The financial conditions of the country have grown considerably worse during the week, and must not be ignored in the forecast of the future of the sugar market. While all buyers of refined product can plainly see the upward course of prices for a further period, yet the disposition is shown to let the opportunity pass rather than assume unusual money obligations at this time. This conservatism is very healthy for the sugar trade, but will bring the business to a hand-to-mouth basis soon, and will not stimulate consumption.

Refined—Following the advance of $\frac{1}{4}$ c. paid for raws, an advance of 1-16c. has been made in refined. Further advances may be looked for, but perhaps not immediately. No reaction is possible, under present conditions of the raw sugar markets of the world. It is advisable to carry as much stock in refined as is practicable, as it is quite possible somebody may have to go without all the sugar required before the present campaign is ended.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups continue dull. Low grades are pretty well cleaned up; $2\frac{1}{4}$ c. up is the idea. Molasses are also without improvement; 32 to 40c. is the idea for Porto Rico and New Orleans molasses.

NUTS.

Just the usual quiet trade doing at unchanged prices. We quote: Brazil nuts 11 to $11\frac{1}{2}$ c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; unshelled, 16 to 17c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c. for roasted and 11 to $12\frac{1}{2}$ c. for green; cocoa nuts, \$5 to \$5.50 per sack.

TEAS.

There is a little of a sorting-up character being done, but there is no buying of any consequence; in fact, generally speaking, the tea market is dull. New Japans have met with a fair reception at prices ranging from 30 to 35c. for first pickings, but orders have been small. They are coming in more freely and prices are showing a little easing off in consequence. Ceylons continue to show good value. We quote Japans (1892 3)—Low grade and common, 15 to 18c.; medium, 18 to 20c.; fine, 20 to 25c.; new Japans, 30 to 32c. for medium and 32 to 35c. for fine. Blacks—Low grades congous, $14\frac{1}{2}$ to $16\frac{1}{2}$ c.; medium, 18 to 23c.; fine, 30 to 45c.; fancy, 60 to 70c.

Mail advices received here this week from London, Eng., state that the market there has remained in a dropping condition throughout the past month and that all grades of common and medium teas are distinctly lower. "It will be noticed that the deliveries for the past season show a falling off of 7,000,000 pounds, and this we think is to be accounted for principally by the depressed state of trade. Imports of the month for London are 7,746,000 pounds against 6,887,000 for the same time last year. Deliveries for London are 20,594,000 pounds against 20,889,000 pounds last year. The stock in London May 31 was 64,404,000 pounds against 68,241,000 pounds last year."

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

Butter is better property this week. Receipts have been only fair on account of the warmer weather, demand good and prices higher. Packing is going on and there is some inclination to hold. There are very few dairy-packed tubs coming forward, most of it being store packed, although in quality sweet and good. The idea for good tubs is 14 to 15c. A few large rolls are coming in and they sell at 13½ to 14c. Farmers' pound prints are stiffening up a little and 15 to 16c. is now the idea for them. There is a good deal of creamery butter to be had, but demand is limited. Creamery tubs are quoted at 20 to 21c. and pound prints at 22 to 23c.

There is a rather better feeling in the cheese market. A fair local trade is being done at 10 to 10½c., and lots can be bought from the factories at about 9c.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Much as before, with prices steady. Jobbers still paying $1.30 to $1.35 and selling at $1.40 to $1.50.

DRIED APPLES—There has been some enquiries for carlots during the last few days. Locally there is no demand. Jobbers are taking a few at 4c. and selling at 4½ to 4¾c., the outside figure being for barrels.

EVAPORATED APPLES—A little more is being done in this line. Jobbers are selling at 8¾ to 9c. and paying from 7½ to 8c.

EGGS—Market steady. All eggs have got to be candled, and buying is of a hand-to-mouth character. There is no accumulation of stock. We quote 11½ to 12c., the outside figure being for single case lots.

HONEY—Is about the slowest selling commodity there is on the market, and prices are easy at 7 to 8c. for extracted white and 5c. for dark.

POULTRY—There is nothing of any account coming forward yet. Spring chickens and ducks are wanted at 60 to 90c.

POTATOES—Good deal easier and slow of sale; 85 to 90c. is quoted for car lots on track and single bags sell at 95c. to $1. Now that imported new stock is beginning to arrive holders are anxious to unload. New potatoes are selling at $4.50 per barrel.

ONIONS—There is no change, Egyptians selling at $2.50 to $2.75 per bag and Bermudas at $2.50 per crate.

HOPS—A few small lots are moving at 17 to 18c. for good. Yearlings are purely nominal.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

Dressed hogs are dull and easy at $7.50. Demand is good from the retailers for smoked meats and prices are firm and unchanged.

BACON—Long clear, 10½ to 11c. Smoked backs 12½c., bellies, 13½ to 14c. rolls 10½ to 10¾c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c. for smoked.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13c. in tubs, 13¾c. in pails and 12¾c. in tierces. Compound 10 to 10½c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $21, Canadian short cut $22.

MONTREAL : 17 St. Nicholas St.

TORONTO : Wright & Copp, 40 Wellington St. East.

WINNIPEG : E. W. Ashley.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 4¼ to 5½c., hindquarters 6 to 8½c., veal 8 to 7½c., lamb 8½ to 9½c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade continues brisk in all lines, especially oranges and lemons. Oranges are stiffening rapidly in price and stocks are getting into smaller compass; 200's, 160's and bloods are practically out of the market. Lemons show an advance of 50c. per box and the tendency of prices is still upwards. All soft or early lemons are cleaned out. Bananas, which have been scarce during the last ten days, are not yet plentiful, and, and prices are firm and demand good. Strawberries are coming in more freely and prices are lower and fluctuate from day to day. Tomatoes are plentiful and easier. California green fruit, such as apricots, peaches, and cherries are arriving. Water melons are expected here in a few days. We quote : Oranges—Messinas, ½ boxes of 80's $2.25 to $2.50; ¼ boxes of 100's, $2.50 to $2.75; lemons, 4 to $5; bananas, $1.25 to $2; pineapples, extras, 17c., No. 1 15c., No. 2 12½c., No. 3 10c.; apples, $2.00 to $2.50 for ordinary stock and $3.00 to $4.00 for choice to fancy; strawberries, 10 to 14c.; tomatoes $1.75 to $2.25 per crate; peas, $1.50 to $1.75 per basket; cucumbers, $3 per basket, $2.50 to $2.75 per crate; beans, $2.25 to $2.50 per crate; cabbage, $2.50 to $4 per crate.

FISH.

Trade good with supplies ample, principally in white fish, trout and herring. There is not much of other varieties coming in.

TORONTO.

A fair business is being done, but in no line is there anything approaching activity. There is a good movement in tomatoes in small lots for immediate wants, at from 85c. up, and prices are if anything a little steadier. A fair business is being done in peas, at from 85c. up. Stocks in this line are ample and some will likely have to be carried over. Corn continues to move well and prices are firm at from 85c. up. Demand for peaches is only moderate, but stocks are light and prices firm, at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and $3.25 to $3.75 for 3's. Apples are in better demand and scarcer, with prices firm at 85c. to $1 for 3's and $2 to $2.25 for gallons. Plums are in fairly active demand and unchanged at $1.45 to $1.55. Stocks are also light in this line. Stocks of good salmon are getting bare and prices are firm. Demand is good at prices ranging from $1.50 to $1.55 for talls and $1.70 to $1.80 for flats. For the better brands of lobster the demand continues good and prices firm at $1.90 to $2.10 for talls and $2.50 to $2.70 for flats. In sardines there is just the usual seasonable trade doing. Meats are meeting with a fair demand at unchanged prices.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

Excepting in peas the canned goods market is well supplied and the trade seem united about one thing, which is that there should be more money in circulation.

MARKETS—Continued

Bass is beginning to come in, and we quote them at 10 to 12c. a pound. Hallibut and ciscoes are out of the market. Eels are quoted at 2c. a pound cheaper. We quote:—Fresh sea salmon, 15c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half bbl.; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; pike, 5 to 6c.; perch, $2 to $3 per 100 as to size; blue back herring, $2 to $3 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; shad, $3 a dozen; salmon trout and white fish, 7 to 7½c.; eels, 6 to 8c. a lb.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—Not much doing. The financial troubles in the United States are effecting hides and prices are weak and lower. Jobbers are paying 4½c. for good buff selects and asking 5c., but there are little or no transactions.

SKINS—Calfskins are lower by 1c. a lb., 7c. being quoted for No. 1 and 5c. for No. 2. There is a demand for good stock, of which there is a scarcity. Lamb skins are quoted at 35c. and pelts at 20c., while wool skins are nominal at $1.25 to $1.50.

TALLOW—Not much doing and prices are somewhat lower, jobbers paying 5c. and selling at 5½ to 5¾c.

WOOL—Lower. Dealers are paying 17c. for new washed fleece wool, 18 to 19c. for fine, and pure Southdown 20 to 21c., rejections ½c. off. The mills are still well employed.

PETROLEUM.

Trade continues much about the same at unchanged prices. We quote as follows:—Canada refined oil, 13 to 13½c.; carbon safety, 17½ to 18c.; Canada water white, 19c.; American water white, 21 to 22c.; photogene, 25c.

MARKET NOTES.

Eby, Blain & Co. report that Elephant Chop Japan tea is meeting with a good sale.

Davidson & Hay will again have control of the "Red Star" brand of canned salmon on this market.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are offering fine quality Valencias at 33-4c. See their advertisement on another page.

Sloan & Crowther are in receipt of another shipment of Morton's fresh herrings.

W. H. Gillard & Company, of Hamilton, are meeting with an immense sale of their standard lines of black teas, and many repeat orders show that satisfaction is being given.

Merchants will study their best interests by dropping a postal card to W. H. Gillard & Co., of Hamilton, asking for particulars with reference to their standard lines of black teas.

C. Alfred Chouillou, Montreal, has just received a consignment of imported macaroni and vermicelli of the brand Terget, which he reports is selling quickly. The present is a good opportunity to buy these goods at low prices.

Davidson & Hay have been appointed wholesale agents for Toronto of the Patented Counter Tea Mixer. The mixer is worthy of all the good things that have been said about it, and retailers should call at Davidson & Hay's and see it for themselves.

P. L. Mason & Co. have cable advices from London to the effect that the Valencia raisin crop is about the same as last year, while that of Sultana raisins is less than in 1892, possibly one-fourth. Elemen figs are expected to turn out much about the same as a year ago.

G. W. Prittie, grocer, Yonge street and Davenport road, has assigned to W. A. Campbell. His liabilities and assets are estimated equal at $2,500. Mr. Prittie has been in business three or four years, and until recently his credit has been good.

C. E. Colson, special agent in Canada for Cross & Blackwell, reports largely increased sales of the goods of this firm. This is in spite of an enormous duty, in many instances over 100 per cent. on the cost of the goods in England, and increased competition from other makers.

The copy for a change of Lucas, Steele & Bristol's "ad." was received too late for this issue. In it they advise the trade that they keep the best goods and are quoting low prices for lime juice, lime juice cordial, potted meats, canned meats and fish, keg sardines, condensed milk, condensed coffee and cream, fancy canned goods, and all such seasonable articles.

On the result of the last quarterly sale of cinamon, the London Grocer reports as follows: "The movements of cinamon at this port are clearly behind those in 1892, as both the landings and deliveries during the past twenty-one weeks have been from about eight hundred to fourteen hundred bales short of those in the same period last year, and the stock remaining on hand on the 27th ult. was 860 bales lighter than at the end of May, 1892. Sales privately for some time past have been exceedingly limited, and at the periodical auctions held on Monday the 29th ult., the demand was not only slack but poor. This was particularly noticeable where the finer qualities were concerned, as, out of a total of 1,170 bales Ceylon put forward, the portions of fine quality realized were at a decline of 1-2d. to 1d. per pound from the rates established in February last, whilst the medium grades went somewhat unevenly, and the common kinds were taken at full rates."

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

Dullness is still the predominating feature of the flour market. There have been some sales of straight roller at $3.15, middle freights, but it could be bought at less than that to-day.

FLOUR—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.20 to $4.25; strong bakers' $3.75 to $3.90; white wheat patents, $3.50 to $3.90; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.20, low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25; Ontario family $3.15 to $3.40.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.05 to $4.25; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.80 to $3.90; Ontario patents, $3.50 to $3.60; straight roller, $2.85 to $3.10; extra, $2.65 to $2.70; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25.

MEAL—Oatmeal is $4.10 to $4.30. Cornmeal is $3.25 to $3.50.

FEED—Bran (ton lots) $13.00, do (on track) $11.50 to $12.00, shorts (ton lots) $15, ditto (on track) $12.50 to $13; mixed feed $20 to $22, feeding corn 57 to 58c., oats 38c. on track.

HAY—Baled timothy quiet and unchanged. We quote $10 to $10.50. There have been sales for export equal to these prices.

STRAW—Demand poor and prices unchanged at $5.50 to $6.

MONTREAL.

The flour market is dull, straight rollers having been offered this week at $3.22½ July delivery, with no bids. We quote:—Winter wheat, $3.90 to $4.10; Manitoba patents, best brands, $4.20 to $4.30; straight rollers, $3.30 to $3.35; extra, $3 to $3.15; superfine, $2.60 to $2.90; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.65 to $3.80; Manitoba strong bakers', best brands $3.90.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

The market is dull and prices steady. Manitoba, $4.95 to $5.05; Ontario high grade, $4.15 to $4.25; medium patents, $3.90 to $4.10.

Oatmeal—Market firm and stocks light. Prices are $4.40 to $4.50, which is less than can be landed at. Meal, prices steady, fair demand at $2.70 to $2.75. Oats higher, 48 to 50c. Feed, bags included, $22.

firm at the advance. Refiners will not book largely ahead either, and the market is a quiet one on the whole. In other lines there is not much change to note on spot. Prospects for tea are said not to be so bright on account of the stock of old and common Japan grades offering. Coffee is firm and syrups and molasses are unchanged. Business generally is on the quiet side, but the expectations seems to be for a good seasonable demand this summer and fall. Payments are not especially good.

SUGAR.

The market for refined sugar is very firm with a strong tendency, sales of granulated in round lots being reported at $5\frac{1}{2}$ c., which is $3\frac{1}{2}$ c. better than last week's figures. Yellows have also moved up an $\frac{1}{2}$ c. with business at $4\frac{1}{2}$ to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. as to grade. Refiners offer very sparingly at the advance. New York is very strong on raw, Centrifugals having been placed at $4\frac{1}{2}$ c. and Muscovado at $3\frac{3}{4}$ c.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

There is very little to be said regarding syrups, which are quiet but steady; Canadian at 2 to $2\frac{1}{2}$ c. per lb. in the wood, one small lot of very fine being placed at $2\frac{1}{4}$ c. American syrup is steady at 18 to $20\frac{1}{2}$ c. per gallon.

Molasses is moving out fairly well in a jobbing way at unchanged prices, dealers outside the combine still selling at 30 to 31c. for round lots, but the combine price to the trade is 33 to 34c. for smaller quantities.

TEA.

New Japan tea will soon be on the market in good quantities, the Empress of India having arrived at Vancouver with 2,000 packages, most of which is for Montreal. It is claimed in this connection that new Japans on spot, ex the first boat, have been offered at 23c. In old stock some common grades have been pushed off at low prices recently, presumably in anticipation of the large crop to come forward. We noted sales during the week at $12\frac{1}{2}$ c.

COFFEES AND SPICES.

The coffee market is firm, and as supplies are light holders are offering somewhat sparingly. Moracaibo is held firmly, with sales of 50 bag lots at $21\frac{1}{2}$ c., and we quote $20\frac{1}{2}$ to 22c. as to quantity. We quote: Jamaica, 19 to 20c.; Maracaibo, $20\frac{1}{2}$ to 22c.; Rio, 19 to 21c.; Java, 24 to 28c.; and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

In spices business has been quiet and the tone firm. Common Jamaica ginger has been moved at 16 to 18c. and finer grades 20 to 24c. Black pepper is 8 to 9c., Pimento is steady at $6\frac{1}{2}$ c., and nutmeg firm at 50 to $52\frac{1}{2}$ c. for wholesale business. Jobbing prices are higher.

RICE.

There has been a good steady movement in rice at unchanged prices. We quote: Ordinary $3.85 to $4, Japans $4 to $4.50, and Patnas and Carolinas $4.50 to $5.50.

DRIED FRUIT.

There has been a moderate business doing in dried fruit during the week, off stalk Valencia raisins in round lots selling at $3\frac{1}{4}$ to 4c. for good common stock. Layers are firm and in light supply at $6\frac{1}{4}$ to $6\frac{1}{2}$ c. Currants are dull and easy in tone at 5 to 6c. as to quality.

GREEN FRUIT.

Oranges have been in fair request, good well selected stock meeting a good sale. We quote $1.75 to $2 for half boxes and boxes $2.75 to $3.75. Lemons are steady, the hot weather having kept up the call noted last week. We quote $2.25 to $3.75 for good sound fruit.

Pineapples move quietly at 7 to 15c. as to size and quality.

Banana stocks have been somewhat reduced during the week, a fair demand being experienced at 60c. to $2.

APPLES.

There has been a fair demand for apples which are quoted from $2 to $3.25 per bbl. according to quality.

BEANS.

The market is steady with a moderate business. Western hand picked are quoted at $1.60 to $1.65 and $1.25 to $1.50 for ordinary and inferior $1 to $1.10.

HONEY.

The market rules quiet. Extracted has sold at 6 to 8c. and comb stock 9 to 13c. as to quality, the latter price for white clover. Expectations are for a good crop in Quebec, and the reports are the same way from Ontario.

HOPS.

The hop market is dull. Brewers claim to have all the hops they require, and are not taking any. Good to choice rule at 17 to $18\frac{1}{2}$ c., and poorer qualities 14 to 16c.; old hops, 6 to 10c.

PROVISIONS.

The demand for pork rules slow and prices hold steady. Smoked meats are in better enquiry, and there is a fair movement in lard in a jobbing way, but the market is very dull on the whole. We note sales of Canada short cut at \$21, with no bid. We quote: Canadian short cut, per brl., \$21 to \$22; mess pork, Western, new, per brl., \$22.50 to \$23; hams, city cured, per lb. $12\frac{1}{2}$ to $13\frac{1}{4}$ c.; lard, Canadian, in pails, 12 to $12\frac{1}{2}$ c.; bacon, per lb., $11\frac{1}{2}$ to $12\frac{1}{2}$ c.; lard, common refined, per lb., 10 to $10\frac{1}{2}$ c.

EGGS.

The receipts of eggs continue heavy, but the demand is sufficiently good to maintain prices, and 11 to 12c. is still the range.

CHEESE AND BUTTER.

The cheese market rules steady, and although private cables give rather too close limits to be workable there is sufficient trade doing to demonstrate the fact that it is a 9 to $9\frac{1}{4}$ c. market for Western Ontario or Brockville cheese. The recent purchases at the latter market are coming in and the quality seems to be fair on the whole, and we understand that most of the goods are already wanted for shipment, and are, therefore, not on the market. In fact, from recent purchases it is evident, as we pointed out last week, that some June cheese is wanted, whatever the reason, and the fact has stiffened up the market here for the time being. Whether it will remain where it is is hard to say, but in the natural course of events it should work off again after these purchases have been shipped, and private cables are certainly below present prices in the case of deals for future shipment. In fact they are about an $\frac{1}{8}$ to $\frac{1}{4}$ of a cent lower than our prices. Finest colored, $9\frac{1}{4}$ to $9\frac{3}{8}$ c.; finest white, 9 to $9\frac{1}{2}$ c.; under grades, $8\frac{3}{8}$ to $9\frac{1}{2}$ c.; cables, 47s 6d.

Butter remains much the same. There is demand on export account, but holders in the majority of cases ask extreme figures. We understand that there were sales of creamery Tuesday at $18\frac{3}{4}$ c., but it could hardly have been June goods. For Western dairy holders' ideas in the country are a little too high for exporters and the present trade. Townships is offered at 16 to 17c., but the quality does not tempt shippers yet. In a jobbing way business is of a steady character. Creamery $18\frac{1}{2}$ to 19c., Townships 16 to 17c., Western dairy 14 to 16c.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

ST. JOHN, N.B., June 22, 1893.

Excepting the advance in sugars Monday there is nothing new to report in groceries. Breadstuffs are dull and unchanged. Provisions show a better enquiry.

Sugars.—Prices have advanced about 1-4c. since last week, and, while some dealers are happy, others, not stocked, look disgusted, and comfort themselves thinking prices may not hold. Prices today are: granulated 5 1-2 to 5 5-8c., extra C. 4 1-2 to 4 3-4c., yellows 4 1-4 to 4 1-2c.

Molasses.—Very little moving, and should be some easier, though quotations given are unchanged. Barbadoes 32 to 33c.; Antigua, 30 to 31c.

Rice.—Some fair quality was offered very low, but have not heard of any sales. We quote 3 1-4 to 3 5-8c., as to quality.

Dried Fruit.—Nothing new to report; prices hold steady, with fair demand in all lines.

Butter.—The market seems well supplied, and prices are some lower: 16 to 19c. is the idea.

Cheese.—There has been a good demand for new stock, and while the old is offered at 1c. or more less, the preference is given to new. Prices are 10 1-2 to 11c. Some look for quite a drop the next few weeks.

Eggs.—Moderate supply and steady demand. Prices unchanged at 9 1-2 to 10 1-2c.

Potatoes.—Prices easier at $1.25 to $1.50.

Onions.—New Bermudas are quoted at $1.30 to $1.40 per crate. Egyptian in bags at 2 1-2c. per lb.

Fish.—Market is almost bare in some lines. Large cod are quoted at $4.75 to $4.90 per cwt.; medium cod, $3.65 to $3.75 per cwt.; pollock, $1.90 to $2 per cwt. Smoked herring scarce and prices higher at 9 to 11c.

A BRITISH COLUMBIA GROCERY.

All the well-appointed grocery stores in the country are not confined to the eastern portions of the Dominion. A photo to hand of Dixie H. Ross & Co.'s store at Victoria, B.C., demonstrates this. When the photographer took the snap shot at the interior of the store a lady customer was being waited upon by one of the clerks, and other clerks were apparently in the act of filling orders, while the head of firm or manager was quietly looking on. The thing that strikes one on looking at the photo is the extent and variety of the stock, particularly canned goods and fancy groceries, and the taste displayed in the general arrangement of the store. Everything about the place, even to the tidy and gentlemanly clerks, possesses an attractive and inviting air. Dixie H. Ross & Co. are to be congratulated.

MOLASSES IN MONTREAL.

Early in the spring THE GROCER referred to the fact that molasses was assuming an interesting aspect in Montreal. In April some low offers for future delivery were made freely, and quite as freely taken, the expectation then being that there would be lots of molasses. These offers were low, and it is a generally admitted fact that some of the earlier contracts were filled either at a loss or on so close a margin that there was little amusement in the transaction. Then news commenced to come from the Islands that the prospects were for a short supply, and, as the first cost at primary points commenced to mount upwards in an unmistakable manner, the tone of the market changed, Montreal importers and those elsewhere evincing a disposition to book orders. This strength was followed, as everyone knows, by the formation of a combine in Montreal, with the avowed object of doing away with the ruinous cutting tactics that has characterized the Montreal molasses market frequently this spring, perhaps more than any other time. All the bullish news from the Islands, coupled with the combine, put holders of molasses in a firm humor, and the general prophecy was for a firm market for the balance of the season, especially as there was the strong sugar market to be reckoned on as a sympathetic factor. Sellers in Montreal contracted for some heavy supplies, and talked up prices.

Of late, however, some doubts have arisen as to whether the high prices predicted will be reached. This does not infer that the market is weak, for such is not the case, but buyers who are disinclined to concede the outside prices asked point to the fact that the first cost at the Islands has receded from 14 to 12c. as an argument in favor of their view, and supplement it by pointing to the large supplies that are on the way to Montreal. There are, as far as known, thirteen cargoes in all destined for Montreal, running from 500 to 1,200 puncheons each. Several of them have already arrived at the big port, some 3,000 to 4,000 puncheons, and the fact has had its influence in softening up the market a bit. Besides, although the members of the combination dispute it, orders have been booked at 12c. first cost, and offers by outsiders at 30c. have had their effect with buyers. On the other hand, well-known members of the combine seem quite confident, showing no anxiety about their holdings.

The situation is interesting, but with the sugar market as strong as it is, no great decline is looked for, while the fact of ample receipts above referred to is expected to work against the imposition of any extreme prices by the combination.

LONDON
RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

The regular meeting of the above Association was held in Sherwood Hall on Tuesday evening, June 13, with the President, W. H. Ferguson, in the chair. Three applications for membership were received and on motion admitted. The question of changing time of meeting from evening till 3 o'clock in the afternoon was fully discussed. The decision was finally in favor of 3 o'clock on the first Wednesday of each month.

Shall we have a picnic this season? This question was disposed of by a unanimous vote in favor of holding a picnic in Queen's Park on Wednesday, July 26. The following were then appointed a committee to draft the various committees necessary for successfully operating the picnic:—T. A. Rowatt, Jas. Wilson, J. C. Trebilcock, and C. J. Wall. W. H. Ferguson and John Moule were appointed a committee to interview the different railway company agents regarding reduced fares from outside places, giving them an opportunity of visiting London and attending the picnic of the season.

The President requested the above committees, and all the members interested in the association and the success of the picnic to go to work as quickly as possible. The London Retail Grocers' picnics have always been a success. Let this excel the past if possible.

The meeting adjourned at 10 o'clock. The next regular meeting will be held on Wednesday, July 5, at 3 o'clock.

PERSONAL MENTION.

H. Malcolmson, a Chatham grocer, was on the street Monday.

J. W. McNabb, grocer, of Chepstone, was in Toronto this week replenishing his stock.

George Price, of the grocery firm of Price & Son, Goderich, has removed to the Soo, American side, where he has gone into the fruit business.

William Hay, merchant, of Kincardine, has been spending a few days with friends in Galt. Mr. Hay's friends in the busy manufacturing town are many.

P. Potvin, merchant, Byng Inlet, was in Toronto this week. He says business at the Inlet is good and prospects bright. They have, he says, been experiencing some hot weather up there.

Mr. J. F. Eby, of Eby, Blain & Co., is still confined to his bed owing to the injury sustained by his knee coming into contact with a telegraph pole while he was out riding a couple of weeks ago.

R. F. Bevan of W. C. Bevan & Co., Denia, Spain, was in Toronto this week, and under the guidance of J. Lockhart Watt, the local representative of the firm, made a tour of the warehouses. W. C. Bevan, the senior partner of the firm, was here last week in the interest of the Malaga house.

THEY SMELLED VERY BAD.

A joke was played on a well-known cigar traveller the other day by a customer, says the Kingston Whig. The traveller called and was praising his brand of cigars in a way common to himself when the customer invited him to take one. The traveller lit it and smoked. The smell was so strong and disagreeable he threw it away. He tried another with the same result, and six proved to be bad. He stopped trying the cigars and said he would complain to the firm about the inferior cigars being manufactured. The traveller left the city without knowing that the cigars he smoked had been loaded with teeth of rubber combs which had been used for years.

"Jock when ye hae naething else to do, ye may be aye sticking in a tree; it will be growing, Jock, when ye're sleeping."

"Your coffee possesses both a good and a bad quality."

"What do you mean by that, sir?"

"Good, because it contains no chicory; bad, because it contains no coffee."

A Berlin tradesman advertises: "Any person who can show me that my cocoa is injurious to health will receive ten boxes gratis."—Morning Star.

Drummer (taking out well filled cigar case)—"Pardon me, but have you a match?" Seedy Individual (suggestively)—"Yes, but I have no cigar." Drummer—"Then you won't need the match."

Merchant (about to engage a traveller): "I am told that you have been in gaol once; for what reason, may I ask?" Traveller: "Ah, yes;—it was for thrashing a person who would not give me an order." Merchant: "Your are engaged!"

A country couple newly married went to the city last month, and the groom called for some wine. When asked what kind, he replied: "We want that kind of wine where the corks busts out and the stuff begins to bile and keeps a-bilin till yer gets the worth of your money."

"What's your strawberries worth?" "Twenty cents a quart." "Let me have a quart," and she held out a regulation quart measure. "Just take the box, madam," said the obliging dealer, but she had the measure there for a purpose and when he had emptied two boxes into it she left with a pleasant smile, he cuffed his youthful assistant and kicked a friendly dog ten feet into the air and half way across the street.—Detroit Free Press.

The following item recently appeared in an English contemporary: "Reports have recently been current as to the probability that Mr. Coleman's name would be included in the list of the honors conferred at the time of the Queen's Birthday. We are authorized to state that Mr. Coleman received a short time since an intimation that Mr. Gladstone would submit his name to her Majesty in the list for a baronetcy should the proposal be agreeable to him. Mr. Coleman, however, replied that whilst thanking Mr. Gladstone for the kindness and courtesy of the proposal he preferred to remain without any title attached to his name."

JAMS AND MARMALADE.

The representative of a London newspaper recently visited a big jam factory, and he describes what he saw as follows :

The manufacture of jam is very interesting. It is curious to watch the positive shower of fruit stones which are thrown off by the enormous machines, and to note the progress of the boiling from the moment the tin pails full of sugar and the pulp are emptied into the steam-jacketed boilers, and the automatic spoon, like the screw of a steamship, commences to rotate, till after the boiling point is reached and the steam is shut off. This only takes about seven minutes ; but though the boiling-room may be an excellent place to make jam in, if you have any respect for your clothes and wish to avoid the hundreds of sticky trucks which are wheeled about as in a railway station gone mad, it is not a good place in which to make careful analytical and descriptive notes.

The making of marmalade is a much prettier operation. These makers import their own bitter oranges direct from Seville, and into their factory are brought enough bitter oranges to build an edifice as big as St. Paul's. Let us follow the course of an orange :

It ripened by the river banks,
Where, mask and moonlight aiding,
Don Blas and Juan play their pranks,
Dark donnas serenading.

It is unrolled from its paper capsule and carefully inspected to see that it is perfectly sound. It is then put into a box, which finds its way to another department, where the small black spot is removed. If perfectly clean, it is dropped into one basket; if dirty, into another, which goes to a new department to be washed. It then comes under the care of a girl whose sole occupation is to cut it in half and drop it in a basket, which is placed before a woman who sits in front of a little wooden cupboard, in which spins, at the rate of 1,500 revolutions a minute, a wooden rose. A large red arm is put out, the half orange is placed against the rose, and in a second the pulp and juice have disappeared, and nothing but a clean cap of peel remains in the operator's hand.

This is put in a basket with hundreds of others. They are folded in fours, so as to resemble a half-blown india-rubber ball, and thrust into a hopper in another machine, where sharp circular knives spin round, and cut them into innumerable rings, which drop into a drawer beneath. While this is going on the pulp and juice have been put into another machine which throws off the pips and pulp and sends the boiled juice into a large vat. The thin slit rings of peel are then steam-boiled in tubs and added with sugar to the syrup, which is wheeled off to the boiling-rooms, and in some seven minutes a ton and a half of marmalade is being emptied by strong arms and big cans into thousands of pots, tumblers, teapots, custard glasses, butter-dishes, jelly-moulds, and some fifty other fancy forms in which the middle-class housekeeper likes to be served. These are fitted into trays, which are piled on lorries and sent by lift to the next floor, where they are finished—that is to say, have the little brandy-dipped heading put in the neck, the vegetable-parchment cover tied round the top, and the labels stuck on. When all this has been done by several hands, any spare marmalade which has been spilled is washed off the jars, and they are wrapped and sealed in covers and sent away across the bridge on trollies to be packed in the warehouses.—Tri-State Grocer.

BLACK BURMESE RICE.

A notice of this rice has lately appeared in the proceedings of the Agri-Horticultural Society of India, wherein it is mentioned that the black Burmese Jooma Choul is grown by Mughs in Chittagong and the hill tracts, in the Jhoons, or newly cleared jungle land. This paddy is sown in April and cut in October, and is more glutinous and nutritious than ordinary rice. This rice indeed is described as getting quite glutinous when cooked, and for this reason it is frequently steamed instead of being boiled in the ordinary manner. Besides being used as a food in the regular way, it is made into a sort of pudding flavored with scraped cocoane. The black rice is not procurable in any large quantities on the Araccan coast, but is more plentiful on the Martaban coast at Moulmein, Rangoon, etc., and is only used for sweetmeats. Professor Church, reporting to the Royal Gardens, Kew, on Burmese rice, states that the results amply confirm the opinion entertained of its high dietetic value, and that in flesh forming substance, in oil, and in mineral matter this black rice shows a marked superiority over all samples of other varieties hitherto examined.

The most noticeable peculiarity of this rice is its unusual richness in albuminoids and in oil. Some of the most highly esteemed of the Japanese glutinous rices have indeed been found to contain from 1 ½ to 2 per cent. of oil, instead of the .4 or .5 per cent. commonly present in Carolina rice, but then they are comparatively poor in albuminoids. In the sample now under discussion it was found that the coagulable albuminoids, as determined by the phenol method, amounted to 8.5 per cent.—a figure which compared favorably with the average—namely, 7.3 per cent., present in other Indian rices. And it must be remembered that a similar reduction (say .6 per cent.) must be made in the latter figure, in order that a fair comparison between the two percentages may be made. The number will then be—true albuminoids in 100 parts of black Burmese rice, 8.5 ; other Indian rices, 6.7. One of the results of this richness in albuminoids, according to Professor Church, is brought out on calculating the nutrient ratio of this Burmese rice, which is much nearer that of a complete food than is the case with the common kinds of Indian rice. These latter are likewise poorer in phosphoric acid than the Burmese variety.—Queenslander.

RICE NOT UP TO AVERAGE.

Dan Talmage's Sons, trade statisticians of the rice crop, have sent out their bulletin on the present crop as follows : Acreage and promised outcome in North Carolina and Georgia considerably below that of last year. South Carolina up to average and in good condition. In Louisiana, along the Mississippi River and in other old parishes, some diminishment of acreage, but in the southwest the culture is being prosecuted on a larger scale than ever before. Reports from other States are unfavorable, except Texas. Total area planted in the United States, 261,000 acres ; estimated yield, 10,500,000 bushels.

CATCHY WINDOW DISPLAYS.

If you want to attract the attention of the passersby and at the same time introduce some special article, take that article and arrange it in the center of your window into some artistic design, with a background made up of the same. For example : If you have a certain brand of soap you would like to display build it up to represent a high wall. Make a derrick, and have a doll on top of this wall in the act of pulling up a bar of soap, which represents the stone. Display a placard to read

.....
.....

If you wish at any time to make a special fruit display for your window or inside the store build a high pyramid from any old lumber Take wire netting and secure to this pyramid leaving sufficient space in between to show your fruit. You can then start by filling in so much space with apples, then oranges, and so on with fruits in season.

The ice cream season is here. Why not place a freezer in your window arranged on top of a pyramid of boxes, and the various articles used displayed on the boxes with cards calling attention to the same.

Special attention should be given to the show window for the nation's great holiday, and a distinctive Fourth of July window should be made up appropriate for the occasion. Your store front should be decorated with flags and bunting, and while some little expense may be attached to the getting up of the articles necessary to produce the desired effect, it is one of the best paying advertisements to the dealer, for the public appreciate the go-ahead merchant of the present day.—Harry Harman in National Grocer.

EGYPTIAN ONIONS.

Probably no vegetable finding its consumptive outlet in this market is brought such a distance as the Egyptian onion. These onions are grown in very large quantities in Egypt, and have an unusually wide distribution. When in season they can be found in nearly all of the principal European markets, and in many of our markets. From Alexandria they find their way to Liverpool and thence to this market by the Liverpool steamers. The onion is very hardy and is most in demand at this period as when the Bermuda onions commence to get poor at the close of the season, many buyers turn to the Egyptian stock. Two years ago immense quantities were shipped here and the market became so overstocked that prices fell to $1 per bag of 110 pounds. Last season arrivals were light, and this season scarcely any are arriving. European cables report the quantity now in transit at 7,200 bags, 4,600 of which will arrive here this week and 2,600 bags next week. The last important sales have been on a basis of $2.25 per bag, which is 25c. more than was realized last week, and receivers are trying to establish a still further advance in view of the very small quantity expected within the next few weeks, together with common quality of other onions now in market, most of the Bermuda and New Orleans being poor. Advices from Alexandria report fairly large crops, and the scarcity here this season and last is attributed to the increased demand of European markets caused by a shortage of the onion crop in many foreign countries. Present indications point to light receipts throughout the season, which will probably have a favorable influence on the Southern potato onions which will soon be arriving freely from Maryland, Virginia, and other points South. There is a large acreage of potato onions all through the South, particularly along the Eastern shore of Maryland and Virginia, but reports state that the quality is below the standard this year; the weather seems to have been unfavorable and stock has rotted and is otherwise poor. The crop in this State will be very light this year as the season was so late that many growers were unable to plant their usual acreage, and large quantities rotted owing to the wet weather. A shipment of onions is on the way from Texas, and expected to reach here the last of the week. (The Texan onions will be somewhat of a novelty, as very few are received from there, but there should be a good outlet for such stock if they are of good quality. Present arrivals from Bermuda are very poor, many being worth little above cost of transportation, and New Orleans receipts are in even worse order than those from Bermuda. These are about the only onions now in market and after deducting the poor stock it leaves the available supply of choice very small, but on the other hand trade is light, the consumption being far below what dealers claim it should be, and recent attempts to advance the market have not been very successful.—N. Y. Bulletin.

THE ELUSIVE MACKEREL.

If things keep on as they are going the once abundant and despised mackerel will soon exchange places with the trout as a gastronomic delicacy, says The Boston Journal. For four or five years the mackerel catch has been of insignificant proportions as contrasted with the older days, though fleets of clipper schooners, urged on by the high range of prices, have scoured the coast from Florida to Nova Scotia. The mackerel is an erratic fellow. In some years he will come in such overwhelming abundance that it hardly pays the fishermen to catch him. Then for some mysterious reason he will disappear altogether or visit our waters only at long or uncertain intervals. In such a case of course the price of mackerel soars up to amazing altitudes. A down-east paper illustrates these sharp fluctuations very neatly by the statement that while four or five years ago five barrels of mackerel would willingly have been given for one barrel of flour, to-day one barrel of mackerel will buy four barrels of flour. Under these conditions mackerel seining has something of the excitement of gold or diamond digging. A good catch of No. 1s in prime shape for the market may mean a small fortune for the skipper and crew, besides a fat dividend for owners. The hunt for mackerel, therefore, is a welcome relief from the dull drudgery of fishing for cod and haddock. Everything hangs upon the judgment of the masters. Some schooner captains have a well-established reputation as mackerel-killers. They seem to know the localities in the trackless sea where their prey may be found even in seasons of great scarcity, and they will "stock" in an amount of money sufficient to duplicate the schooner they sail in and her own equipment, while other vessels will not earn enough to cover the cost of their outfit and provisions.

THE DEPRESSION IN WHEAT.

The Cincinnati Price Current, remarking that prices of wheat have fallen to a level without precedent since American wheat markets have had any important relation to those of foreign countries, discovers as some of the inducing causes, miscalculations of official reports, concerning the extent of production in this country. Speculation hindering the outgo of the surplus the last six months with the culminating influence of the monetary situation affecting all carrying wheat, whether in warehouse or in the interior. Concerning the future it asks:

"On what basis can calculations as to the future of values be reasonably considered?", and proceeds, "It is plain enough that the winter wheat crop in this country is to be materially deficient—falling possibly 50,000,000 below the average for the past five years, for which period official figures point to 323,000,000 as the average, while it is doubtful if the production this season will exceed 270,000,000. This is not an estimate, not a prediction. The possibilities may be regarded as higher—but not the probabilities, in the light of acceptable evidence. The spring crop is surrounded with more of uncertainty. The start is fairly favorable, and the possibilities may be accepted as approximating the average indicated for the past five years, which official figures show to have been 163,000,000. It is not reasonable to count on a greater production than this, of spring wheat, nor an excess over say about 435,000,000 for the entire crop. This, it should be understood, is not an estimate, but may with propriety be considered as the reasonable basis on which to make calculations as to the future. With the surplus to be carried over the position in this view, will be practically equivalent to an incoming crop of about 5,000,000 bushels without available surplus from the preceding crop.

"This is the fair position to take as to the outlook on wheat supplies in this country for the incoming year. The domestic requirements may be reckoned as 370,000,000 bushels. The exportable surplus 130,000,000, if the minimum production be realized. The exportation for the year now closing will be about 185,000,000 bushels; the preceding year it was 225,000,000 and much smaller previously; for the past five years an annual average of 143,000,000.

"In Europe, the outlook is for an under-average production of wheat this season, so that the chances are that if the production in this country should not essentially exceed the quantity herein suggested, the surplus for the year will in time all be wanted by foreign markets. But no urgency of demand is likely to arise in the early part of the crop year, and only problematically later. Investors, however, will not wait for an urgent demand. They will see the almost certainty of a fair recovery from the abnormal depression now existing, and this will not only check the downward tendency, but help in restoring confidence.

"There is nothing of the staple products of the earth so cheap as wheat to-day. Compare it with gold, with cotton, with animal products, with the market price of labor, and the relative position of wheat is found to be abnormally low. It is the creature of a combination of adverse circumstances and conditions, affected by influences which have measurably spared other products of industry, and the price of labor. A readjustment must be expected."

JAVA TEA.

A correspondent of the Ceylon Observer contradicts the statement that Java teas were allied to high-fired Japans or low Chinas. Some years ago Javas were very fishy in flavor and received a very bad name in consequence, but they have improved vastly since then. They nearly approach Indian in character—especially in leaf which is made after Indian and Ceylon style and not like China leaf. Some Javas have an Indian character in liquor and some a China character. About five years ago a Java tea was sold in London with such a fine China kin-tuck flavor that several brokers could not say from the liquor only whether it was Java or China. As China, it was valued at 2s., as Java at 1s. 3d., simply because buyers were prejudiced against the name of Java. Early Javas were rather thin, but since more Indian jat was planted they are thicker—due to jat of course. If many buyers were not afraid of purchasing Javas in quantity, the price would be higher, but probably even then lower than Ceylon, as we have unusually good flavor here.

The secretary of the Montreal Board of Trade is in receipt of a letter from Richard R. Dobell announcing that he is about to load a small ship for the Cape of Good Hope and will be able to arrange with the captain to send samples of goods should any members of the board so desire. "I am satisfied," he adds, "that a large trade could be done with the Cape in many articles of Canadian produce, but particularly in cheese, agricultural implements and sewing machines." Of all the British possessions of importance, Canada's trade with Africa has been the smallest. The actual trade between Cape Colony and Canada the official returns do not reveal, all the dealings between the Dominion and the British possessions in the Dark Continent being bulked together under the head of imports to or exports from British Africa. The Trade and Navigation returns of last year give $91,487 as the total value of our trade with the African colonies. Of this $69,581 were imports and $21,906 exports. Nearly all the imports consisted of wool, all but $450 worth being in that article. Our chief article of export to these colonies is agricultural implements, of which last year we sent $10,655 worth, while African homes were blessed by Canadian musical instruments valued at $5,025. Doors, sashes and blinds they took to the value of $4,132. We sent them material for creating light in the shape of $1430 worth of lamps and lanterns. Our contribution of mental food was confined to $198 worth of books. It will be seen that while Canada has already opened up a trade with British Africa in one of the articles—agricultural implements—enumerated by Mr. Dobell in his letter to the secretary of the Montreal Board of Trade, in the other two we last year did nothing. Why we should not in the future does not appear. In cheese particularly the present seems to be opposed for introducing it into Africa. At Chicago it has carried off the honors with flying colors, and far and wide throughout the civilized world will the fact be told. While a thing is being talked about it is a good time to push it. Canadian sewing machines have also a record that should warrant their being introduced to the matrons and seamstresses who stitch and sew in Africa's sunny clime.

Things unlooked for often arise as the result of a certain action. This is apparent at the moment regarding the direct steamship line between Canada and Australia. When it became known that the line was to be established the discussion in commercial circles turned on the relative value of the trade and what articles of Canadian growth and manufacture would find the readiest sale in the Antipodes. From this it turned on the question of how best to secure the desired extension of trade. A protective tariff obtains to a more or less extent in all the colonies interested, and it is not to be surprised at therefore that there should have arisen in this country a desire for a reciprocal arrangement whereby existing barriers may be lowered a round or so. Already the Toronto, New Westminster, Victoria and Nanaimo boards of trade have pronounced in favor of it, and, with the press of the Coast, are urging the Dominion Government to move in the matter.

The different colonies in Australia being separate and independent, have not a uniform tariff, and in order to assist those who may be desirous of opening up trade with Australia the Canadian Department of Trade and Commerce has issued a circular showing the customs tariff rates now in force in New South Wales, Victoria, Queensland and New Zealand. The peculiarity of the different modes of arriving at the value for duty of imported goods is also pointed out. In New South Wales, Western Australia, Queensland and Fiji, the value for duty is the value at the port of shipment. In South Australia and New Zealand it is the value at the port of shipment plus 10 per cent. In Victoria goods subject to ad valorem duty are dutiable at their fair market value at the principal market of the country whence they were exported with 10 per cent. added. In Tasmania imports liable to ad valorem duty are estimated at their value at port of shipment with 12½ per cent. added.

Our exports to Australia since 1889 have not been satisfactory. Although in 1891 they were a good deal larger than in 1890, yet last year they fell off over $146,000 compared with 1891, and $221,687 compared with 1889. The imports on the other hand exhibit an increase, the totals being $229,464 in 1889, $205,384 in 1890, $169,065 in 1891, $264,783 in 1892. The increase has been confined wholly to wool, in other articles there being a decrease. In fact outside wool our imports from Australia are practically nil. Now, however, with direct steamship communication the possibilities are bright for a larger trade both ways. The Miowera, on her initial trip brought over a number of articles in which it is thought a profitable trade with Canada can be done, notably among them being oranges and lemons. Notwithstanding that this fruit was hurriedly prepared for shipment it was found to be in excellent condition on arrival. The Commercial referring to a consignment which had arrived at Winnipeg said: "So far as can be judged, by the few samples tested the lemons are superior in size and quality to the California article and at least equal to the highly prized Sicilies. The oranges appear smaller, but are sweeter and less fibrous than the California oranges. Two varieties of apples were included, one a Pearmain and the other apparently a pippin. In texture it is not equal to the eastern apple, and compares with a coast apple in this respect, but has a peculiar luscious flavor that commends it. The pine apples, some of them were imperfect, owing to the packing, but on the whole were sound and of extra quality. The bananas are such as have been always coming via San Francisco, but being imported direct can be sold cheaper without any doubt. So far nothing can be determined regarding the price of these commodities or the rate of freight to overland points, but with favorable rates on the C. P. R., not only British Columbia, but the Territories and the Sound country should be supplied with the above fruits in season, it being presumed that prices will compete with the California products. To ship apples from Australia to Canada, for instance, would look like peddling coals in Newcastle, but Australasia being the antithesis of Canada in many respects, the season for apples there—March, April and May—enables that country to supply us when our own and eastern apples are practically out of the market."

* * *

Favorable is the trade statement for May issued last week by the Dominion Government. It shows that during that month the imports were $12,149,847, and the exports $8,277,768. For the corresponding month last year the figures were $9,424,759 and $7,170,618. The imports for the 11 months are valued at $109,462,587, an increase of $10,161,682; and the exports at $101,815,370, an increase of $5,208,959. The duty collected in the 11 months amounts to $19,307,774, an increase of $1,789,522 compared with the same period a year ago. A comparison of the present report with that for May, 1892, shows that the imports of grain were in value over 50 per cent. larger, while in flour they were about that much smaller, although in actual number of barrels the figures were 3,381 and 4,093 respectively. Rice and all other breadstuffs increased from $16,900 worth to $86,708, candles from $2,261 to $3,694, chicory from $783 to $1,214, coffee from the United States from $2,248 to $4,791, fish from $19,341 to $23,057, dried fruit from $48,445 to $52,138, green fruit from $44,884 to $61,794, salt (not imported from Great Britain or British possessions or for Gulf fisheries) from $3,203 to $6,261, spirits of all kinds from $63,782 to $87,559, sugar above 14 D.S. from $4,973 to $13,193, molasses from $53,829 to $57,795, tobacco and cigars from $23,985 to $32,117, tea from U.S. from $3,632 to $6,079. Among the decreases were hops from $11,716 to $8,397, soap of all kinds from $20,687 to $13,019, spices (ground and unground) $21,129 to $19,110, starch $5,759 to $4,292.

TALKING ABOUT OUR CHEESE.

The success of Canada's cheese exhibit at the World's Fair is being talked of nearly everywhere. Canada has long had a reputation for good cheese, but everybody was surprised at the result of the competition in Chicago. Even the most sanguine of Canadians themselves never dreamed that with 162 cheeses exhibited they could carry off 126 out of a total of 135 medals and diplomas offered as prizes. And we are all looking at Canadian cheese in much the same manner as admirers look upon their champion who in the athletic field has achieved some feat far beyond their expectations—in wonderment. Even our competitors are not backward in adding their meed of praise.

Canada is a great cheese country, and were it not for the fact that we had already selected as our national emblem the beaver we would be attempted to adopt a cheese as such. As it is however we are content to keep the beaver unmolested in its honored position, for were not the characteristics of the beaver—industry and perseverance—the characteristics of the Canadian people we would not have captured so many of the honors at the Columbian Exposition.

Canadian cheese has not attained her present enviable position in the markets of the world without the expenditure of energy. Hard and long was the row she had to hoe. At one time the Provinces brought their cheese from the United States, and although we have not exactly turned the tables we last year got from them less than one-half the amount they bought from us. During the past thirty odd years the cheese trade of the Dominion has advanced by leaps and bounds. In 1860 we exported $13,675 worth; $674,486 in 1870, $3,893,366 in 1880, $9,372,212 in 1890, and for the year closing March 31, 1893, $13,687,851. A peculiarity of the exports of the last named year was that they were in millions of dollars what they were in thousands 33 years before. As is well-known, nearly all the cheese we export goes to Great Britain. The Canadian High Commissioner, in his report prepared in January last, says:—"Canada now occupies the position of sending more cheese to Great Britain than any other country. The total value of the imports for the year just ended having been £5,417,770, of which Canada's share was £2,493,625, as against £1,961,407 from the United States." Judging from the result at Chicago, the Canadian article is still gaining on the American.

The number of cheese factories in Ontario in 1890, the latest data we have to hand, was 817, and in Quebec something like 670. There has, however, been an all-round increase since then. Prof. Robertson has been industriously trying for some time to improve the make of cheese in the Province of Quebec. How well he has succeeded is demonstrated by the fact that that province carried off 52 of the medals awarded at Chicago. To Ontario there fell 69 and to the Maritime Provinces 5. Of the cheese of the make of the present season 20 lots from Quebec won medals as against 1 from Ontario. According to the figures of the year already referred to Ontario manufactured 79,364,713 pounds of cheese from 836,387,516 pounds of milk given by 304,584 cows. The value of the cheese made was $7,189,957.

The judges were John H. Hodgson of New York and A. F. McLaren of Windsor, Ont., and both were appointed by the Exposition Committee on Awards. They are well known, and as judges of cheese enjoy the highest reputation on the continent. There is no doubt therefore that Canada has won on her merits, and the victory, a knowledge of which has been or is being scattered to all parts of the world has given Canadian cheese the best advertisement it ever got.

In our exuberance over cheese we must not forget that Canadian butter also did surprisingly well. Notwithstanding that we only had 25 exhibitors in this line we won 13 medals, not bad at all for a country whose butter has not had the best of reputations abroad. Out of the thirteen medals awarded twelve went to the Province of Quebec, mostly to the County of Brome. Knowing that she possessed all the natural advantages Canada has of late years been going into butter-making with fresh vigor and she promises to be in butter what she is already in cheese—the producer of the best article in the world.

CANADA AND THE WEST INDIES.

There are expectations in Montreal that still another line of steamers will shortly increase the communication between Canada and the British West Indies. It is the general belief among fruit men in Montreal that the fruit trade of the port has only commenced its development, and that increased facilities of communication between the West Indian fruit centres, as well as those of the Mediterranean, is all that is required to start the ball rolling. Besides the line running from Montreal already, there is a line running to New York controlled by Montreal parties, and if they can secure the requisite governmental support they are willing to bring their steamers round to Montreal. Besides, the Montreal Board of Trade have backed up the representations of Mr. Wm. Vipond that his line at present running should receive a subsidy of some sort. The fruit trade however as a whole are opposed to this because the firm in question are actually sellers of fruit. If they got support therefore from the Government other firms would be discriminated against. The trade however are in favor of a subsidy to any parties who are simply in the carrying business and that alone. The fact that there is money in the venture is attested by the fact that money was made on every single consignment of fruit last year, while the present season so far has been successful also.

CHATS WITH BUSINESS MEN.

"Mark my words, you'll see D. W. Weismiller, of Hensall, sitting in the Ontario Legislature as member for South Huron," said a traveller to me Saturday. "Why do I think so? Well, I'll tell you. He is clever and a jolly good fellow to boot, and what is more, his friends want him to represent them. But what makes me think that it will not be long before he will have M.L.A. tacked on to the end of his name is this: This week I was up through his part of the country, and on all the billboards along the roadways I saw big flaming posters announcing that D. W. Weismiller, the gifted orator of Hensall, was to deliver a lecture on temperance. Now, knowing the circumstances, don't you think that Dave is preparing for the fight?" added the C. T., as with a wink he stuck his thumb into my ribs. "O, yes, Dave's a great boy."

I asked J. H. Devaney on Saturday last how he had found business on his route during the week? "Good—improving rapidly—especially since the Grits formulated their platform—effect on the country wonderfully reassuring," he replied with a laugh. Mr. Devaney, you know, is classified among the good Grits.

The City Travellers' Association of Toronto and the Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association will hold their annual picnics at Niagara Falls on the same date, July 19, Messrs. Maxwell, Owen, Dack and Macguire, representing the former, and President B. Winniffrith, J. O. Carpenter and W. R. Harvey, representing the latter, were all at the Falls on the same day last week making arrangements. "We're going to have a big time," said one of the Toronto men to me. "The Hamilton people told me that they would have the celebrated 13th Batt. band and at least three thousand people. We are going to have Ghoni's string band and—a big crowd"

* * *

"There," said a friend of mine as he stuck under my nose a rocky-looking substance, similar in appearance to asbestos, "is something that will interest you. What is it? Why, it is a piece of talc—or, to be more technical, a piece of silicate of magnesia. I was over in the States the other day"—and here the nasal twang he had cultivated while there became pronounced—"and I was informed that a new industry had sprung up in northern New York State to grind this into powder for adulterating flour. And there is a sample of the powder," he added as he carefully unfolded a piece of paper containing a powder of almost dazzling whiteness. "It's perfectly uninjurious," he explained. "Will pass through you without doing you the slightest harm. But it's heavier than flour. You can thus see the object they have in mixing it with that article. Is any of it being used in Canada? I think so. At least I have taken the pains to investigate, and I am told that a mill for grinding the silicate is being started in Belleville. There's tricks in every trade but ours," concluded my friend as he carefully stowed the powder in one pocket and the stick of talc in the other.

BYSTANDER.

INTERESTING TEA STORY.

DEAR GROCER,—Facts are stubborn things and inferences are sometimes dangerous; seeing and believing is to know that you are right and not mistaken. Yet there are some persons so peculiarly constituted that they will not believe facts, and although they may be proven and even convicted that they are wrong, yet they will persist in saying and doing just the opposite to their convictions, for sheer cussedness. I suppose it comes from a morbidness of spirit.

I am pleased to read in your last issue (particularly so at this juncture), on page 32, a clipping from "A correspondent of the Ceylon Observer" on Java tea, which bears out my statement conclusively that Java teas are very useful teas, if care is used in selecting them; and here let me say that, in my opinion, it requires no more care or attention to select a sweet Java tea than it does any particular kind of Ceylon or Indian, a Kin-tuck, Hankow, or Foochow Congou, which may be required, but as in all other teas, so with Java, it does require care and attention in selecting them, and without giving this attention the best of judges sometimes are likely to make serious mistakes. Of course, it must always be allowed that some buyers and sellers of tea know very little about any kind of tea which they may see or have for sale. For instance, some few weeks ago a certain reputable, old established King street grocery firm, who do a large tea business, asked for samples of a low priced Kangra, which were scarce at the time. A certain salesman styling himself a broker (I mean no reflection upon him as such) undertook to find one if it was to be had. He procured a sample from a well known wholesale grocery firm, receiving the sample from one of the principles himself, who gave the broker the cost price of the tea—or supposed cost—and selling price as well. The broker took the sample as a Kangra in good faith and then proceeded to show it to the retail buyer, who accepted it as a Kangra and took a day or two to examine and to liquor it, and at last purchased five packages at his own offer. The tea was delivered and corresponded with sample shown by the broker, and it would have been all right and no doubt satisfactory to all parties concerned, had not an opposition broker, who feeling very jealous and very sore at not getting the order, happened to spy the marks on the packages (because there had been no attempt to disguise them), he with another confrere, told the purchaser that it was not a Kangra at all but an Indian of the poorest kind, which was true, and the packages proved the statement in making known the estate from whence the tea came, but the most funny part of the story is this, the broker who sold the tea had been fooled—badly fooled if he did not get his commission for selling the tea—and the very particular buyer himself got fooled also, and the two assiduous informers included, because not one of the crowd could tell it from a Kangra in leaf and in testing it in liquor. But when it was discovered to be an Indian tea of the Dorha Doon district it was returned to the wholesale firm, who for encouraging such a transaction, I think, should have their name placed on the "list" or "blackboard." This is only one instance of many having occurred in our midst. The inference which may be drawn from this little story I shall leave for your readers to ponder, and in closing let me remark that some dealers have much to learn yet in teas. Yea, we all have much to learn yet about tea, and those who imagine that they possess such superior knowledge and that theirs is the only encyclopedia on tea, I am afraid as they grow older and learn more they will have to confess that after all tea is somewhat of a hidden mystery.

Respectfully yours,

STEPHEN HUSTWITT.

Toronto, June 24, 1893.

THE POWER OF CREDIT.

Although a hundred years ago the meaning of the term credit carried with it but little significance, conditions have gradually grown to be such that now without credit business would practically cease says Ohio Merchant. Contract credit and you diminish trade, for it and it alone is the adhesive material with which commerce is cemented. The humblest tradesman or the broadest speculator feels its power and recognizes its importance. As each year goes by the scope of it widens, and although it started, according to the oldest traditions, in the form of personal accommodations, it now shapes the course of nations.

In mercantile life fully ninety per cent. of the heavy transactions of to-day are made upon some form of credit, and while the individual duration of credits may have shortened somewhat in recent years, the amount of it has been greatly increased. Its advantages over cash transactions are, in one sense, so great, that were it not for this system of extended payment probably not one-half of the present business could be done, while the accumulation of wealth would be rendered many times more difficult.

To the tradesman the condition of his credit, and to what extent it is good, is of the utmost importance, and anything which has a tendency to reflect upon its strength is particularly avoided. It is not a characteristic, but a condition, and there are many elements upon which it rests. Of these honesty and ability rank as foremost, and without these qualifications the obtaining of it is almost impossible. Many tradesmen, although possessing the former, are yet unable to obtain credit because lacking of the latter. The man of good intentions is a most common individual, but good intentions, unless backed by thorough ability, are worthless as an inducement for being allowed time.

To gain the stepping-stone of long extended credit a man must thoroughly understand his business, and in all his operations harmonize honesty and forethought with ability and determination. Smart men are not rare, nor is it at all difficult to discover perfect honesty; hence the combination of these two all-important factors in the large majority of tradesmen, whether large or small, has produced the real basis of credit. The extension of it in this country, which is far in advance of that in some nations, was created, however, by causes born of necessity as much as by an inducement to increase business.

When our cities were yet young the pioneers did not, as a rule, carry much collateral in their belts, and as a consequence the mutual dependence incident to primitive conditions created a common confidence which in a large measure constituted the basis of credit in those early days, which has only increased with successive years. To what extent it will eventually reach is of course only a conjecture, but even at the present time it is the ruling power in commerce. It never knocks at the door of the indolent, nor lingers in the shadow of indecision, but to the able and progressive it forms the stepping stones to success.

HINTS ON CURING AND SMOKING.

So far as the greater part of the smoked meats in this country are concerned, the process called "washing" is a misnomer and a failure. We doubt very much if one person in a thousand could tell the so-called "washed meat" from unwashed. Possibly it eases the conscience of the smoker to go through the motions; at any rate, it does no serious injury to the meat. Sufficient labor is spent on the process to do good work, but the water is never carried warm enough to cut the briny residue (from the salt), slime and greasy substances adhering to the surface of the meat. To make a strictly first-class article it is necessary that the dirt be removed, and to effect this the water should be kept at a temperature of from 150 to 180 deg., and changed as often as possible. It is also a good plan to use a little soda, borax or boracic acid in the water—it helps to cut the grease and the two latter act as a fly preventative to a certain extent, even though the sweating in the smoke house will partially remove any such application made before smoking. It is customary for the stringers when through with the meat to press it into the wash tub, and as the washers are compelled to immerse their hands and arms in order to get hold of the pieces, they cannot, without great great discomfort, carry the water hot enough to be of any practical use. In the British Islands they keep the water fully up to this temperature—150 to 180 deg.—but the washer holds the meat by the string and alternately dips and scrubs it until thoroughly cleaned. That process would be too slow in this country, and we would advise those who have power to procure a meat washing machine. There are two such machines in use, either of which do better and cheaper work than can be done by hand.

The prettiest and most appetizing meats we have seen are those in the bacon shops of England. The meats, after being carefully washed and the "raggles" trimmed off, are hung in a drying room with a very moderate fire of coke, having a little sulphur on it. The effect of this is to make the fat a chalky white, the skin almost transparent, and give the lean a bright cherry color.

We think there is still a good deal of room for improvement in the handling of smoked meats, and that with these improvements will come a very much increased consumption. Formerly Board of Trade regulations discouraged advances in the line of cutting and curing, as it was no benefit to be better than "regular," but the advent of a few foreign houses with their more careful methods in our domestic smoked meat trade compelled our home packers to give us an article very much superior to the dirty, hairy, salty, grimy stuff of a few years ago, when it was customary, instead of stringing the side, to make a slit and poke the dirty stick through it. Pork products do not yet hold the position they ought to and can hold if treated carefully and wholesomely, and we hope the competition and emulation of the smokers to obtain a reputation for their "brands" will keep increasing until bacon is as much the rich man's friend as it has hitherto been the friend of the poor man.—National Provisioner.

CANNED GOODS AND CONSUMERS.

It is not the province of the hard-worked grocer to waste time and patience in instructing his patrons regarding the properties of the different classes of goods that he handles, although it has occasionally been suggested by the trade press that he should do so. Life is too short for that, and it would perhaps behoove some dealers to take a preparatory course of education themselves. There ought, however, to be no objection to grocers generally posting their customers as to the qualities and grades of the more staple goods, because unless some such information is given the consumer there may be little chance of the dealer disposing of high grade and most profitable goods. There is one department of the grocery business regarding which much ignorance exists outside of the grocery trade, and that is canned goods. The average housekeeper is entirely unaware of the fact that many different brands, and not only different brands but different grades, are annually packed in this country by the canners, nine out of ten women ordering canned goods from their grocer without mentioning either brand or quality desired. "A can of peas" or "a can of peaches" is the usual form of the order when given by even intelligent women, and as one result of their ignorance of the astonishing variety of grades is that the lowest-priced and commonest goods acquire a larger demand than their merits deserve, it would be to the grocer's interests to enlighten them. If the common goods always gave satisfaction little harm would be done. Unfortunately they often do not do so, but set the consumer dead against everything put up in tins. Owing to the advertisements that are placed in vehicles that reach consumers by several of the more enterprising packers of extra goods, a comparatively few housekeepers may have become familiar with the merits of these brands, but the proportion of such consumers is very small. There are, besides, only relatively small quantities of special brands kept in stock by most grocers, and an education of customers regarding the merits of a single brand, while a good thing for the canner is not desirable for the dealer, who will soon run out of the same. What the grocer should do is to inform customers that there are various grades of quality in canned goods as in teas, coffees, etc., and he should offer the goods according to quality, and not according to brand. It might be a good plan for grocers to grade canned goods in their price lists and on their shelves, naming extra goods "first quality," good standards "second quality," and inferior standards "third quality," and keeping each grade in a separate place on the shelves under a prominent label or sign. Respectable jobbing houses afford retailers full information regarding the quality of canned goods, or, if not, the price of the label informs the dealer; but most consumers purchase according to the gaudiness of the color or artistic design of the labels on the cans, while their ignorance of the wide range of quality and price makes them too often the prey of the unscrupulous dealer.—Merchants' Review.

THE SMYRNA RAISIN TRADE.

The representative of the French Government at Smyrna, in a recent report to his Government, says that the demand for Smyrna raisins is constantly increasing, and Smyrna, Tchesme, Vourlah, the valleys of Meandre, Caistre, and Hermus are now covered with vineyards. Nearly all the raisins produced are exported, only a small proportion being retained for home consumption. The cultivation of the vine does not present any peculiar features; the soil is of itself productive, and by its natural richness compensates for the absence of intelligent systems of cultivation. It is only of late years that the introduction of certain European systems of cultivation has been effected, and this is due partly to the development of the railways and partly to the initiative of foreign growers, more particularly of a German company owning large vineyards in the province.

The gathering of the grapes commences usually in August, and the drying is effected by spreading them on the ground, where they remain for eight or ten days, and during this period it is of considerable importance that the season should be a dry one, as rain, by the prejudicial effect it exercises upon the grape, is greatly feared; fortunately, however, for the process, the month of August is usually fine and dry. This primitive treatment is the only one to which black raisins are subjected with a view to drying them, but for red raisins it is necessary to take greater precautions, as the latter are more easily spoiled. These are dipped in a composition of water, cinders, potash and oil. Dried raisins, according to quality, nature, and origin, are divided into different classes. The sultanas, which are consumed as table fruits, and used also for confectionery, are chiefly exported to England, America, Austria, and Germany; and these sultanas comprise several varieties, known by the names of the places in which they are produced, as, forexample, Carabournon, Vourlah, Tchesme, Phoce, and Yerli. Black and red raisins (rosaki) are chiefly sent to France, and used by grocers and distillers, and these again are divided into two classes—large and small fruit.

There are black raisins for eating and for wine-making—for the latter they are much sought after—and the white muscat raisin, which has a good appearance, and of which considerable quantities are sent to Germany for use in making vermouth. The small fruits are comprised under the generic term of Thyra. The Thyra raisins, to use a generic term, compose the bulk of the exports to France, and these are black in color with a slight bluish tint. In connection with the shipment of these raisins no previous manipulation of any complicated character is necessary; they come from the interior in bags, and as they are generally mixed with earth and other foreign bodies, the bags are emptied and carefully examined with a view to removing the exteraneous matter, and also to see if the raisins are of the desired quality. In the latest year for which statistics are available the value of the exports of dried raisins from Smyrna amounted to £708,000; in this amount England was represented to the extent of £300,000; France, £300,000; Austria-Hungary, £40,000; Germany, £20,000; America, £12,000; and Russia, about £8,000.

For some time past a considerable fall in the price of raisins has been observable, and this fall is as much as 40 per cent. in the case of ordinary raisins on the average prices of past years. For raisins of superior quality, which are much in demand, and the prices of which should consequently remain pretty firm, the fall in prices has reached as much as 25 or 30 per cent. Dried raisins have many uses; they are employed as table fruits, in pastry-making, in confectionery, and in the manufacture of wine known as dried raisin wine; they enter into composition of ordinary wines, and in the preparation of fresh grape wine they help to enrich the must, thus fulfilling the duties of sugar. Distillers use them in large quantities, and the white muscat raisin is in great demand in Switzerland and Austria for the making of vermouth, while the sweet wine which is sold under the name of Samos wine is made with the dried raisins of this particular district. The residuum of the manufacture of dried raisin wine—the less—have also their uses, as from these is made a kind of brandy known as mastic, which is much appreciated by the inhabitants of the Smyrna district. In the interior the lees are sometimes used for feeding cattle and poultry. In France they are employed in the manufacture of carbonate of potash, and in the departments of the Miçi, Herault, Gard, and Aude, by introducing thin strips of copper in masses of lees a subacetate of copper is formed, which is used in industry. Vinegar made with less is considered excellent, and, finally, they contain all the elements necessary for making a good manure.—London Grocer.

MUSTARD CROP PROSPECTS.

Owing to the dry season the mustard crop prospects are hardly so bright as might be desired, especially upon the heavy lands. Much damage has been done in places by the fly, and in certain districts, our Wisbech correspondent states, there are less than twenty acres of really good cropping where there are usually a hundred. From the marshy parishes in the Fen district better reports come, and it is probable that the seed which is harvested will be of a good quality, as it should be, with the fine bright sunshine which prevails. So far as can be ascertained, white mustard will again be the best crop. It is stated that one large grower of mustard in South Lincolnshire had to plough up some of the brown seedlings in consequence of their unpromising appearance; he has, however, been able to sow a second crop, which looks better. Mustard-growing ought to be profitable, even with drawbacks, which are inevitable in the case of any agricultural crop, and a bright harvest, with absence of windy weather, may put things all right for everyone.—Grocer.

GROCERS AND GROCERIES.

It requires a combination of business qualities to make a successful grocer, says Pennsylvania Grocer. He must be a good judge of the commodities which he handles, must have a knowledge of values, and must know the peculiarities of his customers. Possessing these gifts, and paying strict attention to business, his chances for a successful career are good.

There is a sort of fashion in groceries, as in dry goods and other articles. What is popular and active in one place may be dead stock in another. A Liberty street wholesaler said the other day that he had a great run on a certain brand of canned corn in West Virginia, but found very little sale for it in Ohio, where another brand was all the go. Neither of these brands suited the Pennsylvania market. It is the same with almost everything. Flour and coffee are conspicuous examples of this diversity of tastes, as shown by the multitude of brands and blends that are in the market.

The grocer must study and cater to these peculiarities of taste to be successful. He may, by persistent effort, overcome local idiosyncracies; but if he be a wise man, as his calling demands, he will follow the wishes of his customers and keep his own ideas in the background.

The closer the grocer studies these things the better for him. He cannot do as he pleases. He will find it more popular to follow than to lead. If he wants to play the role of a reformer he must work very carefully, or he will arouse such antagonism as will make his position very uncomfortable. He must insinuate his personality into the community. He cannot do it by direct attack. By pursuing this policy he may effect valuable reforms in the tastes and manners of his patrons.

HAMILTON BOARD OF TRADE.

A meeting of the Hamilton Board of Trade was held Monday afternoon to nominate officers. President Lottridge declined re-election. The following nominations were made: President, A. T. Wood, J. M. Lottridge, St. C. Balfour, J. J. Mason, Archdale Wilson, H. N. Kittson and John Milne; vice-president, St. C. Balfour, J. J. Mason, Archdale Wilson, H. F. Gardiner, Alexander Turner and William Young; secretary, C. R. Smith; members of the council for three years, W. H. Classco, J. Hoodless, A. Gartshore, St. C. Balfour, John A. Bruce, W. A. Robinson and A. Wilson; board of arbitration, J. Turnbull, John Calder, F. H. Lambe and Robert Thomson. The election will take place next Monday.

STRAWBERRY CROP RUINED.

An Oakville, Ont., despatch of the 26th inst. says: Farmers in and around Oakville are bewailing themselves this morning, for all their fond hopes of a heavy fruit crop this year have been dispersed at one fell swoop. The storm that struck the strawberry town last evening about 5 o'clock was heavier than any in the memory of the oldest inhabitant, the hailstones came down in a fast and furious manner and completely depleted the trees of their store of young fruit, while the strawberries for the Toronto market will be more conspicuous for their absence than for their flavor during the coming week. The road to the pier and the Lake Shore road near the bridge were both washed out and made quite impassable for vehicles.

CROPS IN MANITOBA.

The Manitoba Government has just issued its first crop bulletin of the season. The subjoined statement gives comparison of acreage with last year:

Acres.	1892.	1893.
Wheat.....	875,990	1,003,640
Oats.....	332,974	388,529
Barley.....	97,644	114,762
Potatoes.....	10,003	12,387
Roots.....	17,498	20,919
Fallowed for crop.....	250,255	274,588
Fall ploughed.....	325,717	473,410

These figures show a considerable increase over last year's average. Taken by districts the southwestern district shows the greatest increase of acreage, due to the impetus given by the extension of branch railroads during the past year there. Potato and root crops are also largely increased over last year. There are nearly 13,000 acres planted with potatoes and 21,000 with root crops. The area under rye is 2,229; under flax, 9,637, and area under corn, peas, etc., 1,059. The total area under all crops is 1,533,262 acres, while that of last year was 1,341,270 acres, showing an increase of 211,992 acres. It is pleasing to notice that there is a decided increase in the number of acres fallowed, while special attention was given to fall ploughing. So much land being prepared for seed last fall has enabled the farmers to put in seed this spring in a very short period of time. Over 5,000 men are now employed as hired help, and reports indicate that about 2,000 extra men will be required to assist in taking off the harvest. It is expected that these 2,000 men will be obtained from Ontario and Quebec. The wages paid for hired help run from $15 to $25 per month with board. The bulletin reports great scarcity of female help, and every inducement will be offered to secure females from the eastern provinces. All reports agree that the crops promise magnificently, and that the growth has been phenomenal. The weather has been particularly favorable, and continues to be.

THE NEW PETROLEUM ACT.

The amendments made to the Petroleum Inspection Act go into effect Saturday next, and meanwhile an order in council has been passed declaring the following as the ports at which tank cars with petroleum for illuminating purposes may be imported, subject to such regulations for the protection of the revenue as the Department of Customs may establish, namely:

Ontario—Toronto, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Whitby, Oshawa, Owen Sound, London, St. Thomas, Stratford, Brantford, Guelph, Galt, Berlin, Sarnia, Cornwall, Prescott, Smith's Falls, Perth, Ottawa, Pembroke, Kingston, Belleville, Port Hope, Peterborough, Brockville, Napanee, Fort Erie, Sault Ste. Marie, Port Stanley, Port Arthur.

Quebec—Montreal, Quebec, St. John's, St. Hyacinthe, Sherbrooke, Sorel, Joliette, Three Rivers, St. Jerome, Coaticook, Stanstead, Fraserville, Rimouski.

New Brunswick—Sussex, St. John, Moncton, Fredericton, Chatham, St. Stephen, Edmundston, Woodstock.

Nova Scotia—Halifax, Truro, Pictou, Yarmouth, Sydney, Lunenburg, Antigonish.

Manitoba and the North-west Territories—Winnipeg, Brandon, Calgary, Lethbridge, Regina.

British Columbia—Vancouver, Kamloops, New Westminster.

His Excellency is further pleased to order that petroleum in packages of 50 gallons or less may be entered at any duly established custom port, and at all such ports when no excise officer is present or available. The duty of inspection shall be performed under the supervision of the Collector of Customs for such port.

The amending Act of last season makes important changes in the tariff of inspection fees. For both Canadian and imported oil the charges are made uniform, which is a large reduction on the American product.

For instance, a package containing from 10 to 50 gallons will only cost 10 cents, instead of 30 cents: a package containing from 5 to 10 gallons, 5 cents instead of 10 cents, and less than 5 gallons 2½ cents in place of 5c. Oils intended solely for use as lubricants and unfit from their properties for illuminating purposes, are exempt from inspection, but the packages in which such oil is contained must be conspicuously marked or branded "non-illuminating."

THE PRUNE CROP OUTLOOK.

The prune crop of Bosnia and Servia presented a rather doubtful appearance early in the season owing to the prevalence of drought in the growing sections, but the weather subsequently improved, and now the reports come of a more encouraging character, with the crop put down as likely to be of an average quantity. These reports of more favorable prospects are confirmed by Messrs. Louis Ritz & Co., Hamburg, and Sig. Singer & Bruder, Budapest, both advising: "Wet weather, and prospects much improved."

From Bordeaux most flattering reports are submitted of the probable yield of French prunes this season. One authority writes:

"At the present time it is impossible to speak with certainty about the coming crop of French prunes, as, with the exception of damage from hailstorms, which might affect the quality without reducing the quantity, this crop has nothing more to fear."

"The maturity of the fruit is nearly a month in advance of the average, and it is anticipated that the markets will be fairly well supplied by the middle of August; goods will thus be ready before they are generally wanted, which circumstance is a great factor in favor of low prices."

"There is already some sellers here of the four sizes for September delivery at 30 francs, but prudent buyers point to 25 francs as being a more reasonable basis."

From another reliable source the following report is received:

"After having sent a representative into the interior for the purpose of forming an opinion on the prospects of the prune crop, we are in position to inform you from our own knowledge that some will turn out very large, there being, with the exception of only a very few small districts which have suffered greatly from vermin, almost as many prunes as leaves on the trees. Owing to the fruit having attained the half of their final size, we are as good as certain that these splendid prospects will not be thwarted, and we reckon that the crop will definitely result as large as we are arguing, especially as the weather continues very favorable."—N. Y. Bulletin.

Since navigation opened large cargoes of hay have been going out of Montreal weekly and the shippers have realized handsome profits. A number of English buyers have been through the country buying up all the hay they could find.

The council of the Montreal Board of Trade has decided to postpone the formal opening of the new building until about September. This action was deemed advisable owing to the unfinished state of the building and the absence of a number of the members of the board, who in this warm weather spend their time out of town. The opening will be celebrated by a banquet and other festivities. A large number of delegates will be invited from the various cities in Canada and the United States. It is expected that the Earl of Aberdeen will also attend.

The crop of strawberries in Essex county is an enormous one, and during the past few days they have dropped from 10 to 5 cents a quart. Some think they will go lower in price, but the dealers say not and that the harvest will be over in a few days. They claim that the crop has ripened very rapidly.

The Vermont Maple Sugar Laboratory, closed for the season, has weighed for inspection 4,759,762 pounds. The amount of bounty will be in the vicinity of $72,500. This covers the product of all the New England States. The Vermont bounty will be close to $70,000.

The deposits in the postoffice savings banks of the Dominion during May amounted to $669,710, and the withdrawals to $546,412. In the Government savings banks the month's deposits amounted to $289,179 and the withdrawals to $320,236.

Sea fowls' eggs have one remarkable peculiarity—they are nearly conical in form, broad at the base and sharp at the point, so that they will only roll in a circle. They are laid on the bare edges of high rocks, from which they would almost surely roll off save for this happy provision of nature.

It is officially shown that the total immigration from Japan into the United States from 1861 to 1892, inclusive, has aggregated 5,271. During this time many of these have returned and some have died, so that the present number of Japanese in the United States is quite inconsiderable.

Put pulverized potash, which soon become sticky when exposed to the air, in all the rat holes about the house. The special detestation of a rat is anything which will stick to its silky coat. Some persons find a mixture of equal parts of cayenne pepper and Scotch snuff sprinkled well into the holes still more efficacious.

The growth of the orange industry in Florida has increased from a production of 600,000 boxes in 1885 to 3,900,000 for the season just closed, and according to conservative estimates the coming crop will be fully 5,000,000 boxes, of which over 4,000,000 will be marketed. The average price received by growers the past season was $1 31 per box.

The catsup business is growing to be an enormous industry in this country, and the use of the piquant sauce as a stimulant is a possibility of the future, judging from the following indorsement from a washerwoman, which the manufacturer of a certain brand declares is the strongest tribute that his product ever received: "Yes, mum, I'm strong, but that tomaterketch-me-up is a help.

Russell Sage once kept a grocery store at Troy and invested his surplus funds in a bank, of which in the fullness of time he became a director. It is said that he now has more ready money than any individual in Wall Street, and that he could draw his check for twenty million dollars and get it cashed.—Merchants' Review.

Those who growl about the vacation "fad" forget that it cannot reduce the volume of business. It merely transfers a large portion of summer trade to spring and fall. People must eat, drink and wear clothes wherever they are. The additional luxuries of travel and summer outing provide employment for a host of wage earners that become themselves consumers.—Ex.

A queer story is related of a druggist in Richmond, Va. He will not sell cigars on Sunday, but his stock of chewing tobacco is always open. His explanation for this method is simple. Plug tobacco, he says, is tobacco proper, and is mentioned in the pharmacopœia as a drug and medicine. Cigars are not recognized as such. His motto must be "Medicines Only Sold on Sunday."

The young Boston Clerk who helped himself to his employer's securities very likely was underpaid. But the re-employment of him at an advanced salary, after his confession of his weakness, is something of a novelty in the "fitting of the punishment to the crime." It recognizes one thing, however, and that is the moral responsibility of employers who place large financial trusts in the hands of poorly paid employees.—Ex.

Business men complain of a number of dead beats, chiefly young men, who run up bills here and there and then refuse to pay. Some of them clear out of town and the others who remain brazen it out. It is of little use to invoke the law, as it entails expenses, and a dollar a week is about all that can be collected from them at best by a judgment summons.—Tribune, Deseronto.

The favorite examples of meanings out of joint are Irish bulls (so-called), and their name is legion. "'Tis better to be a coward for five minutes than dead the rest of your life," affirmed an Irishman in the witness-box. A Kerry man who fell down on a mountain walk exclaimed, with satisfaction, "Glory be to God that I wasn't walking back over the mountain a dead man!" And Sheridan Le Fanu has furnished a gem—"The only way to prevent what's past is to put a put a stop to it before it happens." In much the same way an Irish tenant observed that "it was a hard thing for a man to be turned out of the house which his father built and his grandfather was born in."

An Ottawa despatch says: J. B. Spence, of Ceylon, made an arrangement to-day with the local agent of the Rathbun Company for a trial shipment of shooks for the construction of tea boxes. Of all the woods submitted Mr. Spence favored the Douglas fir, of British Columbia, which he considers vastly superior to the wood now obtained from Japan. Shipments of fir box shooks can be made direct from British Columbia to Ceylon, and Mr. Spence believes is that the trade will soon become one of the most important branches of our labor industry. The tea trade of Ceylon will require about 1,000,000 boxes yearly.

Operators in wholesale parcels of staple groceries have, as a rule, been able to carry supplies fairly well during the financial strain, and forced realizing was an exception. Nevertheless, the depressing influence of continuous dull trade could not be entirely avoided, and a gradual shading off of valuation has brought the cost line very low on some of the leading articles below a parity of rates ruling primal markets. There has been no want of appreciation of that fact among the local trade, but difficulties in the way of obtaining assistance for carrying has acted as a restraint upon investment for either regular purposes or in a speculative way. Foreign capital, however, has of late commenced to recognize opportunities, and has made investment in spices, rice and coffee in some cases to be held here for a rise, and in other instances to go forward and seek sale on the markets abroad at an assured margin for profit.—N. Y. Bulletin.

It does not take the average Chinaman long to learn all the ways of the most civilized Caucasian when he gets in contact with them. Not long ago about fifty Chinamen were arrested in New York city and brought before the bar of justice at one of the police courts. The cause of this wholesale arrest was the discovery that many Chinamen were found to have in their possession long strips of brilliant paper covered with the usual hieroglyphics so common on laundry tickets. The strips were supposed by the sleuth-hounds of justice to be some kind of new lottery tickets. The justice before whom the prisoners were brought was unable to decipher this Mongolian hand-writing and was inclined to send them all up for thirty days, when the court interpreter read over the ticket and pronounced it to be a circular of a grocery firm in Mott street, which offered to give a prize of a teapot to the person buying the most goods from the store during the following week. Thus do our Chinamen learn quickly that advertising pays.—Business.

Newly-married commercial's wife: "Promise me, John, that you will not get into any terrible railway accidents, or be burned to death at a hotel. Promise me that, John, or my heart will break." John promised faithfully that he would not.

He: "There isn't enough on this breakfast table to feed a canary bird." She: "I know it, my dear; but there are several things I want you to order in town, and I know you'll forget all about them unless you leave the house hungry."

A certain man's wife heard him in the adjoining pantry making explosive remarks. "What are you doing, my dear?" she asked.

"Opening a can of tomatoes," he answered.

"What are you opening it with?" she asked sweetly.

"With a knife," he replied savagely. "Did you suppose I was opening it with my teeth?"

"No. From the language which you used I thought you were opening it with prayer."

Mr. Billus (looking over the grocer's bill.) Four dollars' worth of strawberries in one week! "Suffering Job, Maria, do you think I'm made of money? Mrs. Billus—Don't agitate yourself, John. You'll shake that $25 meeschaum out of your pocket.—Chicago Tribune.

The merchants who sell dry goods and what nots in the country stores have some odd experiences. One of them, a live fellow from Delanco, N.J., was buying goods in a Front street wholesale grocery establishment Tuesday, and he told a good many tales of the flow of trade up there. "A bright, healthy and somewhat fleshy woman came into my store t'other day," he said, "and asked for garter elastic. 'How much?' I asked. 'How much will it take?' says she. I was floored. I didn't know what to say to get out of the dilemma. I had to say something in a hurry, and blurted out: 'How should I know?' 'Why, to be sure,' says she, and I'll be hanged if she didn't measure right there, and she bought a yard and a quarter."—Philadelphia Grocery World.

Since the emancipation of the slaves in Brazil, it has been almost impossible to get the requisite labor done on the plantations, and it is estimated that the government lost about ten million dollars last year through the inability of the planters to gather the coffee berries. It is now proposed to engage about 100,000 Chinamen annually, for a term of years, to work on the plantations, and a Brazilian agent is at present on the way to China for that purpose. The Brazilian government favors the scheme, and will negotiate a treaty to protect the imported laborers. A line of steamers will be established to carry sugar, cocoa and rubber from Rio de Janeiro to Shanghai, and bring back rice, coal and coolies.

A great many storekeepers only advertise when they want to get rid of shopworn, out-of-date or unsaleable stock. They advertise the goods in glowing terms, announce unprecedented bargains and congratulate themselves on their ability when they have emptied their stores of all refuse. The public, however, finds that it has been more or less victimized, thinks that all goods in said stores are of like undesirability, and passes by to rival establishments. The best plan is to advertise for a reputation and not for a store scouring.—Printers' Ink.

During warm weather it is necessary to have green hides salted promptly or they will spoil, but hides can be shipped green in the winter season in a frozen state without salting. To cure a hide properly it is first necessary to trim it by cutting off what does not belong to the hide, such as horns, tail bones and sinews, then spread the hide on the floor and sprinkle salt evenly and freely over the flesh side. In this way, pile one hide on the other, flesh side up, head on head, tail on tail. Stretch out the flanks and legs so as to give the hides a chance to drain. It will take a week or more to cure hides thoroughly.—Ex.

A couple of years ago an Augusta, Me., grocer spoke of the fact that his customers were constantly expressing a desire for old-fashioned cookies and gingerbread. His wife's skill in cooking is noted, and in her spare time she cooked a large batch of these toothsome dainties and persuaded her husband to put them on sale. They instantly want and the demand was for more. Now when she bakes for home use she works as well for the store, and there is a constant demand for her culinary products that is just about four times as great as the supply. In less than two years she has sold about $600 worth of gingerbread and cookies.—American Grocer.

THE FIRMNESS OF SUGAR.

The sugar position continues as interesting as ever. The prospect of a lower range of prices seems to be as distant as early in the spring when the strong upward tendency of the market commenced to make itself felt in a most unmistakable way. In fact, as a leading Montreal wholesale merchant put it to THE GROCER correspondent the other day, circumstances right along have combined to intensify the strength of the market as the season progressed. In the early spring there was a rush of excited buyers who had held off a little longer than they should, and this, coupled with the fact that refiners would only sell a short way ahead, owing to the strong support they had, made buyers even more urgent. Then came reports of a shortage in the Cuban crop, while each day's advices reported increasing firmness in beet. All this had its effect, and finally when the SS. Craig-side with a cargo of sugar for one of the big Montreal refineries went down near Halifax manufacturers at that centre grew even more independent in their views. Besides having the outside support mentioned previously, they knew that the preserving season was coming on and of course this strengthened them still more in the idea that they were entitled to higher values. With all these influences operating there has been a steady upward march in their prices. Last April before the move started refined sugar sold at 4 1-2c., and buyers were under the opinion that they would be able to get all they wanted at that price. That this was a fallacy the present price of the article attests, for today granulated is firm at 5 1-2c. at the refineries, or a full cent above what it was two months ago, and the very inside price on yellows is 4 1-2c., with bright stock running as high as 5 1-4c., according to grade. Raw sugar has of course been equally firm, and cables this week from across the water state that the price of beet has again advanced, with the prospect of a still further rise owing to the drought and the tendency of the sugar market generally. Consequently nothing is the word in Montreal, while in addition to it all the expectation is that owing to the heavy crop of strawberries and other fruit the low prices will lead to increased preserving by housewives, and so materially add to the consumption of sugar. This fact is making buyers more anxious about supplies and business shows a tendency toward expansion which would be marked only that the cautious course pursued by the refiners acts as a check.

TOO MANY CANNED STRAWBERRIES

"The demand for canned fruits has slackened off so much during the last couple of years," said a handler to THE GROCER Wednesday, "that they have been a drug on the market. Packers, particularly of canned strawberries, have this year had to carry several lots over. The plain fact of the matter is that there is not the outlet for them, the people having to a large extent quit using canned fruit. Even at low prices there is practically no great demand. Now this is a fact, and I know it, for we have had canned strawberries this last two years which we cannot get rid of. One firm on the street, so at least I understand, is even offering the very best quality of strawberries at $1.30 per dozen which would easily cost the packer $1.60 to put up. Over in the States for the same class of goods as these the packers get $2 to $2.10 a dozen. However, as long as packers continue to put up large lots of these goods they will continue to be sacrificed."

PERSONAL MENTION.

John Northway of J. Northway & Co. Orillia, will start for Europe shortly on his accustomed annual buying trip.

John Sloan of Sloan & Crowther and quarter-master of the Governor-general's Body Guard, is out at camp with that corps at Wells' Hill.

Mr. Dixon, manager for Beatty & Co., St. Mary's, sailed for London, Eng., last week on a buying trip. The firm does a large general jobbing trade, but Mr. Dixon goes to buy dry goods.

Mayor H. Telfer of Telfer Bros., Collingwood, was in Toronto Saturday last with the lacrosse team of that town, which under his captaincy did battle with the Toronto's for the inter-mediate championship.

W. Burgess of Bala, was in Toronto last week. Before returning home he left a large order for fancy groceries which he expects to find customers for in the tourists that will this summer stream into Muskoka.

J. F. Eby of Eby, Blain & Co., who injured his knee about three weeks ago while out riding, was down to business again Tuesday, the first time in over two weeks. He is not yet able to put his foot to the ground.

Mr. Hickey formerly of Wilson & Hickey, Woodstock, is now city traveller for Lucas, Steele & Bristol, of Hamilton. "I think he is going to do well from what I can hear," said a traveller to THE GROCER. "And so he should, for he's a decent fellow."

DRY GOODS.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

Despite the fact that the present is the the interim season between the summer and fall trips, the week has presented a moderate degree of activity in dry goods. Travellers are now out, and, although it is rather early as yet for their report to be a reliable gauge, yet they are encouraging. Buyers, however, show caution, and the trade as a whole doesn't expect them to show their hand very plainly in regard to fall supplies until after the first or second week in July, by which time a pretty fair approximate estimate of what the coming crop possibilities are can be made. It is worthy of note, though, that the city retail trade continues active, and that the demand which we have noted from week to week for all wool challies, prints, etc., is still apparent and not to be ignored. Some good letter orders from the country have been another satisfactory feature. Payments, however, have given considerable reason for complaints which is the most disturbing factor.

There were some handsome lines of shot and tartan silks opened up by Messrs. S. Greenshields & Son last week.

Gault Bros. expect a brisk demand for box cloths and ulsterings this fall, and have been receiving some good lines of them.

Mr. Wm. Agnew, of Wm. Agnew & Co., anticipates a good demand for cashmeres this fall. The firm make a specialty of this line, and fine dress goods.

TORONTO MARKET.

This week has been a fairly brisk one in the dry goods trade. There is no doubt that the volume of trade for June will surpass that of June, 1892, although that was an extra good month. The enquiry for all classes of summer goods has been very lively, and many kinds of stock are being cleared out. If the sorting trade continues for a few days longer wholesalers' stocks will be in excellent condition, as the strong demand during the past three weeks has lightened them at a most surprising rate. The tone of the trade this week is much more refreshing than it has been for several months.

A noticeable feature in the clearing of summer stocks is the fact that it has not been necessary so far to modify prices, except in a very few cases. There has been a marked absence of slaughtering, a feature which must be pleasing to both wholesaler and retailer. The only fault to be found with this trade is that some June sales have been dated October 1st, a foolish and disastrous proceeding.

Mr. J. S. McConnell, wholesale dry goods merchant, of Vancouver, B.C., has been visiting this market. He reports the dry goods trade as being in a very flourishing condition in that city. He also claims that the passenger traffic between Winnipeg and Vancouver is greater than that between Toronto and

The Elgin Dairy Report, published at Elgin, N.Y., in their issue of February 15, 1892, has a special article to the butter makers of America advising them against the use of American or domestic salts for butter or cheese. This article applies to Canadian salts as well, and coming from the highest Dairy Authority in America it will pay you to ponder over it, and — profit by it:

HOW SALT AFFECTS BUTTER.

"It is a well established fact that the quality of butter and cheese is either enhanced or destroyed by the influence which pure or impure salt has upon them, and dairymen cannot be too careful in the selection of their salt. Within the last few years several new brands of so-called dairy salt have been forced upon consumers as 'just as good as any salt in the market,' and in some instances the lower price, outward appearance and good looks of these salts have tempted them to give them a trial. When butter is fresh the effect of the salt on its quality is not perceivable, but after a week or two the chemical impurities of the salt begin their work, and the merchants and dealers in cities, who carry large supplies of butter, find their butter rapidly deteriorating in value. The English and other Continental markets are being lost by our exporters as the butter will not stand shipment across the ocean and has to be disposed of on arrival for what it will bring. A canvas recently made among New York butter houses resulted in over one hundred of them expressing themselves unanimously in favor of the English dairy salt as the only safe salt for the dairy, because it imparts keeping quality and flavor and preserves the aroma of the butter."

Montreal, and that the trains in that district are very crowded. He seems very proud of his province.

John Macdonald & Co. have received a shipment of brush mats in fancy and plain, and in the various sizes.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have a restock of tan, cardinal and cream hosiery in cotton, fancy lisle and silk. These are very scarce goods.

W. R. Brock & Co., in order to make room for fall goods, have reduced the prices of ladies' blouses. Nearly the whole stock has been placed at a price which enables them to be retailed at 50 cents each.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. show an all-wool blazer flannel in a good assortment of stripes at 12 1-2 cents per yard.

John Macdonald & Co. have just opened a range of 33-inch gingham with and without borders. Oxford shirtings are also to hand. Flannelettes have been re-stocked, and their range is again full. Linen ticking 58 inches wide is in great demand in this house at present.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. are showing a range of stain stripe flannelettes at 8 cents. They call this the best line of flannelettes ever offered in Canada.

Wyld, Grasett & Darling have passed into stock a large range of neckwear in fancy four-in-hands and knots. The designs and patterns are very new. Several cases of black neckwear have been opened up, and their range of price and variety is thus again complete. Several cases of cotton neckwear for immediate delivery are to hand.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. offer a choice lot of art muslins at 4 1-4 cents per yard; a leader to wake up the July curtain trade.

W. R. Brock & Co. are showing their full importation of boating shawls and evening wraps direct from Berlin, Germany. Besides a large range of fancy knit and canvas shawls, their lines of honey-comb in all colors to retail at 50c., 75c., $1, $1.50 and $2 are exceptionally good value. Their shawl called "Dollar," to retail at that price, is far better value in style, weight, size and finish than the same line last year.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have two special lines of English plate prints which they are clearing at 6 1-2 and 8 cents, the latter 32 inch and standard quality.

W. R. Brock & Co., having had immense success this past season with cotton ribbed underwear, have been induced to make still greater efforts for fall in this class of goods. They particularly wish the trade to examine their large range, which is good value all through, especially their numbers, "Lowline," to retail at 15 cents; "Startler," extra heavy weight, shaped, at 25 cents; "Ohmy," a buttoned-front line, at 50 cents; and "Ida" and "I.X.L." at 75 cents. All these varieties have long sleeves and are extra large sizes.

Gordon, Mackay & Co. have recently received 3,000 pieces of job Victoria lawn (bleachers' damages) which they offer in ten-piece lots at 6 1-2 and 10 cents per yard. They guarantee the value of this purchase.

W. R. Brock & Co. have just passed into stock in their British woollen department, new things in neat effects in blue shades in small stripes, suitable either for suitings or trouserings. In their Canadian woollen department they have stocked all the shades in three quarter worsteds. These are in large demand at present for bicycle uniforms.

Caldecott, Burton & Spence have received a special line of velveteens in black only; price 37 1-2 cents. They claim that this line is extra value, and are sending out samples to those asking for them.

John Macdonald & Co. have a delivery of the celebrated Titania dress shields, covered both sides. In their haberdashery department this week has seen the following lines re-stocked, and ranges are now complete in: Beads, whalebones, beltings, velvet bindings, leather-stitched braid, agate buttons, pearl buttons, millinery and tailoring buckles, Japanese tooth brushes, black silk and chenille cords, Featherbone, Thomson's, Brush's, and other corsets, dressing, pocket and fine combs; elastic; H. B. and skein embroidery cotton; Daisy and cretonne fringe; bone case, seam binding and galloons; lace pins; hat and hair pins; brooches and sundry jewellery; silk dress laces; boot laces; purses; pompons; thimbles; yardsticks and tape-measures; trimmings, and a complete stock of Berlin and other finishing wools.

A VERY BAD CUSTOM.

The custom of a large number of people when they visit grocery stores of nibbling this, that and the other thing, while giving and waiting for their orders to be filled, cannot be discontinued too soon, says Pennsylvania Grocer. It is not only in bad taste to say the least, but is an imposition upon the grocer. He sells on a very small margin of profit, and cannot afford to "throw in" a handful of crackers, a bunch of raisins or an apple.

This custom, in another form, has been carried to such an extent in New Orleans as to excite a combined movement among the grocers to put it down. Customers had become so bold that they were not content with little pilferings from the boxes and baskets within their reach, but demanded something extra with every purchase. For instance, with 10 cents worth of crackers the grocer was expected to add enough butter to eat them with; with a loaf of bread he was expected to give a slice of cheese and so on. This was called "lagniappe," which is synonymous with extortion, for extortion it was, pure and simple. The system finally reached such proportions that the grocers in the quarter where it was practiced combined to suppress it. The result is not known here, but it is earnestly hoped the effort has been successful.

Pittsburg grocers, both wholesalers and retailers, are troubled with the same class of people that afflict their brothers in New Orleans, but they have not yet screwed their courage up to the point of making a forcible resistance. But they may be compelled to do so. A retailer in a nearby town, who was troubled with a customer of this kind made him pay for what he had taken. A few more examples of this kind would soon break up the custom.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, June 29, 1893.
GROCERIES.

A fairly good seasonable trade is being done, but taking it all round there is not so much activity as a week ago. This applies to all lines. The situation however seems to be gradually improving as far as soundness is concerned; the prospects for good cereal and fruit crops are becoming more assured, and merchants, both wholesale and retail, continue to move cautiously. Payments too are well up to the average. The easier feeling in sugars in New York has naturally affected this market some, although seemingly not enough to materially effect its strength. A little more enquiry is reported for Japans, but other kinds of teas are quiet. First samples of Indian teas have arrived. There are a few Valencia raisins moving but otherwise the dried fruit market is quiet. Nothing particularly new has developed in the canned goods trade except it be that the feeling is a little better.

COFFEE.

There has been no material change during the week. The movement here has been confined to a few bags here and there. The New York market has been quiet and featureless, the financial conditions have checked business. We quote as before: Rio, 19½ to 21½c.; East Indian, 27 to 30c.; South American, 21 to 23c.; Santos, 21 to 22c.; Java, 30 to 32c.; Mocha, 26 to 27c.

DRIED FRUIT.

Stocks of Valencia raisins here are getting into smaller compass all the time, but the volume of business is scarcely up to the average. The idea for off stalk is still 4 to 4½c. a pound for seconds, 5¼ to 6c for fine; layers, ordinary selects, 6¾c.; fancy selects, 7 to 7½c. according to quality. Demand is fair for Sultana raisins at 5½ to 7c. There are very few currants moving but the market is devoid of any special feature; ordinary fruit sells at 5½ to 6c. and good at 6 to 6¼c. Prunes quiet with 7¼ to 8c. as the idea in cases. Dates dull and unchanged at 5 to 5½c.

NUTS.

Trade continues seasonably quiet. Ivica and Fornigetta almonds and Chilis walnuts are out of the market. Marbots walnuts are quoted 1c. lower at 11½ to 12c. Pecans are quoted higher at 13½ to 16c. We quote: Brazil nuts 11 to 11½c. a pound; Sicily shelled almonds, 32 to 35c. a pound; unshelled, 16 to 17c.; peanuts, 13 to 14c for roasted and 11 to 12½c. for green; cocoa nuts, $5 to $5.50 per sack.

RICE AND SPICES.

There is a fair trade doing in rice, particularly in low grades running from 3½c. up.

There is a little doing in old spices for pickling, but trade generally in this line is quiet and unchanged. Whole ginger is quoted at 20 to 25c.; pure white pepper at 20 to 28c., and pure black at 14 to 16c.

SUGAR.

The demand has fallen off somewhat and, comparatively speaking, there is more doing in carlots than in five and ten barrel lots. There is still, however, a good many sugars moving, but although not to the extent anticipated. The feeling is easier outside, centrifugals having dropped from 11-16 to ¼c. in New York, but this is held to be merely a move on the part of the Trust to bring the price of raws to a point nearer their views. At any rate the Canadian refiners are as firm as ever, to outward appearances at any rate, and will neither shade prices nor make contracts. Among jobbers, however, there is not that same unanimity of opinion as a few days ago regarding the possibility of further advances in prices. At the same time, however, prices are still firmly held and there is no immediate prospect of a change either one way or the other. Granulated is still held at 5½ to 5¾c., and the idea for yellows is 4½ to 5¼c.; a dark yellow is being offered by a couple of houses at 4¾ to 4½c. Rawes are quoted at 3¼ to 3¾c.

Willett & Gray, New York, in their Weekly Sugar Statistical, says: Rawes and refined unchanged. Receipts, 17,313 tons. Meltings, 25,000 tons. Total stock in four ports, 81,027 tons; against 88,714 tons last week and 185,744 tons last year. By cable: Stock in Havana and Matanzas, 135,000 tons, against 144,000 tons last week and 185,734 tons last year. The six principal ports of Cuba give for the week: Receipts, 4,000 tons; exports, 10,000 tons; stock, 214,000 tons, against 220,000 tons last week and 264,835 tons last year. Total stock in all the principal countries, 991,827 tons, against 1,327,150 tons at same dates last year. Afloat to the United States from all countries estimated, 70,000 tons, against 80,000 tons last year.

Rawes—Since the business reported last week there has been another very quiet state of the markets while waiting for a renewal of the demand. Every day during the week centrifugals to a moderate extent were for sale at 4½c. and buyers bid 1-16c. less, with occasional sales of other grades at quotations, and at the close the position is unchanged, but with buyers showing rather more indifference owing to various temporary causes. A sale of molasses sugar to-day shows ¼c. decline from last sales, and a similar reaction may be expected in centrifugals. This reaction may prove only temporary, being caused by special circumstances and not by any change in the general situation.

Refined—It is evident from reports from all over the country that grocers are selling all the sugar they can and buying as little as possible, thus the consumers are drawing largely upon what is called the "invisible stocks," which we estimate to be not less than 60,000 tons refined at this time more than the average.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups remain much as before—dull and unchanged at from 2¼c. up. Molasses is without special feature, with 32 to 40c. as the idea for Port Rico and New Orleans brands.

TEAS.

New season's crop of Japan teas continue to come in in better supply, and they are in consequence commanding more attention. In other kinds of teas the market is absolutely dull. The first samples of new season's Indian teas have been offered for sale on this market simultaneously with their being shown on the London market. This is unusual. The Indian market has opened a little lower than last year. We quote: Japans (1892-3)—Low grade and common, 15 to 18c.; medium, 18 to 20c.; fine, 20 to 25c.; new Japans, 30 to 32c. for medium and 32 to 35c. for fine. Blacks—Low grades congous, 14½ to 16½c.; medium, 18 to 23c.; fine, 30 to 45c.; fancy, 60 to 70c.

BUTTER AND CHEESE.

The market has developed more strength during the week and we now quote higher prices. Good dairy butter is scarce, holders waiting for higher prices, while demand is good. For good tubs and pails 14 to 15c. is the idea, while a fine dairy would probably fetch 1c. more than the outside figure quoted. Much the same applies to large rolls. Dairy pound rolls are wanted at from 15 to 17c. Creamery butter is in plentiful supply, but there is not much doing in it, people preferring the dairy article at 3 or 4c. a pound less. We quote creamery tubs at 20c. and pound prints at 20 to 22c.

There is a fair local demand for cheese at easier and lower prices than a week ago, namely 9½ to 10c. a pound.

COUNTRY PRODUCE.

BEANS—Continue quiet with offerings a little more liberal. Prices are unchanged, jobbers paying $1.30 to $1.35 and selling at $1.40 to $1.50.

DRIED APPLES—There have been more enquiries for car lots, but it does not seem to have led to any business. Ordinarily the price jobbers are willing to pay is 4c., and they are selling lots at 4½c., but for small lots they want 4¾ to 5c. There are some car lots being held here at 5c., and holders say they will carry them over rather than accept a lower figure.

EVAPORATED APPLES—The market is pretty well cleaned out of evaporated apples, and there are none offering. Jobbers are getting 9c.

EGGS—Supply and demand are about equal. The buying continues of a hand-to-mouth character, and prices are steady at 11½ to 12c.

HONEY—Remains as before, with trade dull at 5 to 8c. for extracted, the outside figure being for white.

POULTRY—A few spring chickens and ducks have been arriving this week, for which jobbers have been getting 60 to 70c. for the former and 65 to 80c. for the latter.

POTATOES—The market is sick. Carloads of new potatoes from the States are beginning to arrive on track here and they are selling at $3.50 to $3.75 per barrel. Old potatoes are nominally worth 75c. per bag on

DELHI CANNING CO.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.

Nothing particularly new has developed during the week, although if anything there is a slightly better feeling regarding prices. Demand for tomatoes continues good, and there seems to be nothing obtainable on the street under 85c. Peas are in fair demand and stocks ample; prices range from 80c. up. With most houses, however, 85c. is the lowest figure, and the goods quoted below that are for brands not so well known. Corn is gradually working into smaller compass, and some houses have been completely cleaned out, and to supply their customers have found it necessary to purchase of fellow jobbers; 85 to 90c. is the idea, although there are less known brands that can be obtained at 80c. Peaches are selling fairly well at $2.10 to $2.25 for 2's and $3 to $3.25 for 3's. The market is almost cleaned out of 2's and 3's. There is not much call for plumbs at the moment, and stocks are ample; $1.45 to $1.55 is still the idea. Gallon apples are in good demand at $2 to $2.25; 3's are quoted at from 85c. to $1. We quote pumpkins lower at 90c. to $1 for 3's. Raspberries are higher at $1.90 to $2.10 for 2's. Strawberries show a decline of 15c. to $2 to $2.10 for choice 2's. Demand for salmon is increasing while stocks are gradually getting into smaller compass. Prices are firm. We quote first-class stock at from $1.50 to $1.75 for talls and $1.70 to $1.80 for flats; second-class stock in talls can be got at $1.40 to $1.45. Lobsters is in fairly good demand at $1.90 to $2.10 for talls and $2.50 to $2.70 for flats. A good seasonable trade is being done in canned meats.

MONTREAL.

A very fair demand is noted for canned fruits, peaches being in very good enquiry. The supply of fruits is not large at present, and prices are steady in consequence. A moderate enquiry is noted for meats, but vegetables are generally lower in price, tomatoes being weak in tone owing to heavier receipts.

track, and bags out of store are quoted at 75 to 85c., but sellers are willing to take almost any price they can get.

ONIONS—There is no change, Egyptians selling at $2.50 to $2.75 per bag and Bermudas at $2.50 per crate.

HOPS—Market unsettled. Some small lots of Canadian have been moving at 17 to 18c., but large lots could be probably got 2c. less.

HOGS AND PROVISIONS.

The market for dressed hogs is dull, the hot weather naturally checking the demand. Prices are, however, if anything a little better than a week ago. Demand continues good for smoked meats at steady and unchanged prices.

BACON—Long clear, 10½ to 11c. Smoked backs 12½c., bellies, 13½ to 14c. rolls 10½ to 10¾c.

HAMS—In good demand and firm at 13 to 13½c. for smoked.

LARD—Pure Canadian is 13c. in tubs, 13¼c. in pails and 12¾c. in tierces. Compound 10 to 10½c.

BARREL PORK—Canadian heavy mess $21, Canadian short cut $22.

DRESSED MEATS—Beef fores are 5 to 5½c., hindquarters 9½ to 10c., mutton 7 to 9c., lamb 15 to 17c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Trade has been exceptionally brisk this week, people getting ready for the holiday. Strawberries are receiving the most attention at the moment, but there is a big demand for lemons at higher prices. Oranges have also been in good request. Bananas are firmer, and they are selling freely at quotations. Watermelons are beginning to arrive, and they are selling freely at 40 to 50c. each. There is a plentiful supply of California fruit on the market, but they are not receiving much attention. This market is cleaned out of apples. We quote : Oranges—Messinas, ½ boxes of 80's $2.25 to $2.50; ½ boxes of 100's. $2.50 to $2.75; lemons, $4.50 to $5.25; bananas, $1.50 to $2; pineapples, extras, 17c., No. 1 15c., No. 2 12½c., No. 3 10c.; apples, $2.00 to $2.50 for ordinary stock and $3.00 to $4.00 for choice to fancy; strawberries, 4 to 9c.; tomatoes $1.00 to $2.00 per crate; peas, $1.10 to $1.25 per bag; cucumbers, $1 to $1.25 per basket, and 75 to $1 per dozen for St. Louis; beans, $2.25 to $2.50 per crate; cabbage, $2.50 to $3 per crate. California fruit—Apricots $2.75 to $3, peaches $2.50 to $2.75, cherries $1.75 to $2

FISH.

Trade in fish continues good at unchanged prices. We quote : Fresh sea salmon, 15c.; skinned and boned codfish, 6½c.; Labrador herring, $3 per half bbl.; shore herring, $2.75 per bbl.; Digby herring, 11 to 12½c.; boneless fish, 4c.; boneless cod, 7 to 8c.; pike, 5 to 6c.; perch, $2 to $3 per 100 as to size; blue back herring, $2 to $3 per hundred; blue pickerel, 4 to 5c. a lb.; yellow ditto, 7 to 8c. a lb.; shad, $3 a dozen; salmon trout and white fish, 7 to 7½c.; eels, 6 to 8c. a lb.

HIDES, SKINS, TALLOW, WOOL.

HIDES—Market demoralized. There is no enquiry, and while 5¼c. is being asked for good buff selections, less would probably be taken.

SKINS—Calfskins are dull and unchanged at 7c. for No. 1 and 5c. for No. 2. Lamb skins are quoted as before at 35c. and pelts at 20c., while wool skins are nominal at $1.25 to $1.50.

MARKETS—Continued.

TALLOW—Quiet; jobbers are paying $5\frac{1}{4}$ c. for rendered and selling at 6c.; rough, unchanged at 2c.

WOOL—Easier. Dealers are paying 17c. for new washed fleece wool, 18 to 19c. for fine, and pure Southdown 20 to 24c., rejections 12 to 13c., unwashed 9 to 10c. The mills are still well employed, but while they are free purchasers in the country they are not taking much wool from dealers.

MARKET NOTES.

Hires' root beer is quoted 25c. a dozen higher at $2 25.

Parlor matches are quoted 15c. higher at $1.75 to $1.80.

Davidson & Hay have their second shipment of Robert's jellies and creams.

Davidson & Hay are now handling golden cottolene in pails, tubs and three pound tins.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. are offering canned strawberries at $1 30 per dozen for best quality.

New Shell Castile soap, 3 lb. bars, is offering at reasonable figure by Lucas, Steele & Bristol.

Eby, Blain & Co. are in receipt of a consignment of "cotton bale" brand shrimps in pound tins.

Davidson & Hay have a shipment of Morton's fresh herrings and sprats, in tins, to arrive in a few days.

Warren Bros. & Boomer are offering a special line of salmon in flat tins below the ordinary market value.

Davidson & Hay have found it necessary to re-order Hires' root beer, the sales having exceeded their anticipations.

Eby, Blain & Co. have received a shipment of boneless smoked dry herrings with all objectionable parts removed.

Advance samples of the first shipments of new season's Indian teas, from Calcutta, are in the hands of Steel, Hayter & Co.

Another consignment of Blue Mountain coffee has been received by Balfour & Co., Hamilton. They claim it pleases everyone.

T. Kinnear & Co. are offering canned goods at reasonable prices, particularly such seasonable lines as chicken, ham, tongue, cornbeef.

Dawson & Co. this week received a car of extra fine watermelons. It is said to be the finest that has reached this market for years.

The boneless herrings Lucas, Steele & Bristol are offering to the trade are meeting ready sale. They are packed two dozen boxes in a case and retail two boxes for 25c.

James Turner & Co. are scoring a great trade in quarter dollar teas. Their travellers have only had samples of these special lines for a week, but they are meeting with wonderful results. All buyers are glad to pay the price, 18c.

Dawson & Co. wish to say that they are sold out of the cheap lemons advertised, and as prices have advanced all round they cannot replace to sell at price advertised, but are in a position to fill orders as low as any house in the trade.

Balfour & Co., Hamilton, have now in store new season's Japans. They have also extra values in Darjeelings and Ceylons at close prices.

J. Beeton, grocer, King and Sackville streets, has moved to more spacious premises at Power and King streets, previously occupied by J. Murphy. Increasing business necessitated the removal.

Frank Magor & Co., 16 St. John street, Montreal, are handling an assortment of night lights, made by the Clark's Pyramid & Fairy Light Co., London, England. These goods are in great demand among the people going to sea-side resorts for the summer months.

"Our advertisement in last week's GROCER regarding Valencia raisins," says H. P. Eckardt & Co., "has brought in a large number of orders, and although we have been sending out such big quantities we are still in a position to fill all orders that may be sent in."

Davidson & Hay, Eby, Blain & Co., Eckardt & Co., and Sloan & Crowther have all placed orders with Wright & Copp for Pettijohn's California Breakfast Food. Though only a short time on this market it is taking very well. Being made of select and pure Sonora white wheat freed from hulls, bran and other foreign substances, the rolled flakes of the true grain are rich in phosphate matter and nutriment so valuable to the weak and nervous.

Henry Michie, of Fergus, lately senior partner of William Hay, Kincardine, has retired, the change going into effect June 1. The business will be carried on as previously under the style of William Hay, merchant, by William Hay alone.

The Pettejohn California Breakfast Food Co., of Minneapolis, have sent their representatives Messrs. Byron and Arthur Easterbrook to assist their agents Messrs. Wright & Copp, to introduce their California Breakfast Food. They are distributing sample packages in the various grocery stores and private houses, and are meeting with great success. They are to visit Hamilton and London, when Toronto is completed, and no doubt will be well received.

MONTREAL MARKETS.

MONTREAL, June 29, 1893.

GROCERIES.

With the exception of an evident desire on the part of buyers to place their orders for sugar the grocery market here during the past week has not been active, especially as the prospect of two holidays this week has interfered with business. Despite the quietness, however, there are several interesting features to the situation. Prominent in this way is the marked firmness of sugar,

FLOUR AND FEED.

TORONTO.

Dullness continues to rule in the flour market. There have been sales during the week of straight roller at $3 west, $2.81 to $3.15 Toronto freights. Manitoba flour is easier. Oats are in fair demand and higher, and the same remarks apply to mill feed.

FLOUR—City millers' and dealers' prices are: Manitoba patents, $4.20 to $4.25; strong bakers' $3.75 to $3.90; white wheat patents, $3.50 to $3.90; straight roller, $3.15 to $3.20, low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25; Ontario family $3.15 to $3.40.

Car prices are: Toronto freights—Manitoba patents, $4.00 to $4.15; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.70 to $3.85; Ontario patents, $3.50 to $3.60; straight roller, $2.85 to $3.10; extra, $2.65 to $2.70; low grades, per bag, $1.00 to $1.25.

MEAL—Oatmeal is $4.10. to $4.30 Cornmeal is $3.25 to $3.50.

FEED—Bran (ton lots) $13.00, do (on track) $11.50 to $12.00, shorts (ton lots) $15, ditto (on track) $12.50 to $13; mixed feed $20 to $22, feeding corn 57 to 58c., oats 38½ to 39c. on track.

HAY—Baled timothy quiet and unchanged. We quote $10 to $10.50.

STRAW—Demand poor and prices unchanged at $5.50 to $6.

MONTREAL.

There has been a fair demand for export enquiry for flour during the week, and quite a few good sized lots have been put through on this account. In a local way the demand is good, also, patents going out well, while low grades are in fair demand. We quote:—Winter wheat, $3.90 to $4.10; Manitoba patents, best brands, $4.10 to $4.15; straight rollers, $3.30 to $3.35; extra, $3 to $3.15; superfine, $2.60 to $2.90; Manitoba strong bakers', $3.65 to $3.80; Manitoba strong bakers', best brands, $3.85 to $3.90.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

Flour—Market dull with a downward tendency. Dealers all seem stocked and some have given low prices to make sales. Manitoba, $4.95 to $5.00; Ontario high grade, $4.15 to $4.25; medium patents, $3.85 to $4.00.

Oatmeal—A fair inquiry and prices steady at $4.40 to $4.50.

Cornmeal—Is reported lower, though prices quoted are unchanged at $2.65 to $2.75.

Feed—Somewhat easier at $21 to $22.

which gives indications of going even higher. Tea on the other hand shows a disposition the other way, and sales of new crop have been made at comparatively low figures, while a broker here is authority for the statement that direct cables from China have offered black teas at very low c.i.f. prices in Montreal, lower, in fact, than ever before. In other lines there is nothing special to mention, as business has been very dull. Syrups are a slow sale and molasses are quiet. Spices remain about as they were, and the same is to remark about coffees. Payments still give some cause of complaint, this being the most unfavorable feature, for the general expectation seems to be for a good trade during the balance of the summer and fall.

SUGAR.

The sugar market holds steady both for raws and refined. Refiners have moved some round lots of stock, but on the whole the market is quiet and quoted firm at 5 1-2c. for granulated and 4 1-2 to 5 1-4c. for yellows, according to grade. The demand on preserving account is beginning to make itself felt, but the refiners are not inclined to book any heavy orders at present prices.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.

Syrups are a slow sale on the basis of 2 to 2 1-4c. per lb. in the wood for Canadian, while American has been placed at 18 1-2 to 19c. per gallon here.

The molasses market does not show any change. The latest quotation from the Island is 12c., which is equal to about 30c. on spot. The combine is still asking 33 to 34c., but jobbers outside of it are cutting on these prices.

TEAS.

The tea market is quiet. A few lots of new crop Japans have sold at 22c. The first arrivals show poor quality in leaf and are poor in cuts as compared with last year. A small business is reported in blacks, one lot of congous, about 400 packages, changing hands at about 12c.

COFFEES, ETC.

There is no change in coffee, which rules quiet and unchanged. We quote: Jamaica, 19 to 20c.; Maracaibo, 20 1-2 to 22c.; Rio, 19 to 21c.; Java, 24 to 28c., and Mocha, 25 to 28c.

Spices show no change, Jamaica ginger selling at 16 to 18c. for common, and 20 to 24c. for the finer grades. Black pepper rules at 8 to 9c., pimento at 6 1-2c., and nutmegs at 50 to 52 1-2c.

RICE.

There has been a good demand for rice, with prices steady. Millers' quotations for straight lots are as follows: Ordinary, $3.85 to $4; Japans, $4 to $4.50; Patnas and Carolinas, $4.50 to $6.50.

DRIED FRUIT.

The market for dried fruit has been fairly active, and importers have been moving several good-sized lots of off-stalk Valencias at 3 1-4c. for round lots, values for jobbing quantities showing, of course, a proportionate advance on this price. Currants are quiet at 5 to 6c.

GREEN FRUIT.

Green fruit has furnished a steady business during the week with prices much the same. Oranges have been in good demand at $2.75 to $4, and half-boxes $1.65 to $1.90. Lemons rule rather firm as a large lot was taken off this market by an American buyer during the week, and we quote $3.50 to $4 for choice and $2.75 to $3 for good sound stock.

Pineapples are scarce and firm at 12 to 20c.

Bananas are in good demand at 75c. to $1.50 per bunch.

Strawberries are a glut on the market and sold on Monday and Tuesday as low as 1 1-2c. a box. All the warehouses and markets are literally choked up with them.

BEANS.

Beans are unchanged, Western hand-picked moving at $1.60 to $1.65, and ordinary at $1.25 to $1.50.

HONEY.

There is no change in honey, extracted selling at 6 to 8c., and comb stock 9 to 13c.

HOPS.

Hops rule dull and easy. Good to choice stock has been moved in a small way at 17c., and poorer qualities at 14 to 15c.

POTATOES.

The feeling in potatoes is firm, car lots being offered on track at 80 to 90c. for medium.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market is slow. Lard and smoked meats are moving slowly, and pork is neglected. Canadian short cut, per bbl., $21 to $22; mess pork, Western, new, per bbl., $22.50 to $23; hams, city cured, per lb, 12 1-2 to 13 1-4; lard, Canadian, in pails, 12 to 12 1-4c.; bacon, per lb., 11 1-2 to 12 1-2c.; lard, common refined, per lb., 10 to 10 1-2c.

EGGS.

The egg market is rather dull and quiet, while receipts are not large. We quote prices steady at 11 to 12c.

CHEESE AND BUTTER.

If anyone expected a change in the disposition of the cheese market last week they were disappointed. The tone as shown by the business transacted was steady, and the way prices have been put up and maintained since the middle of the week forces the conclusion that the buying that has been done in the country cannot be purely speculative. The alternative is that it is due either to purchases on short account or for orders, and there is probably a little of both. We noted some time ago when the June deal first commenced, that these were shorts, and the course of the market since bears this out. It is held, however, that all the buying was not due to this reason, and as the firm of shippers who did a lot of it, besides contracting for a heavy stock of the make in the Belleville district are not generally reported to be in the short side, this contention is probably correct. The problem then is: Is it speculation or sales for future delivery? If the former, the prices are high; rather too high in fact, and on this account the argument that there are some good bona fide orders behind all this purchasing is equally acceptable. Besides this, we are now in the last week of June with the time fast approaching for the delivery of some of those 43s. sales, which fact no doubt has a good deal to do also with the high prices. As we noted last week, the prospect presented by the immediate future to the shippers who figured on this basis, is not exactly pleasant, and if it is true, as contended, that several of them have yet some covering to do before they are protected, the circumstance may act as a sustaining factor to prices. On the other hand it is claimed that for several of these short sales the seller has the whole month of July to fill in. Where circumstances of this sort apply there is more breathing time with a possibility of pulling out, but we apprehend that they rule only in the minority of cases. The cable is down on colored, which is an indication that the ratio between it and white is changing on the other side. In fact the majority expected it to do so before, and it is likely that white will be on a par with colored here shortly, if not above it, for the factories are turning more of it out than usual on account of the premium it has brought. Finest colored, 9 1-2c.; finest white, 9 1-4 to 9 3-8c.; fine goods, 8 7-8 to 9c.; under grades, 8 1-2 to 8 3-4c.; cable, white, 45s. 6d.; cable, colored, 48s.

The butter market is, if anything, a shade firmer. Further advices confirm the information we gave last week, and cite more free purchasing both of Townships and creamery in the country, and the fact has led to a material stiffening in holders' views. We understand that 20c. and over has been paid for the June make of one or two creameries, and 17c. for several good lots of Townships. These prices are equivalent to a 1-4 to 1-2c. more on spot in each case. In spite of the fact, however, the spot basis has not advanced to an equal extent, and 20c. is an outside price so far as actual spot transactions in creamery can be cited, while for Townships 17 to 18c. is the best that has been made, and that only in a picking up way, and not in the case of a straight lot. For Western goods 15 1-2 to 16c. has been asked, but buyers are not disposed to operate freely at these prices. In spite of these figures low offers are still being made over the cable to British buyers at figures which allow no margin at all considering first cost. No doubt the Britishers have booked quite a few of these tempting offers, and, if mail advices from Britain are correct, there is a strong inference that there is a pretty large short interest in June creamery as well as in June cheese. From present appearances also it looks as though they would have an equally uncomfortable time in filling their shorts; in fact, we know that sales have actually been made between dealers here, which, on the present basis of cost in the country, stand to lose the seller quite a good sum of money. This state of affairs, both in the case of cheese and butter, is only another exemplification of the harm that speculation does at times in interfering with strictly legitimate trading. It is benefiting the factorymen and farmer, however, and if it is at the expense of some of the shippers here they have only themselves to blame. MONTREAL Markets continued er is offering at even a lower figure than this.

Practically all the currants on the market are controlled by a well-known wholesale grocer, and he is doing all the business in them for the Province of Quebec at least.

Advices to brokers here say that there are very large stocks of old currants still held in first hands in London and New York.

The Retail Grocers' Association is making great preparations for its annual picnic, which takes place on August 19 to Highgate Springs. This is always one of the events of the season, and an enjoyable time is sure to be had.

Dealers here expect to have some definite information concerning the run of salmon on the Fraser river by the end of the present week. The run usually commences on the 28th.

It is reported that Fred. White, one of the partners in the firm of Regan, White & Co., at present in difficulties, has been offered an important position by Jno. Duncan & Co., which he will likely accept if it is finally decided to wind up the estate.

The Regan-White matter has not yet been settled, but a meeting is to be held this week, when a final decision will be arrived at. It is understood that two offers have been made by the firm, first 50c. and 5c. on the dollar, and latterly 60c., but that two of the largest creditors refuse to accept. In the case of one of these their decision is attributed to some personal difficulty between them and the debtors, and the general impression seems to be among the trade that the estate will be wound up. The meeting above referred to will decide the matter.

ONTARIO BANK.

The annual general meeting of the stockholders of this institution was held in its banking house in Toronto on Tuesday, the 20th day of June, 1893. Among those present were:

W. R. Miller (Montreal), Sir W. P. Howland, C.B., K.C.M.G., Judge Dennistoun, W. Glenney (Oshawa), Donald MacKay, C. S. Gzowski, jr., C. E. Hooper, Hon. J. C. Aikins, A. M. Smith, G. M. Rose, J. K. Macdonald, W. W. Keighley, E. B. Freeland, and others.

On motion Sir W. P. Howland, C.B., K.C.M.G., was called to the chair, and Mr. Holland was requested to act as secretary.

Messrs. J. K. Macdonald and C. S. Gzowski, jr., were appointed to act as scrutineers.

At the request of the chairman the secretary read the following report:

The directors beg to submit to the shareholders the thirty-sixth annual report and statement of the affairs of the bank for the year ending 31st May, 1893.

The net profits, after deducting charges of management, interest accrued upon deposits, and making provision for bad and doubtful debts, were..... $130,303 51
Profit and Loss (brought forward from 31st May, 1892)..... 15,001 96

$145,305 47

Which have been appropriated as follows:

Div. No. 70, 3½ per cent., paid 1st Dec. 1892..... $52,500 00
Div. No. 71, 3½ per cent., payable 1st June, 1893..... 52,500 00
Added to Rest..... 30,000 00
135,000 000

Balance of profits carried forward..... $ 10,305 47

The business of the Bank for the past year has been satisfactory, and as detailed in the balance sheet herewith shows substantial gains in every department. During the early months money was abundant at low rates and moderate in demand, followed later by a severe stringency in the neighboring Republic, entailing unusual responsibilities and anxiety upon those entrusted with the conduct of monetary institutions. Although Canada has not so far been affected to any material extent, the close relations existing between the countries will, for some time at least, call for caution until their business and currency are placed upon a more satisfactory basis.

In Ontario and Quebec the crops were disappointing, the yield falling short of what was expected, while the prices realized were lower than for many years, the effect of which has been to limit the means of the agricultural community, and trade has been somewhat restricted in consequence. It is gratifying, however, to know that the mercantile community has in the meantime pursued a conservative policy, and affairs generally are now on a sounder footing than for years.

The lumber trade, in which a large proportion of the bank's means is interested, was, as anticipated in the last report, very profitable. Prices were remunerative and the demand steady. The cut this year is even larger, and from present indications we have every reason to anticipate as successful a season as the past.

The usual inspection of the branches were continued during the year, and your Directors have to express their satisfaction at the manner in which the officers of the bank have discharged their duties. Respectfully submitted,
W. P. HOWLAND,
President.

C. HOLLAND,
General Manager.

Ontario Bank, Toronto, 31st May, 1893.

After explanations with reference to the position and business of the Bank during the year, Sir W. P. Howland moved, seconded by Mr. A. M. Smith that the report be adopted, which was duly carried.

The usual resolutions thanking the President and Directors were then passed.

The scrutineers appointed at the meeting subsequently reported the following gentlemen duly elected as directors for the ensuing year, viz.: Sir W. P. Howland, C.B., K.C.M.G., Donald Mackay, A. M. Smith, G. M. Rose, Hon. C. F. Fraser, G. R. Cockburn, M.P., and Hon. J. C. Aikins. The new board met the same afternoon, when Sir W. P. Howland was elected President, and A. M. Smith, Esq., Vice-President, by unanimous votes.

General Manager.

M. Brulle communicates to the Paris Academy of Sciences a ready plan that he has discovered for testing whether or no butter be adulterated with oleomargarine or any animal fat. It depends upon the fact that butter, when thus adulterated, hardens when heated with nitric acid, the degree of hardening being in proportion to the quantity of the adulterant present. We know of a simpler plan, says a contemporary, the condition being that there should be mice in the cupboard. Of two portions of butter on the same shelf, one being pure and the other adulterated, the mice will devour the former, leaving the latter untouched.

THE INDIGO TRADE.

The next indigo auctions in London have been fixed to commence on the 10th proximo, and that the "prompt" should be on the 6th October next. The declarations announced amounted to 6,700 chests. This quantity consists of 1,525 chests of Bengal and Oude descriptions, 3,720 chests of Kurpah, 190 chests of Madras, 200 chests of Manilla, and 1,065 chests of Bombay figs, etc. It is not expected that this quantity will be greatly augmented by further declarations, and it is unlikely that more than 7,500 chests will be catalogued. The total declarations in the corresponding period in 1892 were 3,050 chests, and in 1891 they were 7,300 chests. Stocks in warehouses at present are 13,976 chests; in 1892 they were 9,733 chests, and 14,752 chests in 1891. A very large proportion of the present stock—variously estimated at from 30 to 50 per cent. of the total consists of low and more or less adulterated indigo. When considering the statistical position of the article this fact must not be lost sight of, as it has never before occurred in the history of the trade. It is true that spurious indigo has before now (notably fifteen or sixteen years ago) found its way to this market, but the quantity then sent was infinitesimal compared with that at present in stock.

VARIETIES OF PEPPER.

The following brief description of different varieties of pepper is from the Merchants' Review:

Capsicum or Red Pepper.—The variety of capsicum usually found in commerce is in large withered and dark red pods, always broken and the pulp dried up. It comes principally from the East Indies, where it is a native, in bales of between two and three hundred weight. In taste it is very fiery and acrimonious. Its principal use is to make cayenne pepper; also for all kinds of pickling, and it is one of the necessary ingredients of the different piquant table sauces, besides being largely used in curry powder. The plant has been acclimatized in some of our Southern States, and a superior quality of the article is produced in Louisiana. Various species are imported, often as pickles in vinegar. The plant has a branchy stem, rising about two feet high. The leaves are long, narrow, and of a dark green color. White flowers bloom in June and July, and are succeeded by pods, varying in shape and color, some being long, others short, some round, and others again heart-shaped, while the color is either red or yellow.

Cherry Pepper.—This is a native of the West Indies. It is very similar in appearance to the East Indian species, and is only distinguished by the different shape of the pods, which are sometimes in the form of a cherry, sometimes heart shaped, bell shaped, or angular. Their color is the same as that of capsicum. Both of these peppers are annuals.

Bell Pepper.—The bell pepper is a biennial, a native of the East Indian Archipelago: it produces larger pods than either of the above mentioned varieties. It may be transplanted with safety into our northern climate in summer, and set out in the open garden, but it requires a place in the hot house in the winter season. The green pods of all these varieties are used for pickling. Those of the last are generally preferred, being not only larger, but having the skin more pulpy and tender.

Bird Pepper.—There are many species of this genus, differing from each other in bearing fruit, varying in size, shape and color; but they have all in a certain degree the same pungent qualities, the smallest possessing them with the greatest intensity. They are natives of most of the tropical regions, but are most abundant and most used in the Western hemisphere. Those grown on the southeast coast of Africa, especially Natal, are considered the finest, richest in flavor and most pungent. They are cut up and pounded by the natives and mixed with a little salt, then packed in air-tight tins of about sixty pounds each, and in that shape are exported. The true Natal cayenne is comparatively scarce. In the West Indies, and in some parts of South America this kind of pepper forms either solid, or when reduced to powder, an ingredient of almost every dish. A mixture of sliced cucumber, shallots, or onions cut very fine, a little lime juice and Madeira wine, with a few pods of bird pepper, well mashed and mixed with the liquor, is reckoned an unfailing stimulant to the appetite in the West Indies, and is called mandram.

Long Pepper.—A native of Bengal, Malabar and Java. The roots are perennial; the stems are shrubby, round, smooth, branched, slender and climbing, but do not rise to any considerable height. The leaves differ much in size and form; they are commonly heart-shaped, pointed, entirely smooth, nerved, of a dark green color, and stand alternately upon foot-stalks. The flowers are small and produced in short dense terminal spikes, which are nearly cylindrical. The berries or grains are very small and lodged in a pulpy matter, like those of the black pepper, and in appearance greatly resemble the seed of the common chick weed. They are at first green, and become a dark red or gray black as they ripen. Their odor is faintly aromatic, but in taste they are exceedingly hot. This pepper is most pungent when gathered in its unripe state just before full maturity; it is afterwards dried in the sun and becomes of a dark gray color. It is used principally in its crude state as a flavoring for pickles, and has great preservative qualities. It is said that any kind of pickles whose vinegar has been boiled with a quantity of long pepper will be better preserved and retain their crispness longer than those pickles in the ordinary manner without its use.

Guinea Pepper.—This pepper consists of two species of ammomum, found principally on the west coast of Africa, particularly Sierra Leone, from which place it is generally imported into Europe. There is scarcely any sale for it in this country, it being so comparatively little known. It is also cultivated in the northern part of the East Indies, where it is extensively used as an ingredient of curry powder. It is a powerful stimulant and a cordial, and is generally used for the same purposes as cardamoms.

SHE MADE MEN WEARY.

The grocer's new boy threw his delivery basket down in the corner with an injured air and remarked that the woman who had just moved into No. 37, around the corner, was a regular crank.

"How do you mean?" asked the grocer.

"First thing she asked me," said the boy, "was whether we had any nice fresh eggs. They must be very, very fresh, she said, because she wanted 'em to put in cake."

"I told her eggs were doubtful this hot weather, but we had some very, very fresh egg plants, and how would they do?"

"She said they wouldn't do at all; and then she asked me if we had any corn that was as green as I was, and the ears as well developed as mine."

"I said 'yes'm.'"

"Well," she says, "I want some for dinner, so bring half a dozen as soon as you can."

"As soon as we can?" says I. "Do you want it canned?"

"She said she did not want it canned. Then she began to ask about water-melons. Did we have some that was ripe? I told her 'yes'm.'"

"Was they on ice?"

"No'm, they was on the sidewalk."

"Would you put half of one on ice and bring it around at 6 o'clock?"

"We would."

"Would you have the seeds taken out?"

"With pleasure."

"All right. Did we keep vichy water in syphons?"

"Yes'm."

"Was that on ice?"

"No. But I told her we'd put half a syphon on ice and bring it around at 6 o'clock with the bubbles taken out if she'd say the word."

"Then she said she guessed everything we had around here was nice and fresh, but there was such a thing as being too fresh, and she believed she'd try the other store, so I needn't bother. Yes, sir, that woman was a crank."

"Eddie," said the grocery man, as he slowly rolled the white paper around a pound of cheese, "my nephew will be here next week from Germany, and I am going to give him your job. Meanwhile I'll try to get along without any little boy!"

"You'll have to," said Eddie, "cause I'm goin' to leave."—Ex.

ST. JOHN, N. B., MARKETS.

ST. JOHN, N.B., June 29, 1893.

That trade seems less brisk than usual is the opinion expressed pretty freely among dealers, though no particular reason is given why there should be a falling off in the volume of business. We hear complaints that it is very difficult to collect accounts.

Sugar—Another upward movement in sugar this week is reported at the refineries and dealers have to advance accordingly. Granulated is selling at $5\frac{1}{2}$ to $5\frac{3}{4}$ c., extra C $4\frac{3}{4}$ to $4\frac{1}{2}$ c., yellows \$4.30 to $4\frac{1}{2}$ c.

Rice—The market seems well stocked with very little selling and prices depend upon quality. We quote $3\frac{1}{4}$ to $3\frac{3}{4}$ c.

Dried Fruit—Off-stalk Valencias are quoted at 5 to $5\frac{1}{2}$ c., layers 6 to $6\frac{1}{2}$ c., prunes 7 to $7\frac{1}{2}$ c., dates $4\frac{1}{2}$ to 5c.

Butter—There is a fair demand with prices steady at 16 to 19c.

Cheese—The market is some easier and while plenty are offering, stocks do not get large; prices are $10\frac{1}{4}$ to 11c.

Eggs—Market steady at 9 to 10c.

Beans—Dull at $1.60 to $1.70.

Have you anything in stock you want to clear out before the Fall campaign? Have you any lines you want to make a run on? The way to sell them is by telling the retailers you have them. The way to tell the retailers is by advertising in THE CANADIAN GROCER. Before the traveller has left your office the advertisement has had an interview with the probable buyer. The buyer may be out of town when the traveller calls, but he has THE GROCER in his pocket. The country dealer may be located "much out of the way," and may be busy when the traveller calls, but is always at home to THE GROCER.

Have you a "Letter Order Department" of your business? If you have not you are losing money every day. Have you ever figured out the net gain in favor of letter orders? Wholesale dry goods men pay great attention to letter orders on which they claim considerable extra profit. THE CANADIAN GROCER is the only medium that will call forth letter orders.

WHERE TASTE RESIDES.

Strictly speaking, with the tip of the tongue you cannot really taste at all. If you put a drop of oil of bitter almonds on that part of the mouth you will find that it produces no effect of any sort. You only taste it when it begins slowly to diffuse itself and reaches the true tasting region in the middle distance.

But if you put a little mustard or cayenne on the same part you will find that it bites you immediately—the experiment should be tried sparingly—while if you put it lower down in the mouth you will swallow it almost without noticing the pungency of the stimulant.

The reason is that the tip of the tongue is supplied only with the nerves of touch, not nerves of taste proper. They belong to a totally different main branch, and they go to a different centre in the brain, together with the very similar threads which supply the nerves of smell for mustard or pepper.

That is why the smell and taste of these pungent substances are so much alike, as everybody must have noticed, a good sniff at a mustard pot producing almost the same irritating effects as an incautious dose.—Cincinnati Tribune.

SPECULATION IN CLOVES.

Cloves have for many years been a favorite article with speculators, but of late, principally owing to the large accumulations of stock in the warehouses, they have been severely left alone. Left to the purely legitimate demand, Zanzibar cloves fell last year to about the lowest price on record, viz., 2 3-4d. per lb. The lowness of the price induced speculation, and a small syndicate was formed to buy up the article. Operations were conducted on a large scale, and considerable quantities changed hands at continually rising prices. During April and part of May Zanzibar cloves for June-August deliveries were quoted 4 1-16d. per lb. The present spot quotation for this description is 3 5-8d. to 3 1-2d. per lb. It should be mentioned that Zanzibar cloves are practically the clove market, although there are both Amboyna and Penang sorts to be had in comparatively small quantities. The present stock of Zanzibar cloves in the warehouses is 48,481 packages, against 35,000 at the corresponding period of 1892. The deliveries for the first twenty-one weeks of this year amount to 7,483 packages, against 8,289 packages during the same time last year. It will thus be seen that the consumption has sensibly fallen off in consequence of enhanced prices, and that the present stock is equal to about three years' requirements, according to the published deliveries to date. Recent advices received from Zanzibar state that the next crop promised to be large, but owing to the lateness of the rains, fears were entertained that they might have a damaging rather than a favorable effect. Clove cultivation in Zanzibar appears to suffer considerably from insufficiency of available labor, especially since slavery has been more or less abolished. It is stated on reliable authority that large estates are falling out of cultivation, although this may be caused as much by the low prices so long current as by want of laborers. However, the fact remains that the Zanzibar clove crop of 1892 has fallen short of that of 1891 by some 50,000 frasilas (a frasila equals about 85 lbs.), while that of 1890 was upwards of 100,000 frasilas better than that of 1891. The present quotation for Amboyna cloves is 4 1-2 to 5 3-4d. per lb., and for Penang 6d. to 1s. per lb. It will, therefore, be seen at once that Zanzibars at 3 3-8 to 3 1-2d. per lb. are sure to be most in favor with consumers.—Manchester Guardian.
